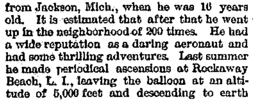
The building will be 100 by 100 feet on the ground and 120 feet high. The roof will be composed of a thatch of native grasses, and all the entrances and projections will be built of baled hay. The interior will be divided into sections for the accommodation of exhibits from various counties in the Blue Grass league, the organization that has the enterprise in hand, and from Montana, the two Dakotas and Washington. It is believed that the structure will compare well with similar and preceding buildings of the same general nature, and instead of there being competition between it and the corn palace at Sioux City it is stated that the managers of each will try to have visitors to their exhibition visit the other.



THE BLUE GRASS PALACE.

The decorations of the Blue Grass palace will be elaborate, and will consist largely of paintings of cattle and pasture and running waters and shady trees. The palace will be thrown open Aug. 22, and its cost will be $30,000.

Near Hogan, Mont., is a large deposit of petrified clams. There are also other beds in that section of the territory.

[THACKERAY.

THE scheme of a wealthy English syndicate to purchase control of the salt industry in this country now seems likely to prove a failure. This result may be attributed to various causes, prominent among which are the discovery of large salt fields, hitherto overlooked in Kansas, the unexpectedly large productivity of our resources in Louisiana and the timidity of American capitalists in the face of popular hostility to "combines" of this character.

We are glad to notice the impending collapse of this scheme. That it is due to natural causes which have many times hitherto, in similar nefarious undertakings, worked the destruction of their espousers must not make us blind to the necessity of some other protection against the machinations of unscrupulous capacity, industry, perseverance and genius. For many centuries these "trusts" were unheard of, and after their power and possibilities were discerned by the few, they remained hedged in, confined, kept down by causes similar to those at work against the success of this foreign mushroom.

The unparalleled achievements of organization in every department of human industry and endeavor have familiarized the public mind with the stupendous forces set in motion by enormous aggregations of mind and money. Their powers have hitherto been largely directed toward the subjugation of nature and the consequent amelioration of mankind. An enlightened selfishness has been the mainspring of the complicated machinery devoted simultaneously to the aggrandizement of the few and the material improvement of the masses. But to-day instance after instance presents itself where the knowledge of the power of organization is employed only for the purposes of robbery freed from the perils of the ordinary highwayman.

Toward this form of organization every good citizen of necessity is implacably hostile. It behooves thinking men to devise some all powerful obstacle to their success. When organization reaches such perfection that it can embrace every industry of every kind in every quarter of the globe, control the production in that industry, lower prices till opposition is crushed, then raise prices far beyond the cost of production and a reasonable profit added, then organization in that direction is a public menace to be shorn of its power as soon as possible. We are glad to see the efforts of the attorney-general of our state against the sugar trust and confidently await their ultimate success. English common law made conspiracies against trade unlawful. If in adopting so much of the common law as suited our institutions and requirements our forefathers did not adopt this particular feature of it, then it is high time that our own legislature, and congress too, if necessary, take affirmative action looking to the downfall of these enemies of humanity. Great reforms come slowly; agitation is the only way to get at the best thoughts of the best thinkers. So let us discuss, agitate, urge action, and in the near future the "trust" will be but an historical industrial nightmare.

(Special Correspondence to THE TIMES.)

News has reached this place of the death of Geo. W. Boughton, a resident of Novesta, Mich. and a former resident of this town, also of Fulton He died July 23, of paralysis. His body was buried at Morrisville beside his wife's.

S. S. Crandall of Cortland has purchased Lawyer Ludington's house and lot in this place.

C. H. David, wife and daughter of Fulton have been visiting relatives in town.

A brief outline of the school law suit refered to in our last items is this: "Miss Minnie Keisinger of this town was engaged to teach the school at Kasoag last spring at $7 per week. She taught two weeks and was discharged. The trustee visited the school the second week and according to his testimony he saw nothing good in the school, no order and no control. The school commissioner Miss Griffin also visited the school and claimed all was disorder. She considered her incompetent to teach this school but no effort was made to annul her license. On Friday the trustee visited the school and requested her to resign which she refused to do. She affirmed the school was doing well under the circumstances and would have good order.

The school has the name of being a hard school. During the last week she taught, this trustee cut six beech gads for her to use in school, which she declined. He also entered the school room during school hours and repaired the seats which made a noise. When she was at home in Parish on Saturday the trustee went to her boarding place and obtained the keys and roll of the school. The next Monday she demanded the roll and keys of the trustee and was refused. He telling her she was a teacher of the past.

She went to the school house and finding it locked she staid until after school hours, then left. She learned that another teacher, a Miss Ball was [illegible] [illegible] Miss Keisinger and one for the trustee. The next trial was before Justice Baxter who gave judgement against the Kasoag district for $66 and costs which was for the whole eight weeks she was engaged to teach. The judgement is just. Miss Keisinger has taught many terms of school with good success, is a graduate of Mexico Academy and is a young lady highly esteemed.

This is a good lesson to all school officers not to be hasty in discharging teachers especially when teaching according to the best approved methods as Miss Keisinger was. Beech gads are a relic of barbarism.

Hon. Henry Clay Howe Dead.

Shortly after noon last Sabbath day it was announced that the Hon. Henry C. Howe had died at his home on Fourth street in our village. His age was 56 years.

His disease was paresis or progressive paralysis. Mr. Howe had been sick for nearly a year and for a great part of the time unable to attend to the affairs of his business. Dr. Lake was the home physician. Lately he had been under treatment at Syracuse with Dr. Didema. A week ago last Saturday he was taken to Clifton Springs. A consultation was held and he was then brought to his home. He was unconscious for several days preceeding his death.

In the death of Mr. Howe we all lose a dear friend and this community will deeply feel the loss of one of her ablest men. A man who has always given his aid to whatever was good. Liberal in his ideas, his aim was for progress in every way. He has passed away in the zenith of his strength and no one could have thought, who saw him something over a year ago, that there was a man stronger or younger for his years. He was well preserved and had just attained the beginning of a greater usefulness. The forces which he had been gathering for years were ready to be used for all mankind.

Some men are naturally public men, whose lives are given for the benefit of their fellow men. Such a one seems to have been Mr. Howe's. While others toiled for wealth, he seems to have been thoroughly content with work only, and it was work that redounded to the benefit of this community. As long as there was sufficient for the needs of the body, that was enough and the rest was for everybody.

We know many notable men who although strong in their community while young men, yet were not known generally until late in life—after 50 years. Such an one was doubtless Mr. Howe, for all who knew him were aware of his growing strength. Strong physically and strong mentally—given to much work—each year found him in a higher plain of capability.

His political career was in its infancy and had his life been spared us with its natural vigorousness, we might have expected large results during the coming twenty years. He had the very best of training. Born in Granby in 1832, he had the usual teaching of farmer lads. He entered Falley Seminary in 1849. Then he went to Seneca Falls Academy. From there he went to Hamilton College where he graduated with honor in 1858. He then studied law and was admitted to practice. Harvey Townsend who was then a notable figure in the Oswego county bar, saw the possibilities of the young man and took him in as a partner in the business under the firm name of Townsend & Howe. This partnership continued for six or seven years. He then withdrew from the firm and was alone for a time. After a few years, he formed another partnership with Arvin Rice under the name of Howe & Rice which continued to the time of his disease. Mr. Howe was a close student of the law and his legal friends always feared the depth of his research on closely contested legal points. In local politics he was prominent. Of the honors of office he cared little but was always anxious to see his friends carry the day as the records of many a hard won battle at caucus or convention will show. He was elected supervisor in 1866, '67, '69 and '70 and served as chairman of the board in '69 and '70. He was elected to the state assembly in 1871, '85, '86 and at various times took quite a prominent part in that body on many of the leading questions of the day. The member from Oswego county was pretty generally known and respected for his opinions. He served as chairman on two of the leading committees. As chairman of the Judiciary committee he helped to untangle some of the meshes of our code.

He was the recognized leader of the half breed element of this part of the county. His most notable struggle was in the election for U. S. Senator, which resulted in sending Mr. Hiscock to the Senate. It ranks in importance to the famous battle of of the 306 and the Conkling fight at Albany. Mr. Howe's band was small—only eleven, but he held them firm, He saw farther than most men, and during those anxious days, when friends and foes alike were using every power under heaven to turn him from his position—he still held to the work. Everybody knows the result—how there was a dead lock—neither Miller or Morton could be elected although but one vote was needed—how suddenly there was a turn and the Morton men went over to Hiscock. It was a wonderful fight when one thinks of it, how those eleven men held together when only one vote was needed. Mr. Howe was given great praise at the time and was deserving in a high degree. Had he lived we should doubtless have seen him occupying high and honorably won positions.

Mr. Howe leaves surviving him a wife and three children. He was one of seven brothers, but two of whom are living, the Hon. Abram Howe of this village and Dr. C. B. Howe of Seneca Falls. Funeral services will be held at his late residence on Fourth street at 4 p. m. this afternoon, the Rev. Dr. Rankin officiating.

[illegible] by Secretary Noble of a commission of three to inquire into the conduct of the Pension Bureau during the past year confirms what I wrote you just after Commissioner Tanner's appointment of the bitter feeling between himself and the Secretary. The principal objection urged upon the President against the Corporal's appointment was that he would be "too liberal." It appears now however that he had developed a great talent for simple blundering.

When he appointed George B. Squires who was removed in disgrace at the end of eight weeks his private secretary, he followed the error by the scarcely better mistake of appointing his daughter, an inexperience school girl, his private secretary.

Another personal appointment of his was that of Harry Phillips a Brooklyn man, as chief of a division, Phillip's appointment was objected to by Secretary Noble on the ground that he secured without endorsers except the Commissioner himself. At last the appointment was made and charged to the Commissioner. That is only a little over two months ago, and Phillips is already implicated in the re-rating frauds that Secretary Noble's commission is investigating. The re-rating frauds that are the principal subject of the present investigation are among the most daring swindels ever perpetrated. About a dozen Pension office clerks that have been drawing pensions for years got together for mutual benefit, and agreed to apply for re-rating from the date of discharge. The combine invited prominent Grand Army men to join them, but for some reason only reached a half a dozen men and they were in government employ.

Re-rating is authorized by law only "when manifest error" is found to have occurred. These men were old and experienced clerks in the Pension Bureau, and had never before discovered that there was any error, under the law, in their ratings. Still by the combination, and by literally pressing in the merits of each others claims, this combination managed, every man of it to secure from $2,500 to $4,000 each. No claim was rejected and while in several instances, six months or a year passes before claims are reached for consideration after they are filed in the Pension Bureau, these claims were all rushed through in two weeks after they were filed. The champagne suppers of the victors could not be kept quiet, and the press soon got possession of the facts. The exposure followed.

For some reason Commissioner Tanner paid no attention to the matter, and it remained for the Secretary to recognize the scandal by discharging the members of the Medical Branch of the Bureau, and by the appoint of this commission. Nobody dare accuse Commissioner Tanner of dishonesty, or of a guilty knowledge of these frauds, but his opposition to the appointment of the commission places him in a most unfortunate light. The Secretary is also damaged in the opinion of many by the breach between him and the Commissioner. Some look upon it as an attempt to retract the liberal policy toward the soldiers. Such is the substance of Governor Foraker's dispatch to Coporal Tanner this week. The newspapers who dare talk are full of the matter; only a few overzealous Republican newspapers of the musty order failing to recognize the importance of the trouble.

The census work is shaping itself and Mr. Porter's desire to have the work limited to what is legitimately included in the bill to provide for the work becomes evident. In many branches the experts have already begun work. The most difficult schedule to arrange appears to be that of manufacturers. A table of this subject will be presented to Superintendent Porter next week, and by him will be submitted to various free trade authorities, as well as to manufacturers with protective tendencies. The other divisions will shortly present their definite plans for work, and by October progress may be expected.

The secret service, that branch of the government that the small boy who faithfully reads his bloody bones nickel novels, is given to admiring, is about to have a new chief. It is probable that the new man will be Thomas Furlong, a city railroad detective. Russell Harrison is actively supporting him. His appointment has been delayed thus far by petitions sent in against it by labor organizations, including a letter from Grand Master Powderly, protesting against his appointment, on account of his work during the St. Louis strikes. It is stated to-day however, that Mr. Powderly has formerly withdrawn all opposition, and the protests are cancelled.

[illegible] OTHER AT TROY.

Description of the Two Structures—[illegible] at Troy Cost $200,000, and Is Said to Be the Finest Crematory in the Country.

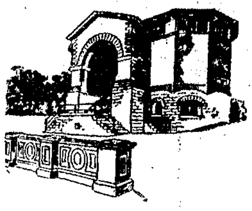
Cremation is coming more into favor every day, and the number of crematories being erected throughout the country is on the increase. The first one erected in the United States was at Washington, Pa., and was built by the late Dr. Lemoyne. There are others near New York at Buffalo, Lancaster, Detroit, St. Louis, Swinburne's Island, Philadelphia, Chicago, Cincinnati and Troy, N. Y. It is the last two which deserve our special attention.

The crematory at Cincinnati stands upon an eminence on Clifton heights, near the city, west of Burnet woods. The project was first entertained in 1880 by several prominent citizens of Cincinnati, who acted independently of each other. Among the directors of the company was Mr. Benn Pitman. It was not, however, until October, 1884, that the charter was obtained, and not until the spring of 1886 that the building was begun. It was dedicated on Sunday, Nov. 4, 1888.

The entire cost of land and building was $34,000. The basement of the building is of Indiana stone, the superstructure of rough limestone and brick, intended to be eventually covered with ivy.

On entering the vestibule one passes into the chapel, furnished in handsome oak, with seating capacity of three or four hundred. A handsome pulpit and oaken catafalque occupy one end. The remains, first taken into the basement, are placed upon an elevator and raised to the catafalque in the chapel above. When the services are finished, the body is again lowered to the basement. It is then taken to the preparing room and wrapped in pure white linen bands. It is then placed upon the iron "cradle" ready to be rolled into the retort. This retort is heated to the almost unimaginable temperature of 1,800 degs. to 2,000 degs Fahrenheit, the heating to this height occupying fully four or five hours.

But one must not imagine that his sensitive feelings will be shocked by looking into a fiery furnace. By a happy idea the inside of the retort is painted with carbonate of magnesia, which does not become incandescent even by this enormous heat, but remains white. The appearance is simply as if one's friend was being rolled into the seclusion of a snow white vault.

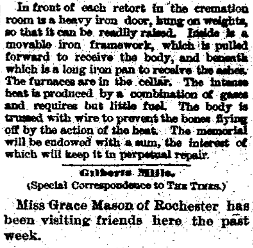


THE CINCINNATI CREMATORY.

In about one hour and a half this temperature reduces the body, and all that remains is a few handfuls of pure, pearl like ashes. These can be placed in an appropriate urn, to be taken away by the friends, or placed in a niche in the chapel.

It does not throw any discredit on the Cincinnati crematory when we say that it is not so fine as the one at Troy, considering that there is a difference of $166,000 in the amount of money expended on each. The magnificent crematory at Oakland cemetery, Troy, cost the good round sum of $200,000. It has been erected by Mr. William Earl, one of Troy's most prominent citizens, to the memory of his son. It stands 300 feet above the level of the Hudson, in one of the handsomest cemeteries in the country. A magnificent view of the surrounding country is obtained from the portico. The town of Cohoes lies to the north, and farther down the river lies the city of Troy, while way in the distance toward the south can be seen the top of the state capitol at Albany.

The crematory has been designed to serve a double purpose. On rainy days funeral services of those who are to be buried will be held in the chapel, and through the kindness of Mr. Earl bodies can be cremated at any time at the cost of the materials used. The crematory is built mostly of granite, and is 150 feet in length and 70 feet wide, with a tower nearly 100 feet high. It stands a short distance from the gate of the cemetery, and is built on the verge of a precipice on a foundation of solid rock. It is in the Romanesque style, and the tall tower is visible for many miles. An open portico connects the chapel with the tower, which is supported by polished granite columns. The chapel is of good size and connects on either side with two rooms, the one on the west containing the retorts, with the furnaces below it. The one on the east is used for the preparation of the body before incineration.



THE TROY CREMATORY.

The interior of the building is fitted up elegantly. The floors are laid in highly polished tile and the walls are of tile and close grained red Carlisle sand stone. Much of the material used was imported. The altar is made of Italian marble and Mexican onyx. Back of the altar at the northern end are three stained glass windows with a figure of Christ in the center and adoring angels on the sides. Near one of the walls is a bronze bust of Gardner Earl, Mr. Earl's dead son, to whose memory the crematory has been erected, and who died two years ago. At the southern end of the chapel are three niches for urns holding the ashes of the Earl family, each niche to be inclosed by a handsome bronze tablet, while below is a crypt for the body of any member who may not want to be cremated.

In front of each retort in the cremation room is a heavy iron door, hung on weights, so that it can be readily raised. Inside is a movable iron framework, which is pulled forward to receive the body, and beneath which is a long iron pan to receive the ashes. The furnaces are in the cellar. The intense heat is produced by a combination of gases and requires but little fuel. The body is trussed with wire to prevent the bones flying off by the action of the heat. The memorial will be endowed with a sum, the interest of which will keep it in perpetual repair.

THE RACES AT BUFFALO.

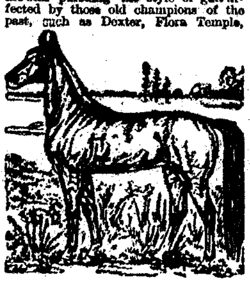
UNUSUAL INTEREST TAKEN IN THE HAMLIN-WILKES MATCH.

Convention of Knights of Pythias in the Queen City—Will Buffalo's Hostlesses Succeed in Their Endeavors?—Sensational Aerial Performances Promised at the Fair.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

BUFFALO, July 30.—The grand circuit trotting races begin in this city a week from to-day and already the preliminary excitement of the meeting is making itself felt in town.

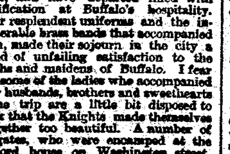
There is a boom in trotting this year. It begins to look as if the boast of owners and admirers of thoroughbred horses that running races will soon make trotting meetings a thing of the past, has reached the ears of those equines who are still pursuing the style of gait affected by those old champions of the past, such as Dexter, Flora Temple, George M. Patchen and others, and that they have made up their minds this year to expose the libel in all its naked untruthfulness.



BELLE HAMLIN 2:13 3-4.

At Minneapolis on the 3d of the month, a little three-year-old named Axtell came smilingly to the front and almost made the watches of the time-keepers stop short with surprise, by sailing around the track in the unprecedented three-year-old time of 2:15 1-2. This only started the trotting ball of '89 fairly in motion. I need not assure those of your readers who are interested in horse matters that the entire month of July up to date has been filled with astonishing trotting performances. The races at Detroit last week were simply bewildering in the number of speedy performances that were made, and the meeting at Cleveland this week draws together a phenomenal lot of trotters.

When it is known, as it is to-day, that Buffalo is not only to have all the famous horses of the season here next week, but a special match for ten thousand dollars between Belle Hamlin and Harry Wilkes besides, it is no wonder that the circuit meeting is looked forward to with extraordinary interest. The excitement shows itself in the sudden blossoming out of "rooms to rent" on the chief thoroughfares and in the preparations which the hotels are making to accommodate an unusual number of guests. I am glad to be able to give in this letter, pictures of the two champions of the race set down for Aug. 8. The betting will probably be slightly in favor of Harry Wilkes, through the fact that his record is a shade better than that of Belle Hamlin.



HARRY WILKES 2:13 1-2.

I do not propose to attempt the hazardous task of offering "tips" upon this great trotting event; all I can say is "may the best horse win." The railroads intend to run special excursion trains for the match, and I suppose the crowds will be enormous. Bell Hamlin's record is 2:13 3-4. The record of Harry Wilkes is 2:13 1-2. There couldn't be a much more closely matched pair, could there? Harry Wilkes is said to have reached the driving park in this city at a late hour yesterday afternoon. He has come here, a week in advance of the race, for the purpose of becoming acclimated. He is to be driven by "Gen." Turner, a veteran in the sulky, who, I am told, held the ribbons on flyers over this historic race course as far back as in the sixties. I almost forgot to mention in connection with the wonderful three-year-old Axtell, that he is entered in the 2:23 race set down for Wednesday, the second day of the meeting.

The Knights of Pythias have held a state convention here during the past week, and have departed filled with gratification at Buffalo's hospitality. Their resplendent uniforms and the innumerable brass bands that accompanied them, made their sojourn in the city a round of unfailing satisfaction to the youths and maidens of Buffalo. I fear that some of the ladies who accompanied their husbands, brothers and sweethearts on the trip are a little bit disposed to think that the Knights made themselves altogether too beautiful. A number of delegates, who were encamped at the Stafford house on Washington street, seemed to discover early in the proceedings that the tall business buildings opposite that tavern were populated by an army of comely young women, and dress parades and serenades were given in that vicinity with needless frequency. The funniest part of it was that the Knights seemed to forget that the front windows of the rooms in the hotel occupied by their female relatives, commanded a perfect view of the windows across the street from which the Buffalo damsels were wont to flirt.

A strong effort is being made by the hotel men of Buffalo to secure the holding of one or both of the political state conventions here in September. This is a quiet move, but it is in earnest. The hotel men have grown weary of waiting for action by any of the business organizations and propose to see what they can do by themselves. A private meeting for this purpose was held at the Niagara hotel the other evening.

The sad death of Professor Hogan, who was lost in an experimental trip of the Campbell air ship, has left the [illegible] of the Buffalo [illegible] at sea, so far as the promised aerial performances are concerned. [illegible] are, however, I am told, pending with two [illegible] who [illegible] a drop from an [illegible] height [illegible] a single [illegible].

Cheese Market Report.

AT UTICA.

UTICA, July 29.

The cheese market here to-day was decidedly slow. Many salesmen went to the circus, the weather was hot and muggy, and buyers were apparently indifferent until just at the close, when they raised their 8c. bids ⅛@¼c. The ruling is off ⅛c., but the top is off ¼c. as it was found that two or three lots were promised 8½c. last week. Hot weather is said to affect the arrivals in New York, and the cheese now being marketed shows the influence of the weather to a greater or less extent. Buyers were disposed to be very cautious, and to keep within the line of safety if possible. Sales are not so large as they would have been if one of the heaviest buyers had not been absent from the board. But they exceed those of last year or year before, and furnish some evidence that the production is heavier. No better prices are looked for on July cheese, and salesmen will be glad if prices do not go lower. The transactions were as follows:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
1	100	7½
63	6,750	7⅝
14	1,525	7¾
8	831	7⅞
27	2,453	8c.
23	3,681	8¼
6	795	8¼
146	15,058
	2,572	Com.
Total	17,630

Ruling price 7⅝c. Transactions one year ago 16,023 boxes, ruling price 8¼c. Two years ago, 13,500, boxes; ruling price 9¼c.

There were sales of 80 packages creamery butter part at 15¾@18@20c. and part consigned.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, July 29.

Cheese—There was little change in the condition of the market to-day from that shown last week; the market was rather more dull and slower There is rather more difference shown between white and colored stock, the latter leading by fully ¼c. The ruling price is the same as a week ago, 7½c., but rather more pronounced. Upon the average factories have sold off to about July 10. Another week will see the cheese made during the hottest part of the month disposed of, when dairymen will feel a little more independent and will hope to see an improvement in the market. The home trade is not quite as brisk as the export trade, but both paid the extreme prices of the day. Following are the transactions:

27	1,914	7¾
18	1,651	8c.
17	951	Com.
123	8,614
Farm dairy	1,207
Total	9,821

Farm Dairies—There was more than the usual amount of cheese sold on the morning market, being 1,207 boxes, at prices ranging at 7½@7¾c.

Butter—There were 47 packages of creamery butter sold at 16c., and 14 packages farm dairy at 16@17c.

AT FULTON.

About twenty factories were represented at this market Monday evening with 2,167 boxes of cheese, which sold at 7⅝c. to 7⅞c.

The TORTURES OF DESPAIR

Can be no worse than the agony of a man or woman troubled with Sick Headache. The terrible pain; the nausea; the lack of all interest in life; the disgust with everything and everybody; the world can afford no pleasure to any one when suffering from Sick Headache.

Why have Doctors never been able to cure this fearful trouble?

Because they have never discovered the right thing!

Have they tried?

Yes, for hundreds of years.

But a Chemist of Troy, N. Y., discovered the remedy, and the remedy that will cure in EVERY CASE arising from a deranged stomach.

Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders

Go right to the Seat of the trouble—the Stomach. They are purely vegetable, and contain no narcotics. They act with wonderful promptness and never leave any bad after-effect.

Phillip Phillips, the "Singing Pilgrim," says of them:—"I cannot tell you how glad I am to get something that relieves my wife of her headaches."

Rev. George F. Pentecost, D. D., says:—"I have received many benedictions from those to whom I have given these powders."

The late Rev. C. P. Sheldon, says:—"They are a wonderful remedy, and all they claim to be."

A SAMPLE

of these wonderful Powders will be sent FREE to any sufferer from this terrible affliction, or they can be procured of all reputable druggists at [illegible]

We will [illegible] free of charge, show cards and samples to any druggist who will keep the card in his window and give the samples to the most desperate cases.

The burglar evidently mistook the parsonage for an editor's house if it were his intentions to burglarize on a cash basis.

In our middle [illegible] the lower bridge, we discover that the abutments and foundations are ready for the new, right wing of the iron bridge and are evidently in good shape. We were somewhat surprised also at seeing the progress made in the new paper mill of the Waugh Bros. If we are any judge of the strength and durability of stone and brick work we should think that the foundations and walls were intended to stand for hundreds of years. The size of the mill gives evidence, that if run to its full capacity, will largely increase their present output. The Chicago market is receiving a large share of the product of their present make.

We found that Foster Bros. & Co. were pushing the canal for the outlet of water, from the pulp mill to be built on their property.

The Bustle Has to Go.

Editor FULTON TIMES:

DEAR SIR:—We women have alternate fits of consumate nonsense and real common sense. Just now common sense seems to be our lot, for the dictates of fashion have decided that the hideous deformity with which we have been afflicted in the shape of bustles are no longer the proper thing. In the history of fashions I have never seen any kind of a garment dropped so quick. The fact is, Mr. Editor, you can verify my statement by your wife, or any other lady of taste, that we would have been glad to have ceased to wear the unsightly things long ago, if Mrs. Grundy had only said so. Thank fortune they are gone, and none but cheap hired girls and country folks wear them any longer. How long good sense will prevail among us weaker sex I can't tell, but I hope for a long time. ANNA MARIA.

Telegraphic dispatches announce that certain grand officers of the Iowa Consistory of a branch of Scottish Rite Masonry commonly known as the Cernean have commenced proceedings against the Grand Lodge of Iowa, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, to prevent the Grand Lodge from putting into effect the legislation of their last session referring to the Cernean bodies which commandmaster masons to leave the consistory of Iowa of that rite under punishment of expulsion.

The ground of the action is want of jurisdiction in the Grand Lodge.

This is the first time state courts have been appealed to to control matters the regulation of which would seem to come entirely within the province of the order itself.

The Teachers' excursion is a success the train had over two hundred aboard when it left this station yesterday morning. About one-third of that number went from this village.

At the meeting of the Fire Council held last evening, Thursday, Sept. 5, was decided upon as review day. Inspection of the department, hose races for cash prizes and test of steamers will be the order of the day.

Rev. Warren Hubbard has resigned his position in the Brooklyn church of which he has been pastor for the past fourteen years and is in Fulton for his vacation. He will fill the pulpit of Zion church for the next few Sundays.

Rev. B. Brunning of the Universalist church goes to North Hannibal next Sunday to preach at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and 7:30 in the evening. His subjects are to be "A Reason for our hope," and "Mistakes about religion, in the church and out of it." Our Hannibal friends will find him a pretty lively preacher.

There are some funny folks in this world and Fulton has some of them, and one kind is that some folks run across the railroad crossing just ahead of a moving train as though they were after a doctor for a dying friend; really endangering their lives, and when across, just turn round and stand and watch the train go by with a deliberation that shows no hurry—Some people have good sense, and others—— well no matter.

A Spaniard insists upon his horse or arms not being taken in execution; a Frenchman, according to the ancient laws of France, has his dress privileged; a Scotchman is content if his working tools are left to him; but but an American, if he lives in the town of Granby or Volney, insists that his piano or organ shall be exempt; for if, as invariably happens, he has bought of A. Bristol, he knows he cannot replace it for double the money anywhere else.

Asa Phillips died at his home in Granby Centre yesterday at about 5 p. m. at the age of 71 years. Mr. Phillips has been troubled for several years by what is known among the medical fraternity as angina pectoris. For the past year or more he has been in failing health but his condition was not considered dangerous until about two months ago. He was born in Onondaga county, but in early boyhood came with his father and uncle to what is now Oswego Falls and Phillipsville was founded. Here he lived and spent his boyhood days.

He then moved to Canada, remaining there some forty years. He returned to this country and settled at his late home in Granby Centre about six years ago.

He was a man of the highest moral and religious character and an active member of the M. E. church in this village.

The readers of THE TIMES have often read interesting articles from his pen while on visits to his children in the west.

He has three sons and three daughters living: R. E. Phillips of this village, H. B. Phillips of Clear Lake, Iowa, William H. H. Phillips of DeSmet, Dak., Mrs. M. H. Davis of Toledo, Ohio, Mrs. Carscallen of Ernest, Dak. and Mrs. Thomas R. Wilde of Manitoba. The funeral will probably be held from his late home at 10 a. m. Friday. Rev. W. D. Chase will officiate.

Drowned in the River.

Charles McCully, aged about 12 years was drowned in the river in front of D. W. Gardner's residence, on First street, about noon Monday. The lad was a son of James McCully of Oswego and had come to Fulton to spend Sunday with his uncle, R. B. McCully. He was to return to Oswego on the 6:15 p. m. train on the day he was drowned. With his cousin, Amos McCully, who is about the same age, he went to the river bank and was bathing near the sluceway that leads from the canal to the river. He got beyond his depth and being unable to swim sank. His young cousin also was unable to swim could render him no assistance. Monday afternoon and Tuesday the river in that vicinity was dragged and divers were at work but the body was not recovered until about 7 o'clock this morning. It was found floating near the shore about 100 feet above where he was drowned, having been carried up stream by the current from the sluiceway. Funeral will be held at 11 o'clock to-morrow, from the residence of R. B. McCully, on Second street.

The Big Fair.

Bear in mind, and keep it constantly before you, that we mean just what we say, that is, The Big Fair For it is determined by the management that it shall be; and September 10, 11, 12 and 13 at Oswego will certainly show the largest most complete fair ever held in Oswego Co.

Do not shut your self up in a quiet home, ignorant of the pleasures and progress that are transpiring round about you. If you wish to be respected, live long, be happy and converted to progress in mind and body, to lengthen your life, and have a big increase of this world's goods, devote four days at the Big Fair at Oswego next September.

Scribner's Magazine

Just out for August, is a most seasonable issue. We notice out-door papers on the game of lawn tennis and on tarpon fishing; two papers on Tennyson, whose eightieth birthday is thus commemorated; also short stories, by H. H. Boyesen, Brander Matthews, George Parsons Lathrop, and E. C. Martin, a new writer, and valuable additions to the Electric and Railway series. "Form in Lawn Tennis," by James Dwight, M. D., —a very high authority—should attract the attention of every one interested in this popular game.

Professor T. R. Lounsbury furnishes a sympathetic and discriminating presentation of Tennyson's attitude toward life in youth and in old age are also given. "Electricity in Lightning," is a lucid and entertaining explaination of the processes of making electric machinery. "How to Feed a Railway" describes the Purchasing and Supply department of a large railway system, in an interesting and instructive paper which will be widely read.

IT is announced in several papers that Hon. S. M. Coon has decided not to become a candidate for a third term as Member of Assembly from this district. This leaves a practically sure thing for the nomination of N. N. Stranahan of this village.

If your early peas have ripened give them again expressly to grow seed for next year's planting.

The time for trimming hedges of all kinds is in midsummer, after the shrubs have made a thrifty growth.

It is better to cut some of the clover green and feed it to the cows in the stable, rather than to let the cows run out in the yield of milk.

Clover sown among corn at the last cultivating, and ploughed down for the next corp, is a cheap and practical way of capturing the fugitive nitrogen so much needed.

Only a small fraction of 1 per cent. of the milk sent to the cities from New York is adulterated. So much for good laws and good inspection. On account of its purity milk is becoming a popular beverage.

It is better for the ground and for the weeds to plant seeds of some useful vegetable after the early crops are removed. Shall plant a part of my garden the last of this month in late potatoes. Says a correspondent.

The largest watermelon patch in the world is at Adams Park, Ga. It embraces 800 acres and is expected to produce over 400 carloads of melons.

It will pay to pack butter when it is cheap, provided there is a good tub to put it in and a good place to keep it. A damp or a hot place will not do. The storeroom must be dry, sweet and cool. Cover with damp salt and a cloth. This will make a paste.

A lie is the only thing that can be made out of nothing; the milk cannot contain more than is in the feed and drink.

Horse Talk.

Buy a good breeding mare.

Horses are very high in price.

The coming horse for the farm should be a mule.

A good colt each year will lift the mortgage sure.

The mule can be kept at one-third less than the horse.

Why does not the average farmer keep a good breeding mare?

The foreign demand for large, fine horses is unfilled and will be for years.

To make the colts tame, put each one in a small field by itself and feed it out of a measure, if only a few licks.

J. B. Crouse, Syracuse, N. Y., is building a barn which is to cost $200,000. Of course this is to be a horse-breeding establishment.

In fly time two quarts of bran a day will help the little colts and also the pasture. This is not all, it will make the little fellows tame and kind.

The nearer a horse is to the ground the least it will cost to keep it. The more we see of the Percheron crosses the better we like them for the farm.

For a weak back in a horse feed more wheat bran, and rub the back well with a strong decoction of witch hazel. Avoid heavy pulling and all kinds of hard work.

For colic caused by the fermentation of foods in the stomachs of horses give at once a teaspoonful of aqua ammonia in a quart of water and two drachms of soda in a pint of water. Lime water is good.

A most excellent salve for sores on horses is lard and kerosene oil or, better yet, crude petroleum. A little sulphur can be added, and salt. This is better than gunpowder and lard and cheaper. Use twice as much lard as kerosene or the crude material.

If the colt is stubborn about taking the bit, lead it into a stall and put a rope with a slipping noose around its neck; then put the bit into its mouth doing the work as gently as possible. The colt will very likely pull back and choke itself. After a moment's choking relieve it and try again. With a few such lessons the colt will hold its head down and give no more trouble.

The Elephant Still Lives.

Don't you believe all you hear, my son. A paragraph is going the rounds that the elephant is being killed off so fast that twelve years more wil see the last one wiped out. This is probably written in the interest of the circus profession, but don't you worry.

The elephant will be at the circus as long as you live, and he will retain all his ineffable fragrance. However, should he really become extinct, shall we not still have the pink lemonade and the peanuts, not to forget the grand concert which takes place immediately at the close of the performance? and shall we not still have the young man who esteems it no hardship to pass around to distribute tickets at fifty cents each?—Boston Transcript.

THE [illegible] EXHIBITION.

A VILLA[GE] OF JAVA, BUILT AND INHABITED BY NATIVES.

Peculiarities of Architecture—A Dyer of Handk[erchiefs]—The Band of Dancing Girls—Javanese Musicians—The Largest Vase in the World.

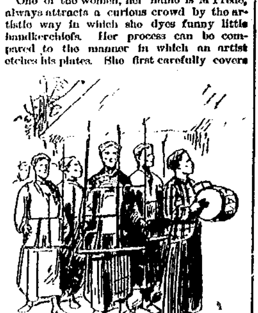
It has been truly said of the Paris exhibition that by viewing intelligently its many features, the trip to Paris can be made to answer many of the purposes of an extended journey. The different villages, especially, are said to be faithful pictures of scenes in the countries which they represent, and to the average visitor they form the most interesting exhibits of the show.

In the Dutch portion of the Esplanade des Invalides is a model "Kampong," or Javanese village, inhabited by sixty natives of the Eastern Asiatic archipelago. It is under the direction of M. Richard, who lived on the island for seventeen years.

The houses are built principally of bamboo and palm leaves, brought from their native soil for this purpose, and were constructed entirely by Javanese laborers. In building them hatchets and knives were the only tools used. Not a single nail or screw is to be found in the entire village, the bamboo framework being bound together with vegetable fibers. A peculiar but very agreeable kind of ornamentation appears on the walls, in which there are no windows. They are covered by a thin coating of fine clay on which patterns in leaves or bamboo rind are carefully arranged. Even the doors and floors are of bamboo, and the furniture is almost primitive in its simplicity.

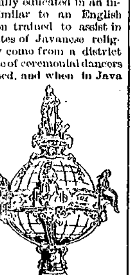
The twenty women form a very important part of the little community, for upon them devolves most of the manual labor. Four or five of them do the cooking and washing for the entire village, while the remaining work is divided among the others, always excepting the ballet dancers, whose labors are confined to the theatrical performances.

One of the women, her name is M'Predo, always attracts a curious crowd by the artistic way in which she dyes funny little handkerchiefs. Her process can be compared to the manner in which an artist etches his plates. She first carefully covers the fabric with wax. Then, with a fine instrument, she scrapes away the wax on the parts to be colored, tracing figures of animals, flowers and other designs. The handkerchief is next dipped in the dye pot, and as of course only those portions from which the wax has been scraped away can take the color, the result is all that can be desired. When M'Predo goes back to her island home she will take with her a big purse full of cash from the pockets of visitors to the exhibition, who buy all the handkerchiefs she can color.



PROCESSION OF JAVANESE MUSICIANS.

The dancers are six in number, five young women and a man. The latter and one of the women, the "Bong-geng," are of an inferior rank, but the other four are of the Javanese upper crust, so to speak. The youngest of these Asiatic belles is 12 years old and the oldest 16. They are all of good birth, have been carefully educated in an institution somewhat similar to an English nunnery, and have been trained to assist in some of the mystical rites of Javanese religious ceremonies. They come from a district where a hereditary caste of ceremonial dancers has long been maintained, and when in Java they dwell in a palace set aside for their use and under the close supervision of their special patron and protector, Prince Manka Negara. Their costumes would be considered somewhat too abbreviated both at top and bottom for street wear in America, but they have evidently been carefully copied from the dress of sacred figures in antique bas-reliefs. Their performance would be hardly lively enough to charm the ordinary theatre goer of this country, yet it undoubtedly possesses considerable grace and a kind of impressiveness.



THE BIG VASE.

Some of the men of the little colony are musicians. Their work is probably charming to the ears of native Javans, but to the Caucasian it seems to have a tendency toward the barbaric.

One of the many wonderful creations on exhibition in the other departments of the show is an enormous vase of pate tendre, or porcelain. It is eleven feet high, and was made by Messrs. Brownfields, of Cobridge, who write of it as follows:

"The vase, which is the largest specimen of porcelain (pate tendre) ever produced, is eleven feet in height, and its diameter is six feet four inches, including the ornamental figures. Its component parts are of various tints, obtained by impregnating the white porcelain, while in a liquid state, with the necessary chemical ingredients.

"The original conception was to symbolize the potter's craft, which was the first use to which the 'earth' was put. A globe represents the earth, round the center of which runs a frieze, which is divided into four panels, on which are cupids engaged in occupations representative of the four seasons of the year. The subjects are divided by brackets, on which rest figures typical of the four seasons. The pedestal contains a fine frieze, on which are some sixty cupids engaged in rural pursuits. The vase is surmounted by a figure of Ceres represented as, assisted by cupids, showering her benefits upon the earth. The figures and cupids are all of 'bisque' porcelain. In conveying the vase to Paris that portion forming the globe was broken in pieces. The damage appeared to be irreparable, but the art director of the firm, Mr. Louis H. John, succeeded in cementing together the broken pieces, with the result that few persons would detect the breakage."

The TORTURES OF DESPAIR

Can be no worse than the agony of a man or woman troubled with Sick Headache. The terrible pain; the nausea; the lack of all interest in life; the disgust with everything and everybody; the world can afford no pleasure to any one when suffering from Sick Headache.

Why have Doctors never been able to cure this fearful trouble?

Because they have never discovered the right thing!

Have they tried?

Yes, for hundreds of years.

But a Chemist of Troy, N. Y., discovered the remedy, and the remedy that will cure in EVERY CASE arising from a deranged stomach.

Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders

Go right to the Seat of the trouble—the Stomach. They are purely vegetable, and contain no narcotics. They act with wonderful promptness and never leave any bad after-effect.

Phillip Phillips, the "Singing Pilgrim," says of them:—"I cannot tell you how glad I am to get something that relieves my wife of her headaches."

Rev. George F. Pentecost, D. D., says:—"I have received many benedictions from those to whom I have given these powders."

The late Rev. O. P. Sheldon, says:—"They are a wonderful remedy, and all they claim to be."

A SAMPLE

of these wonderful Powders will be sent FREE to any sufferer from this terrible affliction, or they can be procured of all reputable druggists at 25 cents a box.

Will deliver free of charge, show cards and samples to any druggist who will keep the card in his window and give the samples to the most desperate cases.

IF YOU WISH

To enjoy good health, and prevent the seeds of disease from ripening in your system, you should use the best medicine in the world, Sulphur Bitters, which will prevent your system from being run down by making it strong and vigorous.—Rev. W. R. Snow. 10w2

A Philadelphia wholesale druggist pays $2 a gallon for dandelion wine, which is made from the plant growing wild on so many farms.

Women with pale, colorless faces, who feel weak and discouraged, will receive both mental and bodily vigor by using Carter's Iron Pills, which are made for the blood, nerves and complexion.

Annie Perkins, of Cleveland, wears boys' clothes, subsists on oatmeal, and sells papers for a living. She is 30 years of age and a poetess.

Wholesale merchants in Cincinnati have started a fund to supply their county customers with tickets. Ten merchants have subscribed $5,000 each.

TO MY FRIENDS.

As you are well aware that I would not recommend that which I did not believe to be good, I desire to say to all who need a good, reliable, family medicine, that I believe that one bottle of Sulphur Bitters will do more than any other remedy I ever saw. 10w2

A Woman's Discovry.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made and that too by a lady in this county. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus write W. C. Hamrick & Co. of Shelby, N. C.—Get a free trial bottle at R. E. Phillips' drug store.

Where shall we spend the summer,
At the mountains or by the sea?
Where the rustling forests murmur,
Or the salt winds whistle by.

Shall we visit famed Bar Harbor
Or the hotels at Cape May?
Shall we camp in the Adirondacks,
Or go sailing on Newport Bay?

Europe will be so crowded
This year, and we'll leave that out,
And the Sulpur Springs are passed,
And Chatauqua is too devout.

So as yet we are undecided
Which way we shall choose to roam;
But unless our finances brighten,
We shall probably stay at home.

Just Now.

We want your clothing very thin;
From morn to night our brows are beaded;
The oyster's out, the clam is in—
Except in chowders where 'tis needed.

The woods are full of pesky ants
The summer girls are dressed like fairies;
And men who love stiff stimulants
Now wink at the apothecaries.

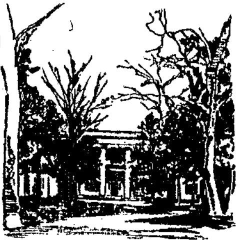
JACKSON'S OLD HOME.

THE HERMITAGE AND WHAT IS BEING DONE TO PRESERVE IT.

The Historic Old Mansion to Which "Old Hickory's" Name Will Always Be Attached—Its History and the Movement to Keep It in Repair.

There was recently started in Tennessee a movement which has for its object the preservation of the "Hermitage," Gen. Jackson's old home. This movement is chiefly due to the efforts of the ladies of Tennessee, who have been for some time trying to carry it to a successful termination. A plan of action was at last adopted, and the Hermitage association was formed. This plan was similar to the one used to preserve Washington's home at Mount Vernon—indeed, the Mount Vernon plan, which everybody knows was so successful, has served as a model. It is the intention to make the society national in character, and as it will take a great deal of money to carry out the project, it will be the society's endeavor to reach every admirer of Jackson.

Under the Mount Vernon plan $200,000 was raised to purchase the estate of Washington and set it apart forever as hallowed and sacred ground. Thirty-three years have passed since Mount Vernon became in this way the property, to all intents and purposes, of the whole American people, and the success which has attended that undertaking has probably had a great deal to do with "The Hermitage Association."



THE HERMITAGE.

Gen. Jackson moved from North Carolina to Tennessee in 1788, and in 1804 he built the hut where he lived so many years.

There is not in the whole country a log hut so rich in historical associations. It was the home of Jackson when his deeds as an Indian fighter thrilled the young republic from one end to the other. It was here that Burr visited him in 1805 and unfolded his famous project of an empire in Mexico. Jackson was living in this hut in 1813 when war was declared against England, and it was from this hut that he started out with his little army of 2,500 volunteers to sail down the Cumberland, the Ohio and the Mississippi one thousand miles to New Orleans. In this log cabin he heard the news of the Fort Minns massacre by the Creeks in August, 1813, and from it he again took the field at the head of 5,000 men, called out by the government of Tennessee. It was here that he received his commission as major general in the regular army, and from here he again started on the march which ended with his seizure of Pensacola, then belonging to Spain. He returned to the hut after the battle of New Orleans, and again set forth to return a conqueror from the Seminole war, and to it after the Florida purchase came his commission as first governor of the new territory.

In 1818 Gen. Jackson built a handsome mansion on the site of which is the present building. This house was nearly all destroyed by fire in 1836. In the same year the present structure, which is an exact copy of the first one, was erected. Mr. Parton, in his "Life of Jackson," thus describes it:

"It is not a very spacious building, and very far, indeed, from being an elegant one. A two story brick house with a double piazza, both in front and in the rear; the piazza wooden and painted white, supported by thick grooved pillars of the same material and color. The floors of the lower piazza are of stone, and each end terminates in a wing of the house.

"Just behind the edifice is a large garden with pebbled paths and beds bordered with bricks. The rooms are lofty, rather small and plainly furnished. The parlors are hung with portraits of the general and his friends—Coffee, Bronaugh, Gadsden, Eaton and others. There is a portrait of Mrs. Jackson in white satin, topaz jewelry, low neck and short sleeves; fat, forty and not fair. In the hall are busts of Edward Livingston, Lewis Cass and Levi Woodbury."

The New York World gives a short history of the present movement to preserve the Hermitage which is extreme interesting, and from which we copy the following:

This is not the first attempt which has been made to save the famous Hermitage, with all the associations which cluster around the home of the great soldier, patriot and president. In 1856 it was bought by the legislature of Tennessee for $78,000 from Andrew Jackson, Jr., an adopted son of Gen. Jackson, and bonds, which are still part of the state debt, were issued for that purpose. The property thus acquired included the mansion, tomb and 500 of the 1,000 acres which Gen. Jackson died possessed of in 1845. Mr. Jackson, after the sale had been effected, was allowed to reside in the place for two years, until he could make other arrangements. At the end of that period he removed to Louisiana with part of his household goods and negroes, leaving a few of the old servants behind to protect the property. Just before the outbreak of the civil war he returned to the Hermitage at the request of Governor Harris, and again took up his residence there. Shortly afterwards, while hunting in the Hermitage woods, he received a gunshot wound in the hand, which resulted in his death through lockjaw.

Mrs. Jackson herself died about two years ago, and then it was that the state authorities resolved to resume possession of the property. For two years the house and grounds have been moldering in decay, until last [illegible] the question of what should be done with the Hermitage again came up for [illegible] [illegible] Gen. Jackson died, and to preserve them as a memorial to the man who was admired and beloved by so many of his countrymen.

A few leading men of the state who were consulted on the subject were in favor of the scheme as a happy and patriotic solution of a problem which the authorities saw no clear way of solving, and the ladies of the Mount Vernon association, who were written to, contributed out of the stores of their ripe experience. Accordingly, these patriotic Nashville women took out a charter to enable them to accomplish in a legal way their design. The project did not arouse much enthusiasm. A brief newspaper paragraph calling attention to it was, however, enough for the introduction of a bill in the legislature, at the instance of the state bivouacs of Confederate soldiers, asking for the Hermitage for a period of twenty-five years, as a home for disabled ex-Confederate soldiers.

This idea and bill became very popular, especially as it was so well known that Jackson, in his life, had done so much for the soldier, and the ladies began to look upon their charter as so much waste paper. They did not, however, give up, and a counter bill was introduced providing for the purchase of the house, tomb and 250 acres of the property. A large number of influential citizens rallied to the support of the ladies and promised their co-operation. This was a flank movement, and the disposition of the Hermitage was held in abeyance. In the meantime efforts were made to harmonize the two parties. A meeting of the citizens was held, and there was some vigorous oratory on both sides. This meeting was decisive of the struggle. The Soldiers' home committee altered their petition to the legislature, excepting the house and tomb and twenty-five acres. Both bills were then passed.

Mrs. Dorris, secretary of the association, in writing of the Hermitage at the present time, says:

"It is now in that state of dilapidation that unless prompt and efficient measures are taken it will in a few more years pass into utter ruin. To the eye the house still presents the same stately appearance of old, but the eaves, the roof, the foundation, the ceiling, are all in need of renovation. The proper steps taken now, the home of Jackson will be preserved forever, and future generations will praise the efforts of those who saved it. The papering upon the walls has never been changed since Gen. Jackson's death. His bedroom is just as it was the day he died. The hall is papered with the legend of Telemachus, which style was fashionable in that day. The walks in the garden are just as he left them. The old fashioned flowers—peonies, lilacs, daffodils, snowballs, lilies of the valley—now a wilderness of the garden, which may, with proper care, be restored to its original neatness and order."

The tomb of Jackson is in the southwest corner of the garden, three hundred feet or so from the mansion. The material used in the construction is solid limestone, and the flight of years has made but slight impression on it. The dome is supported by eight columns of the doric order and three large steps serve as well proportioned base. Upon either side of the monumental piece in the center are two heavy slabs of stone, lying horizontally upon the floor of the tomb and in them are cut the inscriptions. Nothing could be simpler than one:

General Andrew Jackson,
Born March 15, 1767. Died June 8, 1845.

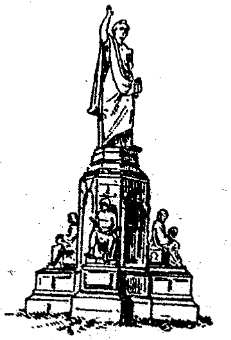
History tells the rest. Poor Rachel, who never saw the White House to live in it, and who never cared to go there except to be with her illustrious husband, has one of the most beautiful inscriptions ever cut in stone or graven in bronze:

"Here lie the remains of Mrs. Rachel Jackson, wife of President Jackson, who died the 22d of December, 1828, aged 61 years. Her face was fair, her person pleasing, her temper amiable, her heart kind. She delighted in relieving the wants of her fellow creatures and cultivated that divine pleasure by the most liberal and unpretending methods. To the poor she was a benefactor, to the rich an example, to the wretched a comforter, to the prosperous an ornament. Her piety went hand in hand with her benevolence, and she thanked her Creator for being permitted to do good. A being so gentle and virtuous slander might wound but could not dishonor. Even death, when he bore her from the arms of her husband, could but transport her to the bosom of her God."

The Plymouth Monument.

The unveiling of the Plymouth monument concludes a movement which has been thirty-six years in developing. In 1853 steps were taken to erect a monument to the Pilgrim Fathers near Plymouth Rock. The Pilgrim society took the matter in hand, and chose Mr. Hammatt Billings, then a prominent Boston architect, to design a monument. The society also appointed agents to collect funds, but later on this whole work was instrusted to the Rev. Willard M. Harding, of Chelsea. The three persons originally most active in the work—Mr. Billings, his brother, who succeeded him, and Mr. Harding—all have passed away before the completion of the work.

The monument is placed on a high hill near Plymouth Rock, where it can be seen from the seas. With its pedestal it stands 77 feet high. There is a main statue of "Faith" 36 feet high, given by Oliver Ames, which stands on a granite octagonal pedestal 45 feet high. The pedestal has four large and four small faces. Upon the large faces are tablets bearing the names of the founders of the colony, while from the smaller faces buttresses project upon which are seated figures representing, with the central figure, the principles of the founders, the figures being "Morality," "Education," "Freedom" and "Law."



THE PLYMOUTH MONUMENT.

The statue of "Faith" was modeled by Perry, of Florence. "Morality" was given by the state of Massachusetts. A panel representing the embarkation at Delft Haven was given by Connecticut. Roland Mather, of Hartford, gave "Education," and the panel describing the signing of the compact in the cabin of the Mayflower. Congress appropriated the funds for "Freedom" and the panel representing the landing of the Pilgrims. "Law" and the panel representing the signing of the treaty with Indian Chief Samoset were paid for by private subscriptions. The monument, with the exception of one tablet, is the work of the Hallowell Granite company. With the exception of the tablets it is all granite. The total cost is $200,000.

Thirty years ago, Aug. 2, 1859, the corner stone was laid. Prominent men were there of whom many have since passed away. There were N. P. Banks, the governor of Massachusetts, and Salmon P. Chase, both of whom were [illegible] [illegible]

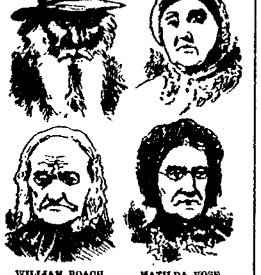
THEY ARE FULL OF DAYS.

SKETCHES OF SOME OLD PEOPLE IN AMERICA AND ELSEWHERE.

Is It a Fact, as Certain Statistics Are Said to Show, That the Americans Are of Greater Average Age Than the People of Other Nations?

Certain statistics are said to show that the average age attained by American men and women is steadily increasing. Many have supposed that the nervous energy displayed by Americans is wearing them out; but it is claimed that their average age is higher than that of any other nation.

There are a few very remarkable instances of longevity reported in Europe in former times, but they are the exceptions, not the rule. The rude habits and want of comfort of the people of those days were not conducive to old age. The comforts of the present civilization seem to be bringing about longevity rather as a rule than as an exception.



WILLIAM ROACH. MATILDA VOSE.
ESTHER RHODES. PIKERR VENNUM.

A little investigation will show quite a number of people now dwelling in the United States who have lived a century, and some have gone far beyond their hundredth birthday.

A specimen of extreme age is living at Washington Mills, on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, not far from Utica, New York. His name is Ephraim Elmer, and he is said to be 125 years old. The proof of his age is largely in the statement of his sons, who are old men, for one of his children went west some years ago with the family Bible in which the record of his birth was kept, and has probably passed away, as letters sent to him have been returned.

Mr. Elmer says that he was born in Warren, Herkimer county, N. Y., Jan. 26, 1764. His father was a farmer, who came from the old country. Mr. Elmer has been a shoemaker all his life, and says that he worked at his trade till a year ago, when his eyes gave out. At 34 he married a girl of 14 and had eleven children born to him, all of whom are living, so far as he knows, except two girls, and two sons killed in the civil war. His wife died in 1865, and the old man has not seen or heard of a brother or sister in fifty years, except a sister who died about twenty-five years ago. Elmer joined Gen. Herkimer's army as a waiter and chore boy when he was thirteen, and was with him at the time of the battle of Oriskany, though, having been sent away for something, he was not in the battle. He was in the breastworks at Sackett's Harbor in 1813. An inveterate user of tobacco, he says that the nearest approach to the blues he has is when he gets out of a supply.

Then there is Aunt Elsie Williams, a colored woman living in Missouri, who is supposed to have reached the age of 115. She was born in Williamsport, Md. At the time of Washington's death she was in jail in Washington with other slaves preparatory to being sent south. On leaving Washington she went to Augusta, Ga., where she was bought by a slave trader, who took her to his plantation on the Tombigbee, in Alabama. She was sold again at Memphis, Tenn. She moved north near the close of the war with the Eighth Missouri regiment, and has ever since made her home in St. Louis city and county.

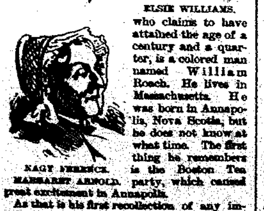
Pickaway county, O., boasts of a woman 112 years old. She was born on the 4th of July, 1777, being the first anniversary of American independence. Her name is Margaret Arnold. Her father, Mr. Robert Kiser, had twelve children, four of whom are living—three daughters and one son. Margaret was married to Mr. Frederick Arnold when quite young. Her husband died over seventy years ago and she has remained in widowhood ever since. She removed from her native state to Chillicothe, O., where she remained but one winter. From Chillicothe she removed to a farm in Fayette county and followed the occupation of a tailoress. She made her home, after this, in Illinois for twenty-seven years, and ultimately returned to Ohio, where she has since been living with her son. No physician has ever been called to attend her, as she has never been sick a day in her life. Although a smoker of tobacco for seventy years she has at last laid the pipe aside, finding no further comfort in it.

She comes of a remarkably long lived family. Here is a showing of the ages attained by herself, two sisters and one brother:

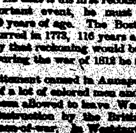
	Ages.
Mrs. Elizabeth Hilliard	115
Mrs. Margaret Arnold	112
Mrs. John Bailey	109
William Kiser	104

It is not likely that any other family in the United States can produce such a record.

Another person besides Ephraim Elmer, who claims to have attained the age of a century and a quarter, is a colored man named William Roach. He lives in Massachusetts. He was born in Annapolis, Nova Scotia, but he does not know at what time. The first thing he remembers is the Boston Tea party, which caused great excitement in Annapolis.



ELSIE WILLIAMS.



NAGY FERENCK.
MARGARET ARNOLD.

As that is his first recollection of any important event, he must have been about 10 years of age. The Boston Tea Party occurred in 1773, 116 years ago, so that Roach by that reckoning would be 126 years of age. During the war of 1812 he remembers the excitement caused in Annapolis by the landing of a lot of colored men and women who had been allowed to leave Washington, after its destruction by the British, in the English men-of-war. In Washington they had been slaves; in Annapolis they were free men.

Pikerr Vennum died recently in Illinois at the age of 104. She was born in Morris county, N. J., in 1785. Her parents died at a very old age, her father being [illegible] and her mother [illegible] at the time of death. When [illegible]

Mrs. Matilda Vose, of Hyde Park, Norfolk county, Mass., was 101 years old on the 17th day of July, 1889. She was a Miss Whiting, and married Jesse Vose in 1807. Joshua Whiting, her father, was a soldier of the Revolution, starting for the front just before the battle of Lexington. The gun he carried is still in possession of the family.

There is a Hungarian peasant named Nagy Ferencz, who is said to be 120 years old. When a child he was delicate, but at 19 developed into a very muscular person. At 20 he fell in love with the daughter of an inn keeper, who jilted him for his best friend. This incident kept him a bachelor for 100 years. This is probably the longest record of any one man living the life of a woman hater.

At 24 he went to the war of the first coalition. He was with the Archduke Charles at Wetzlar, and was one of the conquered at Marengo and Hohenlinden and at Wagram. At Aspern he was with the victors. At Leipsic he got a bullet in his leg and three in his hat. He often saw the Archduke Charles, and saw Napoleon once.

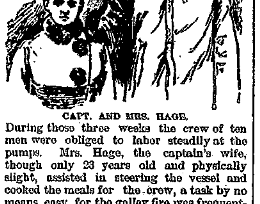
His habits are simple. He has smoked three pipefuls of strong tobacco every day for 104 years. He is allowed ten cents a day by those who care for him for tobacco and beer. Nagy is quite fond of wine and beer; indeed, he is inclined to dissipation, and it is probable that this is the reason of his limited allowance, for fear that he may injure his prospects of living to a ripe old age.

Another centenarian whose statement of her age seems to have been generally accepted was Mary Jackson, colored, who died at Ithaca, N. Y., the other day, at 105. She was taken to Ithaca from the south many years ago.

A HEROINE OF THE SEA.

Mrs. Hage's Courage on a Sinking Ship. She Did Her Best.

The story of the loss of the Cupido includes a tale of a woman's courage which has seldom been equaled. The Cupido, a Norwegian bark, was on a voyage from Inverness, Scotland, to Weymouth, N. S. Three weeks of almost unremitting gales strained the ship until her hold began to slowly fill with water.



CAPT. AND MRS. HAGE.

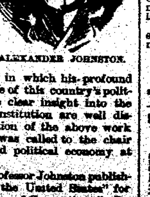
During those three weeks the crew of ten men were obliged to labor steadily at the pumps. Mrs. Hage, the captain's wife, though only 23 years old and physically slight, assisted in steering the vessel and cooked the meals for the crew, a task by no means easy, for the galley fire was frequently extinguished by the waves. Her example was a constant incentive to the men, who did their best. They were finally obliged to give up, however, from sheer exhaustion, and were taken off by a passing vessel and landed at New York. The Cupido was fired and burned so that she might not become waterlogged and a danger to navigation. Capt. Hage owned two-thirds of the little craft and is left absolutely penniless by her loss.

Alexander Johnston Dead.

Princeton college, in the death of Alexander Johnston, LL.D., at his home in Princeton, lost one of her favorite and most able professors. He was professor of jurisprudence and political economy, which departments have been brought to a high standard of efficiency by his efforts and learning. His early death—he was but 40—will be a great loss to Princeton.

Professor Alexander Johnston was born in Brooklyn, April 29, 1849. He received his collegiate education at Rutgers college, where he graduated in 1870. He was one of the leading writers on the constitutional and political history of the United States in this country.

After studying law at New Brunswick, N. J., he was admitted to the bar in 1876. He did not actually follow the practice of his profession, but became a teacher in Rutgers College grammar school, where he remained until 1879, and then became principal of the Latin school at Norwalk, Conn. His study of law, political economy and the history of the United States was kept up all the time, and in 1879 he published his "History of American Politics," in which his profound and broad knowledge of this country's political history and the clear insight into the principles of the constitution are well displayed. In recognition of the above work Professor Johnston was called to the chair of jurisprudence and political economy at Princeton college.



ALEXANDER JOHNSTON.

In 1886 and 1887 Professor Johnston published his "History of the United States" for schools and a "History of Connecticut." Besides these books he wrote many articles for various encyclopedias, including those on the United States in a supplement to the "Encyclopedia Britannica," and others. He was a member of the Fellowcraft club, of New York city, and belonged to various learned and literary societies.

Professor Johnston was an ardent admirer of college athletics, and did much to raise them to the dignity of manly sports.

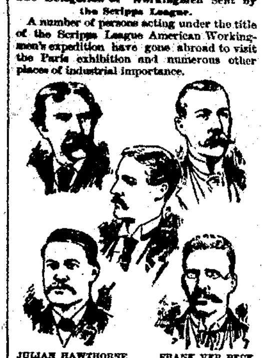
A number of persons acting under the title of the Scripps League American Workingmen's expedition have gone abroad to visit the Paris exhibition and numerous other places of industrial importance.



JULIAN HAWTHORNE. FRANK VER BECK.
C. J. THOMPSON.
L. T. ATWOOD. F. R. BURTON.

The expedition was conceived by Mr. George G. Booth, of Detroit, and is under the patronage of Mr. Edward Scripps, president of the Scripps league of newspapers, which consists of The News, of Detroit; The Post, of Cincinnati; The Press, of Cleveland; The Chronicle, of St. Louis; The Echo and Sunday News, of Detroit. These papers, through the Scripps league, have a large circulation among the laboring classes.

The executive staff of the expedition consists of Mr. Charles J. Thompson, director and editor; Julian Hawthorne, L. T. Atwood, C. B. Williams and F. W. Graves, correspondents; Frank Ver Beck, artist; Henry L. Wilder, photographer; Frederick R. Burton, advance representative.

Mr. Thompson, the director, has been the editor of The Detroit Sunday News. A graduate of the University of Michigan, he studied law, and after practicing awhile entered journalism.

Among the correspondents Julian Hawthorne is especially well known as a journalist and a writer of fiction. He is a son of Nathaniel Hawthorne, one of the world's great writers of romance.

Another correspondent, Mr. Atwood, has been managing editor of The Cincinnati Post. He is still a young man, having been born in Massachusetts in 1852. Mr. Williams is city editor of The Cleveland Press, and Mr. Graves is connected with The Sunday News of Detroit. The artist, Mr. Ver Beck, has attained considerable reputation for his pictures in many of the leading New York illustrated periodicals.

The photographer, Mr. Wilder, will naturally act with Mr. Ver Beck. Mr. Burton, the advance representative, has held many important journalistic positions. He speaks German, French, Italian, Spanish and other modern languages. These he will find to be all necessary to fill the position. The Anchor line steamer City of Rome was engaged for the expedition.

Progress of Inventions Since 1845.

In the year 1845 the present owners of the Scientific American newspaper commenced its publication, and soon after established a bureau for the procuring of patents for inventors at home and in foreign countries. During the year 1845 there were only 502 issued from the U. S. Patent Office, and the total issue from the establishment of the Patent Office, up to the end of that year, numbered only 4,347.

Up to the first of July this year there have been granted 406,413. Showing that since the commencement of the of the Scientific American there been issued from the U. S. Patent Office 402,166 patents, and about one third more applications have been made than have been granted, showing the ingenuity of our people to be phenomenal, and much greater than ever the enormous number of patents issued indicates. Probably a good many of our readers have had business transacted through the offices of Scientific American, in New York or Washington, and are familiar with Munn & Co's. mode of doing business, but those who have not will be interested in knowing about this, the oldest patent soliciting firm in this country, brobably in the world.

Persons visiting the office of the Scientific American, 361 Broadway, N. Y., for the first time will be surprised, on entering the main office, to find such an extensive and elegantly equipped establishment, with its walnut counters, desks and chairs to correspond, and its enormous safes, and such a large number of draughtsmen, specification writers, all busy as bees, reminding one of a large banking or insurance office with its hundred employes.

In conversation with one of the firm, who had commenced the business of soliciting patents in connection with the publication of the Scientific American, more than forty years ago, I learned that his firm had made application for upward of one hundred thousand inventors in the United States, and several in different foreign countries, and had filed as many cases in a single month as there were patents issued during the entire first year of their business career. This gentleman had seen the Patent Office grow from a little sapling to a sturdy oak, and he modestly hinted that many thought the Scientific American with its large circulation, had performed no mean share in stimulating inventions and advancing the interests of the Patent Office. But it is not alone the patent soliciting that occupies the attention of the one hundred persons employed by Munn & Co., but a large number are engaged on the four publications issued weekly and monthly from their office, 361 Broadway, N. Y., viz.: The Scientific American, the Scientific American Supplement, the Export Edition of the Scientific American, and the Architects and Builders Edition of the Scientific American. The first two publications are issued every week, and the latter two, the first of every month.

At the special school meeting held last evening a resolution to raise an additional $3,000 for the interior finishings and heating apparatus for the new school building was passed without a dissenting vote.

A Joke on a Car Driver.

The driver of a Philadelphia street car relates the following joke on himself: "Those traveling salesmen are full of tricks. One of 'em played a good joke on me last night. I had a carload of lady passengers on the down trip, and I saw a chap pull a cigar out of his pocket and stick it in his mouth. I told him it was against the rules to smoke when there were ladies on the car, but he paid no attention to me. He pulled out a match and when I made a grab for it he pulled the cigar apart and it opened into a fan. Maybe they didn't laugh at me; but it was a good sell and I enjoyed it if the joke was on me."—Detroit Free Press.

New President of Brown.

Professor E. B. Andrews, the new president of Brown university, who succeeds President Robinson, is a man in the prime of life, being under 45 years of age. He was graduated from Brown university in 1870, and has since that time devoted his time to educational matters. When he completed his course at Brown he went to Newton Theological seminary and was prepared for the ministry. There is a law at Brown making it necessary for the president to be a Baptist minister. Professor Andrews entered the ministry of that denomination and for a time preached. One of the degrees he has received is that of doctor of divinity. Several years ago he was called to Brown as a professor, taking the chair of political economy. In this chair at Brown he made a distinct hit, and the value of his work soon became known at other colleges, especially at Cornell, where about a year ago he was called to take the chair of political economy and finance. When he left Brown it was with the great regret of his friends. He had just finished the first year of his professorship at Cornell when he was invited to return to his alma mater as her president. Older and more conservative men have been proposed for the position, but Professor Andrews was the choice of the younger members of the alumni, and his election is believed to presage [illegible]

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2, 1889.

Ex-Secretary Whitney announces that the story that he is about to back a new weekly paper in Washington, having for its purpose his nomination as the next Democratic candidate for President, is without foundation. To this he adds the denial of any willingness to accept a nomination to "this or any other office." Of course, there will be ample time for Mr. Whitney to change his mind.

So far as founding a Washington weekly for the purpose of influencing politics is concerned, Mr. Whitney is to good a business man to make such an unprofitable investment. The Washington papers are now, and have been for several years, without weight or influence in National affairs. The best of them, the Star, is merely a local newsgatherer. Add to this the fact that Mr. Hudson, who was named as editor of the new sheet, is a weak sort of society reporter who brilliantly managed to ruin the Sunday Capital, and Mr. Whitney's denial of the newspaper scheme is easily believed.

So far as his avowal that he would not accept office is concerned, Mr. Whitney will excuse those who know him for having mutual reservations on the subject. Mr. Whitney's desire for the presidency has been noticed for two years and his availability as a candidate recognized. Mr. Whitney was, beside the late Mr. Manning, the one really able man in Mr. Cleveland's cabinet. He made the fewest mistakes and the most successes. It is well known that the great wealth of Mrs. Whitney's family would be edited in the cause, even to the extent of a couple of million dollars. Dearly as Mrs. Blaine would love to be the lady of the White House, Mrs. Whitney is known by her friends to have a still more ambitious longing for the position.

In seeking for things to reform Mr. John Wanamaker has unluckily stirred up an enemy that brooks no interferance and submits to no defeat. Yesterday he crossed the last bridge in his opening fight with the Western Union Telegraph Company by ordering the payment of the government telegraph bills suspended pending the settlement of the discussion. Dr. Norwin Green, president of the telegraph monopoly, calmly announces that he will fight the Postmaster General in the courts. He states that in ordering the rate cut, as to all distances, from one cent to one mill per word, the Postmaster General has exceeded the authority given him by law to fix the rate the government shall pay for the transmittal of messages.

Dr. Green alleges that this is unconstitutional, being the taking of private property and services without just and fair compensation. The defense is thus on broad and seemingly equitable grounds if as Dr. Green states messages could not be sent at the rate proposed without loss to the company. The average length of a government message is about twenty words, and of course it must be delivered by a messenger, and must take precedence of all other business. The new rate would make the toll two cents to send a message by his department, and if special delivery is required ten cents more.

What, except perchance a fleeting notoriety can Mr. Wanamaker hope to derive from this war on the telegraph companies? It is an essential principle of this government to pay for what it gets fair compensation, whether it be to a laborer or to a powerful monopoly. In this case, should Mr. Wanamaker succeed about $10,000 per annum will be saved. It would cost the government $100,000 at least, to defend the suit. Former postmaster-generals have never questioned the justice of the rate at ten times what Mr. Wannamaker proposes to make it.

The conclave of Knights Templar will be badly handicapped financially, unless some new device is invented by the committee for raising money. It was expected that the hotel keepers, liverymen, butchers, grocers and saloon keepers, of Washington would give in the aggregate about $20,000. Cities where the conclaves have been held have never given less than $35,000 to $49,000. But after a hard canvass the committee has secured only $1,800 from the business men of the capital. The merchants and others to be benefitted go right ahead with their preparations for making a big haul in October, but will give nothing. The reason for this is in the fact that the conclave is decided upon and is beyond danger of failure, and they do not propose to give up their money unless they are compelled.

The Cosmopolitan.

The Cosmopolitan has greatly improved and is one of our most delightful exchange magazines. The August number is excellent not only in reading matter but in illustrations. The frontispiece represents the execution of Philip Spencer on board the brig Somers. "Social Life in Ottawa" by W. Blackburne Hart, gives a capital idea of society in the Dominion capital. "The Caged Tigers of Santa Rosa" by Richard Wheatly, gives a graphic picture of Geronimo and his band of Apaches. "The Children of Arachne" by Emile Blanchard, "What Shall Children Read?" by Kate D. Wiggin, "A Trip to Delecarlie" by W. W. Thomas, "An American Soldier" by G. T. Ferris and "The Dignity, Rights and Responsibility of Labor" by Cardinal Gibbons are interesting papers. The poems are "Faith" by Stephen H. Thayer and "Content" by Henry C. Wood. The Chinese novel, "Wu Chih Tien," is continued. "A Bourgeoise Wedding in South France" by Lucy C. Lillie, is interesting. "In the Field papers," "Social Problems," and "In the Library" furnish good reading. The Cosmopolitan, New York city.

BUFFALO BEATS BARNUM.

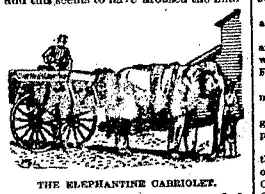
THE INTERNATIONAL FAIR SEEMS THOROUGHLY WIDE AWAKE.

President Harrison Hopes to Visit the Queen City and Expresses Some Envy of Levi P. Morton—The Great Hamlin-Wilkes Race to Take Place on Thursday.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

BUFFALO, Aug. 6.—There hasn't been so much excitement over the Circuit races at this point in fifteen years as is manifesting itself to-day, and to add to the confusion and what would ordinarily be a general demoralization of the horse cars, Barnum is in town. Main street looked this morning somewhat as you might imagine it would look had there been a general conflagration on the east and west sides, with the result of driving everybody out of doors. I do not know at this hour which has reaped the larger harvest from the general out-pouring of the inhabitants, Barnum or the races? What I do know is that the street car company has "done itself exceedingly proud" in handling the big crowd.

There has been a good deal of talk here about building a cable road and much grumbling at the Street railroad service, and this seems to have aroused the managers of travel via rail with horse flesh motors, to the height of enterprise.

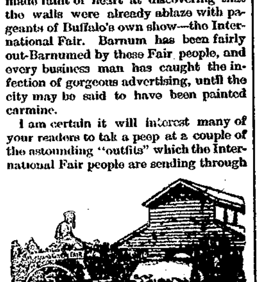


THE ELEPHANTINE CABRIOLET.

It is not to be doubted that the success of the International Fair last season and the brilliant prospects for greater success this year, are accountable for much of the unusual hustling that is going on in all business circles.

It is a curious thing for people who knew conservative, prosy old Bufalo a year or two ago, to witness the "booming" spirit which is now abroad in the city. Barnum's agents who came here by the car load, just as they have done for years immemorial, to waken up the inhabitants with wonderfully illuminated paper illustrating the glories of the "Greatest Show on Earth," have been made faint of heart at discovering that the walls were already ablaze with pageants of Buffalo's own show—the International Fair. Barnum has been fairly out-Barnumed by these Fair people, and every business man has caught the infection of gorgeous advertising, until the city may be said to have been painted carmine.

I am certain it will interest many of your readers to tak a peep at a couple of the astounding "outfits" which the International Fair people are sending through the country. I therefore give you the illustrations above, lest some day the "Elephantine Cabriolet" or the "Camel Coupe" may come rumbly into your town and you be ignorant of their artful purpose.



THE CAMEL COUPE.

In each of the carts shown in the accompanying illustrations, is carried a lavish display of colored paper illustrating the wonders of the forthcoming Buffalo Fair and I am told that it is the custom of the turbaned gentlemen who conduct the two caravans, to cover every vacant wall and barn they can find with highly colored paper. The elephant is making about twenty miles a day in his missionary work, while the camel is only covering about sixteen. The elephant was yesterday in the vicinity of Ashtabula, Ohio, and the camel was said to be somewhere near Hornellsville,

From one of the gentlemen who had the pleasure of visiting Deer Park last Wednesday as a member of the delegation which was sent to invite President Harrison to the agreeable task of opening the Buffalo Exposition on September 3d next, I have obtained some interesting particulars of the visit. Senator Frank Hiscock and Congressman Farquhar were in the delegation. The President with Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. McKee and Mrs. McKee's baby were on the verandah of the cottage when the committee called. President Harrison was much interested in the fact that Vice President Morton had been an exhibitor of Guernsey cattle at the Buffalo Fair last year, and regretted that he did not have any to exhibit. The Buffalo gentlemen spread the colored lithographs representing the Exposition in all its attractiveness on the piazza and Baby McKee became immediately excited. Mrs. Harrison reminded the President that he had an engagement to visit Lafayette College in which her (Mrs. Harrison's) father was interested, at about the time his presence was requested at Buffalo, but the President said he did not think that engagement would interfere. He said he should like very much to visit Buffalo and made a pleasant reference to his predecessor. He hopes to be able to open the Fair.

It is altogether likely that Benjamin Harrison will open the International Exposition.

There is a great deal of discussion concerning the Belle Hamlin-Harry Wilkes race for $10,000 which takes place here next Thursday. Both horses are said to be "fit to race for a kingdom" and betting runs high and about even, with Harry Wilkes perhaps a shade better thought of. The race will be called at about 3 p. m. on Thursday and will be finished within the hour, as the owners of Harry Wilkes objected to any sandwiching in of other heats. VINDEX.

Cheese Market Report.

AT UTICA.

UTICA, Aug. 5.

Advices from New York were more favorable to-day, and buyers took hold with considerable energy, putting the market up ⅜c. On an average cheese was sold off to July 18 or 20, and so much of the July make is now gone that salesmen are in hopes the improvement has come to stay. The cable advanced a shilling last week, showing that the change started on the other side of the water, which is certainly a good sign, and ought to be a permanent one if matters are not overdone on this side. That is so apt to be the case, however, that it would be unwise to bank too much on the staying qualities of the market. It would not be surprising to see another advance next week, and in that event we may put cheese quite out of reach of English views.

Following are the transactions:

There were sales of 70 packages creamery butter part at 17@20c. and part consigned.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Aug. 5.

Cheese.—The ruling price of cheese to-day, is advanced fully one-half cent. per pound, and the average price would probably figure somewhat more. Prices started in at the advance and kept it throughout the day, till near the close a little excitement was caused by one buyer paying 8¾ cents, but the hour was so late that it had no effect on other lots. Most operators and factorymen consider this a healthy advance and not caused by speculative dealers. The cheese is represented to be of excellent quality and well cured, toward which result the unusual cool weather has contributed largely in securing. Colored cheese continues to be preferred to white by about one-fourth cent a pound.

Farm daries—There was a good market in the morning, and the home trade shows some improvement. Sales were 1,022 boxes at 7⅞ to 8¼c the bulk going at 8c

THE HAY FEVER SEASON

July, August, September.

"At this season, when life offers the greatest attractions and the most delightful resources to persons whose soundness of body permits out-of-door exercises and amusements, multitudes are debarred from the joys of the summer by hay fever, one of the most exasperating, wearisome, and depressing ills to which humanity is subject—obscure, inexplicable, descending on a given date like an invisible blow of fate. The sufferers from hay fever have looked in vain for any trustworthy remedy. Many of them, however, have looked in vain because they have been ignorant of Ely's Cream Balm, an admirable remedy for hay fever in all its forms. Agreeable in the use, entirely devoid of any unpleasant after-effects, this Cream Balm quickly allays inflammation and secures that relief for which the sufferer has longed in vain."—From the Christian Union, New York City, July 18, 1888.

Jerry Curtis had no small amount of trouble with a Mrs. Warner who lives in another part of the same house. The trouble all originated in Mrs. Warner's driving flies into his part. The first jury failed to agree but the second jury acquitted him so Jerry is happy.

At the Good Templars picnic, at the fair grounds yesterday in connection with the W. C. T. U. Juvenile Templars, etc., there was a goodly number present, some 600 to 800 from the different towns around. Several speakers made short talks and an oratorical contest was held among the young folks for the temperance silver badge the latter being taken by quite a young girl, Miss June Moyer from Pennellville. The Indian Doctress, known as the "Princess," made the last address, ostensibly as the representative of the W. C. T. U. but really on women's rights—mostly. The cause is a good one for which the picnic was given, and the day was faultless for such an outing.

Mrs Conger, the American artist and composer, who is well-known as an exhibitor at "the Salon," has just completed an excellent portrait of Mr. Paul du Chaillu, the African traveler. Mrs. Conger's charming studio at Eldon Lodge, Victoria Road, Kensington, contains some excellent specimens of female American talent. —Sun.

Miss Clarice Conger, an American artist of charming talents, who has a studio in Victoria road, Kengsington, has executed a full-length portrait of M. du Chaillu, the well-known African explorer, which is a marvelous likeness, reminding one of the free, forcible, style of portraiture of the late Frank Holl. If Miss Conger's "counterfeit presentments" are all as happy as the Du Chaillu representation, her services ought to be eagerly sought for. One reads a great deal of "speaking likenesses," but not often behold them on canvas.

A Marvelous Silk Quilt in Fulton.

The Universalist Ladies' Society has come in possession of one of the finest and most unique, silk quilts we ever saw or heard of. The material in it cost over forty dollars, consisting of silks, satins, silk plushes and velvets and lined with Surah silk. It is made in the form of the map of the State of New York, by counties, exact in shape, and each county of different color and named in embroidered letters. Lake Ontario is placed in it in water colored, watered silk and the heavy surroundings and border are of silk, velvet and plush; embroidered in silk chenille.

A year's work is said to have been put into it. It has been twice at the State Fair and drawn prizes, and is now to be disposed of in Fulton by this society, It will be on exhibition for the first time at the Universalist church parlors on Tuesday evening of next week, Aug. 13, at an Ice Cream Festival. Let everybody see it. Free to all. Go and see this marvel of skill and beauty.

The premium book for the Big Co. Fair to be held at Oswego Sept. 10, 11, 12 and 13th, is about ready to send through the mail to our patrons. We hope it will meet with a cordial reception. It has been thoroughly revised and corrected and we think very full and complete.

We are fully aware, that the people of the county make the fair, and we wish to concede to their wants and wishes in every possible way. We invite advice and suggestions, and will endeavor to profit by any plan advanced that will augment the success of our fair.

THE R. & O. MILLS ATTACHED.

In the Hands of Sheriff VanBuren on a Judgment of $412,000—An Early Adjustment Looked For.

At 2:30 p. m. yesterday, word was sent from the office to overseers of the different departments in the factory to notify the help to leave their work and go quietly home. No explanation was given. The speed stopped and the 1,000 or more employes passed out of the gates a mystified lot of people. It was soon learned however that the property was in the hands of the sheriff and it was unknown when it would again start up.

The company running the Oswego Falls Mills and the Riverside Mills at Providence, R. I., is known as the Riverside and Oswego Mills Co. It is a stock company in which the principal stockholders are E. P. Chapin and C. P. Chapin of Providence, R. I., president and vice-president and A. D. Juillard, selling agent. This concern bought out the Oswego Falls Manufacturing Co., which was organized about thirteen years ago, in 1884. Since this new company obtained possession of the Oswego Falls Mills, five years ago, they have expended $750,000 on it and consider it worth about $1,500,000. It is stated on good authority that up to June, 1888, the present company made very little money but for the past year their profits have been very satisfactory.

The seizure of the property yesterday by the sheriff was upon the attachment of $412,000 in an action brought by Julliard, Quinby & McKensie, of A. D. Julliard & Co., wholesale dry goods and commission men. The principal actor in the matter is Mr. Julliard himself who as selling agent has advanced money to the concern. Dissensions among the stockholders are reported as having hastened the present difficulty.

Mr. Julliard was represented here when the mills were seized yesterday by. A. H. Joline of the law firm of Butler, Stillman & Hubbard, No. 54 Wall street, New York and H. H. Whitman and C. A. Braman, the latter his confidential clerk. Messrs. Whitman and Braman are still in town. E. P. Chapin president of the company is expected here to-day.

R. Bradshaw and N. E. Burdick were appointed appraisers and were busily engaged yesterday afternoon and to-day.

The heads of the concern are always reticent about their business and very little can be definitely learned. There is every reason to believe, however that an early adjustment of the trouble will be made and business resumed in a very short time.

Even a temporary suspension of these mills which give employment to over a thousand hands and with an average pay roll of $22,000 per month is severely felt.

To send for the doctor every time you don't feel just right. My doctor's bill for years was over a hundred dollars a year, which made a pretty big hole in my wages. For the past two years, I only spent ten dollars, with which I bought a dozen bottles of Sulphur Bitters, and health has been in my family since using them.—ROBERT JOHNSON, [illegible] 18w2

In Memoriam.

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God in his infinite wisdom to call from earth our beloved Brother Augustus Herrmann therefore be it:

Resolved, That in the death of our beloved brother, Hiram Lodge No, 144 F. A. M. has lost a faithful friend and a worthy brother and the family a loving husband and kind father.

Resolved, That it is but a just tribute to the memory of the departed to say that we lament the loss of one that was in every way worthy of our respect and regard.

Resolved, That while we tender to the family of our deceased brother these resolutions of condolence and respect we would remind them of a happy reunion in that house not made with hands eternal in the heavens.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Lodge and be published in the village paper and a copy forwarded to Union Lodge No. 334 F. & A. M. of Bradford, McKean Co., Pa. for the family and to be published in the Bradford Era.

WORTH KNOWING.

The condition of barley is reported high in most sections of the country.

The wooden silo is vigorously defended by its advocates.

Only rich farmers can afford to own an old wind-penetrating and manure-leaching stable according to the Country Gentleman. Poor men must have good stables.

An enlargement is shown in the area devoted to potatoes, with an average condition of 91.1.

A large falling of of the area in tobacco is reported, amounting to over 23 per cent. on both cigar and manufacturing leaf, the latter sustaining most of the loss.

The general average condition of oats is 94.1, higher than the average for a series of years, and with the increased acreage the crop will prove a large one.

It is important that newly planted trees be shaded from the sun. Straw wrapped around the trunk up to the lower branches is successfully used for this purpose.

Some advantages of raising ducks over chickens are that they grow almost twice as fast, are free from vermin and less liable to disease. They are also good egg producers.

Ducks are mentioned by the poultry Journal as industrious destroyers of insect grubs, being especially fond of the grubs of "daddy long legs," which infest many garden patches. Ducks will dig for these and do much towards freeing the soil of these pests.

The condition of the corn crop is only medium. In the Ohio Valley the condition is lower than elsewhere. West of the Mississippi the crop is generally in fine condition. The general average condition is about 90; that for New York State is 80.

The Southern Cultivator tells a Georgia correspondent that Bermuda grass for Summer and Burr clover for Winter pasture furnish as nearly as practicable and all-the-year pasture. Plant the Bermuda roots in February or March and sow the Burr clover seed in July or August.

After the fifth or sixth year on the average, raspberry plantations are liable to deteriorate, the fruit becoming small and scanty; and as it takes a year or two for new plants to get into the best bearing condition new plantings every third year have been advised by some horticulturists. In this way one plat is just coming into fine bearing as the other goes out.

The returns of the past month indicate a very poor prospect for apples in most of the States of large production. The best condition is reported in the states west of the Mississippi River and on the Pacific coast. Maine stands at 85; Vermont, 65; Massachusetts, 68; New York, 59; Pennsylvania, 65; Virginia, 78; North Carolina, 85; Tennessee, 71; Ohio, 62; Michigan, 70; Indiana, 76; Illinois, 86; Kansas, 80.

Facts for Fruit Growers.

One who talks like an expert cultivator declares that a big pile of manure is the fruit-grower's bank. He adds that to raise strawberries successfully the ground must have rested the year previously as a Summer fallow. Currants will bear fruit for twenty-five years, and not lose their vigor. An established home market is worth five foreign ones. Three or four varieties of grapes are better than a larger number. Grapes do not pay as well as strawberries, but they pay 200 per cent. better than common farm crops. To succeed, a man must know his trade, be vigilant and honest, and not expect to get rich at once.

A Hint to Apple Growers.

An Illinois fruit grower is said to have forwarded the apple production of a young orchard very much by planting only sixteen feet apart requiring four times the usual number of trees. The redundant ones are girdled when large enough to bear; this both checks their growth and hastens fruitfulness, and they give a good return of extra fine specimens before it becomes necessary to remove them out of the way of the large permanent trees, then only beginning their yield.

Butter Making

Salt butter to suit the taste of your customers—usually one ounce to the pound is sufficient—advises Mr. O. M. Tinkham, a Vermont dairyman. Any sliding or grinding motion over butter is liable to injure it. To make good butter it is necessary to have a butter cow—the Jersey or Guernsey being best; second, feed well, June grass makes the finest flavored butter and for winter feed clover hay, cornmeal and wheat bran. Mr. T. thinks we ought to feed more roots and do away with artificial coloring.

Backache is almost immediately relieved by wearing one of Carter's Smart Weed and Belladonna Backache Plasters. Try one and be free from pain. Price 25 cents.

A horse that ran away in West Newbury, Mass., wasn't caught until it reached a town twenty-two miles distant six hours after.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mrs. Grant, according to a recent authoritive announcement, has thus far received about $900,000 from the publication of General Grant's memoirs.

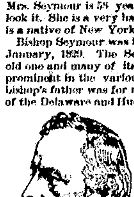
BISHOP SEYMOUR, OF ILLINOIS.

He Was Recently Married to Mrs. Harriet Atwood Aymar.

The recent announcement of the marriage of Bishop Seymour, of Springfield, Ills., created considerable surprise. The bride's maiden name was Harriet Atwood. She had been previously married to John D. Aymar. Her first husband was a member of an old, wealthy and prominent family of New York city. He died five or six years ago, after having become a chronic invalid. The new Mrs. Seymour is 58 years old, but does not look it. She is a very handsome woman. She is a native of New York state.

Bishop Seymour was born in New York in January, 1829. The Seymour family is an old one and many of its members have been prominent in the various walks of life. The bishop's father was for many years treasurer of the Delaware and Hudson Canal company.



BISHOP SEYMOUR

The bishop himself is well known as one of the most learned and eloquent clergymen of the Episcopal church. He graduated from Columbia college and took orders at the General Theological seminary in New York city. His first charge was that of warden of St. Stephen's college at Annandale, N. Y. After a short experience in that field he was called to St. John's church in Brooklyn. Three years later he became rector of Christ's church at Hudson, N. Y. In 1865 he was made professor of ecclesiastical history of the General Theological seminary in New York, of which he subsequently was made dean. It was not until nine years ago that he was elected to the Springfield bishopric. He is the author of several books which are considered authorities on ecclesiastical subjects and his masterful addresses to the Pan-Anglican conference attracted wide attention.

He is known as a pronounced high churchman, having been subjected to not a little adverse criticism on account of his so called ritualistic tendencies just before his elevation to the bishopric. In fact his marriage creates the more surprise from the fact that his high church beliefs and his long single life have created the belief that he favored the celibacy of priests, although he never preached on the subject.

His marriage was exceedingly quiet. He was married in the morning at Trinity church, New York, and walked from the Astor house to the church unaccompanied. At the church door he met the sexton, whom he knew, and asked him:

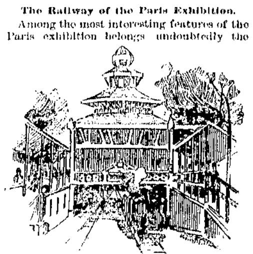
"Did you know that there was to be a wedding here this morning?"

"Yes," said the sexton, "are you to officiate?"

"No; I am to be the bridegroom," answered the bishop. The sexton was dumfounded.

The Railway of the Paris Exhibition.

Among the most interesting features of the Paris exhibition belongs undoubtedly the passenger railway which has recently been made accessible to the public. The immense space devoted to the different parts of the exhibition made the construction of a rapid and economical communication a real necessity, and its success, increasing daily, plainly proves its importance.



STATION OF EXPOSITION RAILROAD.

Conceived by the general director of the exposition, M. Alphand, the construction of the railroad has been executed by Messrs. Gaillot & Co. in such a short time that one hardly understands how they managed to surmount the numerous difficulties caused by the narrow alleys, the short curves which were necessary and the creation of an entirely new rolling stock.

The illustration of the railroad shows how carefully the builders tried to satisfy the public's taste. The features of the depots are of a rare originality and show a practical distribution. They look like pretty resting points and seem to attract the travelers' attention; they are, besides, protected from sun and rain by wide, tent like roofs. Well furnished buffets offer, at the end stations, their refreshments to the visitor. All in all the Paris exposition railway demonstrates at once the practical sense of the French people and their appreciation of the tasteful and ornamental—one of the most prominent traits of the Gallic character.

Swordfish.

Swordfish meat is firm and its flavor superior to that of the halibut, and it is entirely fresh and above reproach. It is a mystery that New York should so fail to appreciate a good thing. The coming of the swordfish is always an interesting fact, with no little mystery about it, too. They are not here and then they are here. Nobody knows where they come from and no one ever saw a young one on the American coast. They are raised in the Mediterranean sea, and the old folks, leaving the little ones behind, spend their summers along our shore, and chiefly about Block Island. It takes a pretty smart fish to lay his course from Gibraltar to Block Island every year without fail, and the movements and migrations of the swordfish are a noteworthy illustration of the strange and clever ways of fishes.—Hartford Courant.

William Hayden Edwards.

William Hayden Edwards, lately made United States consul general at Berlin, was born at Ripley, O., but has passed very little of his life there. He is one of the few Americans who have had somewhat of a diplomatic career, having in 1877 been secretary of legation in Brazil, in 1878 consul general at St. Petersburg, in 1882 associate counsel for the United States before the French claims commission, and, on the abolition of that court, chief of the diplomatic bureau of the state department. During the last administration he was private secretary to the late Isaac Bell, Jr., minister to the Netherlands. Before entering the diplomatic service he served as secretary to two admirals of the United States navy commanding European squadrons.

RHEUMATISM

For More than Twenty-five Years.—A Complete Recovery.—The Means Used.

I had Inflammatory Rheumatism. For nearly a year I had to be fed and turned in bed. I could find no relief. My stomach was ruined and cut to pieces with powerful medicines taken to effect a cure so that I was compelled to live on bread and water. I suffered for twenty-five years in this way. I was induced to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy made at Rondout, N. Y., and thanks to this medicine. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is my best friend. With it I am enabled to enjoy a good night's rest. Also food, such as meat and pastry, which I have been deprived of for years, showing that the Favorite Remedy has no equal for the cure of Indigestion and Dyspepsia as well. If any should doubt this statement I will send the ready proof at once.—Garrett Lansing, Troy, N. Y.

I Am Now Well,

It is my pleasure and absolute duty toward those who are struggling for very life against the deadly to add my testimony to the already weighty evidence of the wonderful efficacy of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. My wife was a hopeless case, abandoned by the physicians. An editor works 365¼ days per year to get out fifty-two issues of a paper; that's labor. Once in a while somebody pays him a year's subscription; that's capital. But later on justice Will overtake the last-named creature, for there is a place where he will get his deserts; that's hell.—Auxiliary.

The Early Fly.

It is in the morning early,
When we're sometimes cross and surly
And we feel that we must sleep a trifle more,
That the worst of all annoyers,
The great prince of rest destroyers,
The pesky fly begins his gay and festive soar.

We pretend we do not hear him,
That it's not worth while to fear him,
And we try to make ourselves believe we sleep,
Then he lights on arm or shoulder.
But he very soon grows bolder,
And directly for our ears begin to creep.

Then it is we giving up dreaming,
When our brain with wild thoughts teeming
We proceed to kill him with a fearful slap;
With a slam we spread our fingers
All about the spot he lingers,
But the fly escapes, we've nothing but the slap.

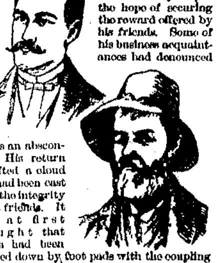
This performance oft repeated
Gets our patience overheated,
And we swear the house of flies shall be shorn;
Then we presently forget it
But we'll grievously regret it
When we try to sleep again to-morrow morn.
—Washington Post.

THE RETURNED BANKER.

Something About the Case of E. T. Brown, of Wichita, Kan.

The unexpected return of E. T. Brown, a successful young business man of Wichita, Kan., from an enforced absence of several months, is still a matter of quite general interest.

Mr. Brown was born in Baltimore and is 35 years old. At the age of 17 he went to Kentucky and was graduated from the State university. For two years he was a mathematical tutor in that institution and moved to Wichita four years ago. The first cut is from a photograph taken just nine days before his disappearance.



Different stories have been circulated as to his disappearance, but it is generally believed that he was assaulted, robbed of his jewelry and held captive, in the hope of securing the reward offered by his friends. Some of his business acquaintances had denounced him as an absconder. His return has lifted a cloud that had been cast upon the integrity of his friends. It was at first thought that Brown had been knocked down by foot pads with the coupling pin which was found near the spot where he had been last seen, while they were trying to steal his diamonds, of which he always wore $1,500 worth. It has been said that he was not foully handled, but bought some meat to get blood to put on the coupling pin and the hat, and the tracks were of the hack which had carried him to some obscure station, where he took a train and fled.

The second cut represents Brown as he returned home, emaciated and in a demented condition. The physicians who examined him and found a scar on the back of his head one and one-half inches long and half an inch wide, say undoubtedly that mental trouble was brought on by this wound. His physical condition is changed for the better, and there are hopes for his recovery.

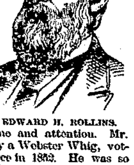
Mr. Brown has a very dim recollection of his wanderings, but as his condition improves his physicians hope that he will be able to clear up this mystery.

EX-UNITED STATES SENATOR.

The Late Edward Henry Rollins, Who Represented New Hampshire.

Ex-Senator E. H. Rollins, of Concord, N. H., who died recently at the Appledore house, Isle of Shoals, was born on Oct. 3, 1834, at Rollinsford, N. H., at that time a part of Somersworth. He never recovered consciousness from the severe shock of apoplexy recently sustained, and passed away very quietly. His wife and three sons were present at the time of his death.

Edward Henry Rollins received the first part of his education in the winter sessions of the district school, and later in the academy at South Berwick, Me., and the Franklin academy at Dover, N. H. He left school when 17 years old, and became a druggist's clerk in Concord, remaining there three years, after which he had similar employment in Boston. In 1847 he returned to Concord and entered into business on his own account. Success rewarding his labors, he built up a prosperous business, and accumulated much property. Politics and public service took up most of his time and attention. Mr. Rollins was originally a Webster Whig, voting for Franklin Pierce in 1852. He was so strongly opposed to the extension of slavery that he abandoned the Democrats in 1854, and joined the Know Nothing party, of which he was one of the acknowledged leaders. In 1855 he was elected to the state legislature from Concord, and in 1856 was chosen speaker of the house.



EDWARD H. ROLLINS.

Mr. Rollins was made chairman of the first state central committee of the Republican party in New Hampshire and held that position until his election to congress. He was chairman of the New Hampshire delegation to the national convention at Chicago in 1860, and in congress he was a firm opponent of the act of 1864 doubling the land grant of the Union Pacific railroad company and making the government security a first instead of a second mortgage upon the road. In 1869 he was chosen secretary and assistant treasurer of the Union Pacific railroad.

Mr. Rollins had an ambition for senatorial honors, and in 1866 he was named for the position, but Mr. Patterson, of Hanover, bore off the prize. In 1876, when Cragin's term had expired, the Republicans paid part of their debt to Mr. Rollins by sending him to the United States senate for the full term of six years. Mr. Rollins was connected with the Lake Shore road, now in course of construction, and was also a distinguished Freemason. He leaves a wife and four children. His daughter is the wife of Senator Henry Robinson, of Concord.

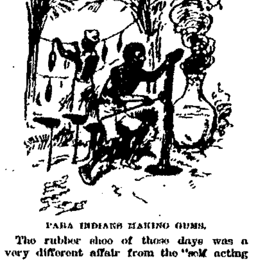
MANUFACTURING GUMS.

HOW THIS WORK IS DONE BY THE INDIANS OF PARA.

The Forerunner of the Present Light, Waterproof Foot Coverings That Are Manufactured from Cloth and Vulcanized India Rubber.

To the Portuguese settlers in Para is due the credit of first putting to practical use what is now the rubber of commerce. They no doubt found it serviceable in protecting them from the continuous rains of that country. The chief use to which they put it was to protect the feet, though in some instances it was spread in thin sheets and worn across the shoulders as a sort of cape. The Para Indians soon learned the simple art of making the rude rubber shoes and very soon many were engaged in the industry.



PARA INDIANS MAKING GUMS.

The rubber shoe of those days was a very different affair from the "self acting clog," "zephyr" or "arctic" of today. The Indians first made a model of a boot or foot from a clay peculiar to the locality. There was procured an earthen jar in which was built a fire made of dry palm nuts. The "maker," seated on a stool before the fire conveniently arranged about him his stock of lasts or models.

The "gatherers" brought in the result of their toil in large turtle shells. The "maker" was now ready for business. Taking one of the clay models in one hand, with the other he deftly covered it with the raw rubber contained in the turtle shell. The model was then quickly turned a few times in the white smoke of the palm nut fire, which had the effect of quickly coagulating the raw rubber. This done, another model received similar treatment, while the first was stuck on a stake to dry.

An Indian and one attendant would make by this primitive method about twenty pairs a day. The rubber was left on the model for some little time that it might harden. The clay was afterwards removed, the shoe stuffed with hay, and it was ready for market. Whatever such a rubber as this may have lacked in style and appearance was duly compensated for in quality, for it had the merit of being pure rubber.

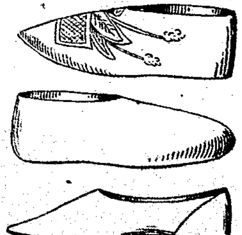
Soon the Indians learned to add ornamentation by way of tawdry gilding in unique designs after their own peculiar fashion.

The first rubber shoes ever seen in the United States were brought to Boston in 1820. A small box held the entire amount of the importation. At first they were regarded more as curiosities, but at length their merits became known. Three years later (1823) a venturous Boston merchant imported 500 pairs. These found a ready market at $5 a pair and upwards. This reception induced further venture until the annual importation amounted to upwards of half a million pairs. To Thomas C. Wales is due the credit of importing the first rubbers from Para. This gentleman had almost a monopoly of the rubber trade in the United States from the year 1825 to 1840.

The imported rubber very much resembled a sock foot, or, as a Boston merchant said, "they look like an Indian 'dug out.'" As will be seen by the illustration they were a little more shapely than those first made.

In 1841 shoe lasts were sent to South America to take the place of the clay models. This had the effect of giving better shape and form to the rubbers. The rubber business had now grown to some magnitude, due in a great measure to the decreased cost, as now rubbers were sold at about $1 a pair. The matter was receiving the attention of many of the most prominent business men, and many ingenious devices were resorted to in order to utilize this valuable product. In 1838 boots were made in New York and shipped to South America to be varnished or coated with the rubber gum. These, on being returned, were sold as gum elastic boots. Cloth was also sent to South America, a coating of the gum coagulated between two pieces, and on returning was made into a sort of cloak. One enterprising firm went so far as to have carpets treated in a similar fashion, in order that they might be impervious to water and grease. Another firm shipped quantities of sole leather, which, after being coated with rubber, was made into boots and shoes, and sold under a guarantee "not to leak or soak water."

The years from 1841 to 1844 were prolific in the development of the rubber industry. Crude rubber was brought to Boston as ship's ballast and sold at four or five cents a pound. The great difficulty experienced was handling this crude rubber after it had coagulated. And again, the rubber of those days required much care, as severe cold hardened them, while heat had an effect quite the reverse. No history of the rubber trade could be given without mention of Charles Goodyear, who may be termed the father of rubbers. Born in New Haven, Conn., on Dec. 29, 1800, like many others of his time, he became interested in the rubbers problem. In the year 1835, while in Philadelphia, he began his first experiment. So earnestly did he apply himself to the study he soon became so reduced in circumstances that it was said of him, "If you meet a man who has on a rubber cap, coat, vest and shoes, with an India rubber purse without any money in it, that man is Goodyear."



GUM SHOE OF 1835—FIRST GUM SHOE, 1820—RUBBER SHOE OF 1844.

In 1836 he discovered a method of depriving India rubber of its adhesiveness by dipping it in nitric acid. This method met with favor in the manufacture of shoes, and was followed until superseded by the better method of vulcanizing, which was first patented in 1844, the patent being issued June 15.

As is often the case in such matters, after years of patient toil and study the secret of vulcanizing was discovered by accident. In 1839 Goodyear began experimenting with rubber and sulphur. His only laboratory was such as his own kitchen afforded. One day [illegible]

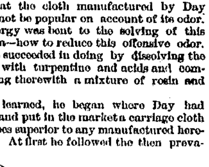
To his great surprise the rubber did not melt, but instead formed a solid crust. That night he nailed the burnt piece of rubber to the door post, thus exposing it all night to extreme cold. Much to his delight next morning he still found it perfectly pliable. After many further experiments—his only appliance being the family cooking stove—he learned the proper proportion of sulphur, and that 278 degs. was the exact degree of heat necessary to produce the desired quality of uniform flexibility and consistency in either hot or cold temperatures.

Goodyear had so often induced his friend to invest money in ventures that had proved failures that his present discovery was looked upon with suspicion. It was not until 1844 that he succeeded in interesting a capitalist who would invest sufficient capital to experiment on a larger scale. With Yankee shrewdness, he secured a patent on his method of vulcanizing. At length competency and honors came as a reward for his persistent energy, though the latter part of his life was harassed by infringements upon his patent. Large sums of money was expended by him in protecting his claims. It is said that Daniel Webster's fee as a retainer in one case alone was $25,000.

About the time Goodyear was experimenting with rubber and sulphur one Horace H. Day, of New Brunswick, N. J., became interested in the rubber business. He erected a small factory and began the manufacturing of carriage cloths and shoes. His method was to dissolve the rubber in turpentine, then spread it over cotton cloth. The shoes were made from thin sheets of rubber imported from Para. These were lasted on to sole leather soles. But in neither instance was the venture a success. The cloth was too odoriferous and would stick together, while the shoes were too soft in summer and hard as bricks in winter. As soon as the Goodyear process became known Mr. Day began the manufacturing of shoes by a process so similar as to involve endless litigation. But this did not prevent him making from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000, though he eventually died very poor.

When H. H. Day was erecting his factory at New Brunswick, N. J., in 1833, a German machinist was sent to erect the engine. That machinist was Christopher Meyer, who had come to this country from Hanover, Germany, in 1834. As Goodyear can justly be called the father of rubber, so did this machinist become the rubber king. It was while putting this engine into Day's factory that Meyer became interested in rubber. He saw that the cloth manufactured by Day would not be popular on account of its odor. His energy was bent to the solving of this problem—how to reduce this offensive odor. This he succeeded in doing by dissolving the rubber with turpentine and acids and compounding therewith a mixture of rosin and tar.

This learned, he began where Day had failed, and put in the market a carriage cloth and shoes superior to any manufactured heretofore. At first he followed the then prevalent method of making shoes with thin sheets of rubber for the upper and leather soles. This he soon improved by using a cloth quarter, but even then the shoes were so stiff in winter as to be difficult to put on or off. Yet these were the best in the market, and the demand for them grew so that Meyers' factory was soon turning out 1,200 pairs a day, at that time thought to be a gigantic business. During the Mexican war Mr. Meyer made considerable money by furnishing rubber pontoon bridges and boats for the government.



THE FIRST CROQUET SANDAL, 1868—FANCY CROQUET OF 1889.

Although the invention of Charles Goodyear revolutionized the rubber business it was some time before goods made by his process became popular. People had become so accustomed to the old style and quality that the new goods were regarded as some "Yankee notion." The goods were first shown to the merchants of Hartford, Springfield, Worcester and Boston. No one would buy them. The only way to introduce them was to leave a few pairs on sale with the retail dealers, with permission to present sample pairs to some of the most prominent and influential people of the city. H. S. Downs, who is still remembered by a few of the oldest wholesale shoe dealers, was the first salesman. His samples were carried from town to town in a [illegible] basket. At length the "new fangled" [illegible] caught the popular fancy and all the rubber manufacturers began to pirate the Goodyear process.

A marked improvement was made in the general appearance and style of the shoe. Manufacturers vied with each other in producing what was then thought to be unique styles. First a sort of buskin was the style, then came a croquet sandal, next followed a rubber with high quarters, but low in front; this changed to have narrow strips of rubber like straps across the foot.

Soon after the advent of the Goodyear process came higher prices for the crude rubber. As the old fashioned rubbers were from pure rubber, these could be made over by the vulcanizing process quite as well as the raw rubber from South America. Quite an industry was then started in buying up the old rubbers and carriage cloths, etc.; as a result very few specimens of these quaint old shoes are to be seen today.

Manufacturers still continue to improve in both style and quality their products. Those who complain of the poor quality doubtlessly bought what are known to the trade as "orphans." These are the poorer qualities, and the manufacturers, disowning them, stamp with the name of some fictitious company.

HIS FOUR SCORE YEARS.

ALFRED TENNYSON, THE POET, HAS PASSED THE BIBLE AGE.

A Brief Biography of England's Poet Laureate—Some Stories That Illustrate His Character—Is He the Greatest Living Poet?

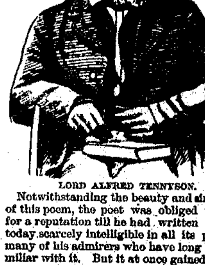
Many people believe Alfred Tennyson to be at the head of living poets. Not only is he accorded this rank from his position as poet laureate of England, an office that has been held by many of the greatest English poets, but his works are better known both in England and America than those of any other living poet.

Yet Tennyson, though living, may be said to be a dead poet. He is an octogenarian—his eightieth birthday falling on Aug. 6—and though it may not be impossible for so old a man to write poetry, no man of that age is likely to look upon the world with that "freshness of the heart," as Byron declares

> Which, out of all the lovely things we see,
> Extracts emotions beautiful and new;

and which seems to be essential to the divine afflatus.

Tennyson was born in 1809, at Somersby, a village in Lincolnshire. There were large families in England in those days, and the poet was one of twelve children, his father being a clergyman. At 19 he went to Trinity college and at 20 gained a gold medal for a poem on Timbuctoo. He seems to have chosen poetry as a profession from the start. But reputation did not come easily. Indeed, Tennyson did work which deserved to mark him as a coming light in the field of poetry without attracting especial attention. He published "The May Queen" without gaining much reputation, and the surprising part of this is that the poem is the simplest and best adapted to the great mass of verse readers of any of his poems. For years it has touched the hearts of, not thousands, but millions, and was calculated to commend itself at the time of its appearance as well as today.



LORD ALFRED TENNYSON.

Notwithstanding the beauty and simplicity of this poem, the poet was obliged to wait for a reputation till he had written a poem today scarcely intelligible in all its parts to many of his admirers who have long been familiar with it. But it at once gained Tennyson recognition as a poet. There are many elements in it to accomplish such a result. Whatever he touched he transfigured. Who but Tennyson could describe a vision of flying machines in such beautiful language as this:

> For I dipt into the future, far as human eye could see,
> Saw the vision of the world, and all the wonder that would be.
> Saw the heavens fill with commerce, argosies of magic sails,
> Pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down with costly vells;
> Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there rained a ghastly dew
> From the nation's airy navies grappling in the central blue.
> Far along the world wide whisper of the south wind rushing warm,
> With the standards of the peoples plunging through the thunder storm.

All this, stated in common parlance, means that the poet looked forward to a time when naval fights might take place among the clouds. But those articles, so tiresome to many who vainly endeavor to understand their mechanism—modern flying machines—are made poetic under the name of "argosies of magic sails," and there is something splendid in "the standards of the peoples plunging through the thunder storm."

The feeling and passion everywhere present through the poem are accounted for in the fact that Tennyson was telling his own story. When he was a promising young poet crowned with Oxford's academic laurels he wooed his first cousin, the story of which wooing he afterwards wove into beautiful verse and gave to the world. Another suitor, the wealthy heir to the earldom of Boyne, however, appeared on the scene and the fair Amy, afterwards so liberally adjectived as "false and servile," became a peeress.

Lord Boyne, who is the owner of large estates and valuable coal mines in the county of Durham, the heart of the northern coal fields of England, freely extended his hospitality to the bride's cousin at Brancepeth castle, a modern but imposing mansion. The poet repaid the kindness by satirizing the good natured peer, his brand new title and his recently acquired wealth most sarcastically in "Maud" and "Locksley Hall." Independent of his wife's very natural indignation, Lord Boyne was not gratified to find his beautiful home described by a recent guest as a "gewgaw" castle, or at having the world informed in verse, however harmonious, that his wealth had come from the [illegible], neither did he enjoy the thought that the tongues of the world were wagging over the story of his money having bought him a wife who preferred another lover.

In the year 1850 Tennyson was married to Miss Emily Sellwood, and in the same year succeeded Wordsworth as poet laureate, and by [illegible] "King," embracing four stories in blank verse drawn from the Arthurian legends, restored the poet's waning popularity, and was generally accepted as his greatest poetical effort, a verdict confirmed ten years later, when the cycle was completed by the publication of "The Holy Grail and Other Poems" (1869). In the interval between the publication of the second parts of his "Idylls" Tennyson had issued "Enoch Arden" (1864). He has since then published "The Widow, or the Songs of the Wrens" (1870), "Queen Mary," a drama (1875), and in 1877 another drama called "Harold."

The poet is, in some respects, like the musician, who depends upon his voice. Age interferes with both. To hear one who has moved vast audiences with an exquisite voice come upon the stage to make notes which rival those made on a cracked tea kettle with a poker, is doubly painful from the remembrance of better days. To read the verses of a septuagenarian who has sung sweetly in youth and manhood brings the same regret as in the case of the superannuated musician. Sixty years after Tennyson wrote "Locksley Hall" he wrote its sequel. It was written in extreme age and was severely criticised.

Tennyson lives at his home in the Isle of Wight. He eschews London almost entirely, never visiting it except when obliged to—living in a little world of his own. Some years ago, when Gilbert and Sullivan brought out an opera based on the poet's "Princess," he went to the theatre to see it performed. His home is a modest one. He has only one man servant in the house, but it is as comfortable and pleasant as most households of the same class. It is the poet's manners and customs which give it its individuality. It is understood that visitors do not disturb the great man's ways, and that he behaves in precisely the same manner when he has company as when he has not. Every morning, in hail, rain or snow, the poet dons his frowsy cap and his frowsier slouch hat and promenades for an hour or so, none daring to disturb him. Every day at dinner a bottle of port is placed before the host, and Tennyson retires with it (generally when dessert comes on) and leaves his guests at the table. The poet is to be found in his study, with his bottle by his side and a huge dock glass holding a pint. This is filled half with port and half with water, and the bard solemnly fills and refills till bottle and glass are empty.

Among the visitors Henry Irving, the actor, has long been most welcome. Upon one occasion Tennyson pressed Mr. Irving to take a glass of his precious port. Mr. Irving did as he was desired, but not being a port wine drinker, sipped it very slowly. Before he had finished it the decanter from which the bard had been automatically replenishing his goblet was empty. Lord Tennyson bade the butler bring a fresh supply, and, turning round to his guest, said dryly, "Do you always drink a bottle of port, Mr. Irving, after dinner?"

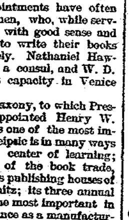
The laureate, however, though endowed with an appreciation of wine, has always partaken sparingly of it. He has not practiced and does not practice now a similar abstinence in the matter of tobacco. He smokes perpetually—a pipe always—and by preference a long pipe of the kind known as "churchwarden," and at each of his houses he possesses a divan, specially conceded to himself, in an upper story, whither he sometimes invites a friend to smoke and hear him read. No man's habits could vary less. After an early breakfast he devotes an hour to his correspondence, with his eldest son. Then he smokes, meditates, writes, and occasionally strolls in his garden till lunch.

TWO RECENT APPOINTMENTS.

Professor Mendenhall on the Coast Survey and Mr. Diederich to Leipsic.

The position of consul for the United States at a foreign city is not the most important in the world, but at the same time circumstances sometimes arise which prove—to the entire satisfaction of the consul, at least—that the job is no sinecure. The duties of Uncle Sam's consuls are many and various. For instance, a consul to a country which is only partly civilized, or where legislation has been imperfect or the administration of laws lax and ineffective, is often vested with certain judicial powers, authorizing him to settle disputes between citizens of the country which he represents. But the every day work of consuls has a tendency toward humdrumness. He has jurisdiction only over commercial affairs.

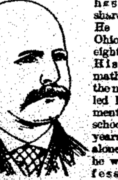
The authentication of a ship's papers is an event in the official life of the ordinary consul, and the necessity for taking charge of a shipwrecked seaman or two and shipping him back to Yankeeland at the expense of Uncle Sam creates a very perceptible flutter under his vest. Speaking generally, the consul is supposed to exercise a kind of fatherly care over citizens of his country during such time as they may abide in his consulate, and there his duties end. He must be courteous and willing to be annoyed by a thousand potty complaints from eccentric tourists, and must have sufficiently good judgment to avoid pestering the home government with useless and unimportant matters. Taken all in all, however, a consulship is not at all an unpleasant post. Appointments have often been made of literary men, who, while serving their government with good sense and zeal, have found time to write their books and enjoy life immensely. Nathaniel Hawthorne was at one time a consul, and W. D. Howells served in that capacity in Venice for a year or two.



HENRY E. DIEDERICH.

The post at Leipsic, Saxony, to which President Harrison has appointed Henry W. Diederich, of Indiana, is one of the most important of them all. Leipsic is in many ways a great city. It is a center of learning; it is the headquarters of the book trade, containing the enormous publishing houses of Brockhaus and Tauchnitz; its three annual commercial fairs are the most important in Europe, and its importance as a manufacturing city is considerable.

Among other appointments made by the president that of Professor Thomas C. Mendenhall, also of Indiana, as superintendent of the United States geodetic and coast survey has attracted its share of attention. He was born in Ohio about forty-eight years ago. His fondness for mathematics and the natural sciences led him to supplement his common school education by years of hard study alone, and in 1873 he was made professor of physics and mechanics in Ohio university. He remained there until 1878, when he went to Japan as professor of physics in the Imperial university at Tokio.



PROF. MENDENHALL.

During his stay he organized the general meteorological system of the imperial government, and he was also one of the organizers of the Seismological society of Tokio. In 1881 he returned to the United States and resumed his old chair in the Ohio State university. He organized the Ohio state weather bureau service in 1883, and subsequently devised a system of weather signals for display on railroad trains. Mr. Mendenhall became a professor in the United States signal service in 1884, and established stations in the United States for the systematic observation of earthquake phenomena. He resigned from the government service to accept the presidency of the Rose Polytechnic institute, of Terre Haute, Ind.

THE HAY FEVER SEASON

July, August, September.

"At this season, when life offers the greatest attractions and the most delightful resources to persons whose soundness of body permits out-of-door exercises and amusements, multitudes are debarred from the joys of the summer by hay fever, one of the most exasperating, wearisome, and depressing ills to which humanity is subject—obscure, inexplicable, descending on a given date like an invisible blow of fate. The sufferers from hay fever have looked in vain for any trustworthy remedy. Many of them, however, have looked in vain because they have been ignorant of Ely's Cream Balm, an admirable remedy for hay fever in all its forms. Agreeable in the use, entirely devoid of any unpleasant after-effects, this Cream Balm quickly allays inflammation and secures that relief for which the sufferer has longed in vain."—From the Christian Union, New York City, July 18, 1888.

BLONDIN, the well konwn rope walker, has wagered $20,000 that he can walk a cable from the top of the Eiffel tower to the central dome of the exhibition building in less than five minutes.

WHEN John L. Sullivan was taken back to Mississippi, he was made such a hero of, by all classes of Mississippians, even ladies in high social standing, who flocked to be introduced to him, that the governor of the state got angry and ordered Sullivan locked up in the city jail at Jackson, saying that he did not intend to allow a prisoner charged with a serious crime to be holding a levee and making a farce of the law.

THE St. Lawrence river is to be crossed at Quebec by a gigantic railroad bridge to cost $10,000,000. The The width of the river from shore to shore at Quebec is 24,000 feet (about 4⅗ miles.) Two main piers are to be constructed of sold granite in 40 feet of water about 500 feet from each shore. These two piers are to support a cantilever bridge of a span 1,442 feet. The total length of the bridge with the approaches, will be 34,000 feet (nearly 6½ miles.) The top of bridge from high water level will be 408 feet, and the largest ocean steamer will be able to pass under it.

H. M. Britton Dead.

General Manager H. M. Britton of the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg railroad died at 4 a. m., Saturday, at his home in Oswego, aged 58 years. The deceased commenced life as a railroad man at an early age, starting at the lowest round in the ladder. He possessed the qualifications necessary for a successful railroad man, and exercised them in a marked degree. In the railroad shops and as an engineer he gained practical experience which in later years proved of inestimable value to him. When in 1883 the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg road was purchased from the Sloan management, Mr. Britton was selected as general manager. It is said that he was prominently concerned in the scheme which resulted in the lease of the Utica and Black River railroad by the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg company. Mr. Britton did much to improve the service on the northern roads. He had been suffering from heart trouble for some time, and recently visited Europe in search of relief.

A Fatal Collision on the R. W. & O Road.

A collision occurred on the Rome & Watertown railroad about 8 o'clock Saturday morning at Forest Lawn seven miles from Windsor Beach whereby three persons were killed and a half dozen badly injured.

What is called a "stub" train had just reached Forest Lawn when the Thousand Island fast express came flying along. Although all was done that could possibly be done to stop the train, still it crushed into the stub. The rear car of the latter was completely telescoped and the engine of the express driven completely through it, and engine and car thrown upon the platform of the depot. The coaches of the express were thrown into the ditch and piled up in all conceivable shapes. A scene almost impossible to describe ensued. Shrieks of pain were heard from the injured and cries of horror from those who witnessed the catastrophe.

Those injured were taken to Rochester on a special train.

Just where the blame of the accident is to be placed is hard to state. One report has it that the Forest Lawn train had no flag out. Another that the express had orders to run no further than Forest Lawn.

THE R & O. MILLS FAILURE.

An Assignment Made Yesterday at Providence—Press Dispatches Bearing on the Failure—Work will Probably be Resumed Soon Under a Receiver.

The topic for conversation and speculation in Fulton and Oswego Falls during the past week has of course been concerning the factory. The wheels now stand idle and the thousand operatives await anxiously a decision whereby work may be resumed and they return to their posts. The stoppage of the mills is a severe blow to a large majority of the employes who depend upon its running for their living. The anxiety felt by the help is almost equaled by that of merchants on both sides of the river. It being known to all that a large share of patronage comes from the factory people.

Sheriff VanBuren is still in charge of the property who has as his deputy in the matter, Deputy Sheriff T. G. Poole who with assistants remains there night and day.

The appraisers R. Bradshaw and N. Burdick made their report Friday of last week that the Oswego Falls property including real estate, machinery and stock amounted to about $900,000. The inventory taken under the supervision of Superintendent Ballou brought it up to nearly double that amount.

Mr. Ballou was called to New York last Saturday night to attend the conference of stockholders which was to be held Monday when it was to be decided what action should be taken by the company. At the present writing the action taken is not definately known although it is rumored that an assignment has been made.

The discontent of the employes increases daily and unless prospects brighten for the opening of the factory, many will leave to accept positions that have been offered them elsewhere. It is stated that the Pacific mills of Lawrence, Mass. have written for a number of combers.

The affairs of the concern are complicated by the disappearance of Gideon P. Brown, treasurer of the company and a member of the Boston wool firm of Brown, Steese & Clark which is financially embarrassed. Brown left Boston on Tuesday of last week the same day that the attachment was made on the Oswego Falls mills and his whereabouts are unknown but it is thought that he is in Canada.

New York and Boston papers have much to say about the seizure of the mills. The New York Times said concerning the atachment:

Mr. Julliard of Julliard, of Julliard McKenzie & Quimby, dry goods and commision merchants, referring to the seizure made by his firm on Tuesday of the property of the Riverside and Oswego Mills company at Oswego Falls, on a claim of $412,000 borrowed money, said that the action was precipitated by an application made recently by the Oswego company to his firm for a loan. Julliard, McKenzie & Quimby have been the exclusive agents of the mills and from time to time made advances to the company until the loan reached the mentioned amount. They made cash payments for goods, and in addition accomodated the Riverside and Oswego Mills company with various cash advances. When the last application for a very large loan was made, Mr. Julliard decided that his firm should make no further advances until it was satisfied of the solvency of the Oswego company. He made a personal visit to Oswego, but the result was unsatisfactoy and the suit and attachment followed. The amount of the attachment has been reduced about $25,000 by the receipt of a consignment of goods which was shipped before the attachment was made. A further reduction on account of a similar shipment of good will reduce the amount of the attachment to about $375,000. The Riverside and Oswego Mills Company's invoices to Julliard, McKenzie & Quimby amounted to about $300,000 a month.

The general opinion in the trade is that the Oswego company got pinch through the failure of Lewis Brothers & Co., and the other recent failures in the dry goods trade. The company has been borrowing money largely, it is said, for a long time, but the recent failures in the trade made the banks extremely careful, and the company's credit on account of its inability to furnish collateral became embarrassed."

The following are Associate Press dispatches that bear on the matter:

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 9.—The Massachusetts Loan and Trust Company placed an attachment for $300,000 on the Riverside mill to-day. This makes $312,000 of attechments on the property here. Nothing is known of the whereabouts of Brown the treasurer.

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—George W. Hollis of the Hollis Dressed Beef and Wool company has assigned. His embarrassment was caused by the failure of Brown, Stees & Clark. It is stated at the office of the Hollis Dressed Beef and Wool company, that Hollis' embarrassment will not affect the company. The assignment causes surprise as Mr Hollis was considered well-to do. The assignees state that this action has been taken because Mr. Hollis has consigned a large amount of wool to Brown, Stees & Clark on which he has received no advances, and he does not know how much stock he has to realize on to meet notes due.

The value of the wool Hollis consigned to Brown, Steese & Clark on which he received no advances, is from $80,000 to $100,000. Besides this he consigned wool on which he received advances in the shape of notes which he discounted at banks and on which he is liable as indorser. The amount of this paper is not known, but is supposed to be large.

BOSTON, August 9.—The wife of G. P. Brown, of Brown, Steese & Clark, wool dealers, lately failed, is in an almost insane condition from suspense, caused by the continued absence of her husband who has not been heard of since last Tuesday. The missing man's brother expresses the opinion that the business affairs of the firm has driven him crazy. The friends of Brown say he has either committed suicide or has absconded to Europe or Canada or is wandering about the country demented.

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—A Providence special to the Herald says: "Wilbour, Jackson & Company, who handled Brown, Steese & Clark's paper, make the statement [illegible] Clark [illegible] had placed in this [illegible] in all about $200,000 worth, including the paper issued by the Riverside mill and that it was mostly five months paper.

"Mr. Wilbour of Wilbour, Jackson & Company went to Boston in the interest of his customers who had bought the paper to see what arrangements could be made with the Boston firm toward a settlement. He declares that Brown, Steese & Clark were solvent outside of their indorsement of the Riverside mills paper.

"The total liabilities of the Riverside & Oswego Mills company were last night placed at $2,700,000 providing there is no crooked paper out for which the company would be held liable."

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 10.—E. C. Chapin, president of the Riverside and Oswego Mills company, returned from New York to day. In regard to Mr Brown's disappearance he says he does not believe there has been the slightest irregularity to the over issue of stocks and notes of the Riverside Mills as the account for July was rendered, Aug. [illegible] and every note was accounted for, and the reason for his failure was owing to the sudden attachment by Juilliard & Co., which he did not know of until Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Brown had business with a large number of firms extending over a large territory, and the sudden nature of the catastrophe has doubtless affected his reason.

The five Boston banks and Mr. Julliard and Mr. Chapin had a meeting in New York yesterday and discussed selecting an assignee. All were satisfied of the good faith of Mr. Julliard's attachment for the benefit of all his creditors. Mr. Chapin had no doubt that this attachment was made with good intent and would result in the benefit of all concerned. A dispatch from Mr. Julliard to the Bulletin declares it an absolute falsehood that he has sold Riverside and Oswego Mills paper recently or at any time.

THE LATEST NEWS.

The Providence Journal of yester day says:

Great clouds of sooty smoke hung over the lime-stained towers and the dome of the Atlantic Mills and also above the chimney stacks of the Riverside mass of buildings yesterday, indicating that the wheels of industry had not been paralyzed by the "adverse business interests," as the employes term it, that have impinged upon the affairs of Messrs. W. C. and E. P. Chapin of the latter corporation. The entire force of 1800 hands was at work at the Riverside, with the exception of the force of 60 wool sorters, and they will be called back in a few days. They were out yesterday on account of the taking of stock that is going on inside. Those of the hands that brings their dinners with them sat in the shade of the brick piles and partook of their midday repast with appetites as hearty as if nothing had occured to cast shadows over the industrial atmosphere of the vast manufactory.

The stockholders' meeting, at which it was expected an assignment would be made, called for 12 o'clock, did not organize till just before 1 o'clock. It was a meeting held with closed doors. There were present Messrs. W. C. Chapin, E. P. Chapin, President of the Company, A. D. Julliard and a number of lawyers.

It was about five o'clock when Mr. W. C. Chapin appeared in the outer office and said: "No decision has been reached and the meeting is postponed until to-morrow." He said the absent stockholders were Gideon P. Brown of Boston and Mr. McKenzie of New York.

Yesterday was pay day for the wool sorters and dressers. As they anticipated, their wages were withheld to be paid at a future date.

AN ASSIGNMENT MADE.

The following is the result and it looks favorable that the mill will be in operation again in a few days under a receiver.

PROVIDENCE, R. I. August 13.—The Riverside and Oswego mill property in this and New York States was assigned this evening. The assignees are C. D. Owen of the Atlantic mills, this city, James B. Case, vice president of the bank of Redemption, Boston and Charles O. Braman of New York city, confidential advisor of A. D. Jullard. All the attachments have been removed.

The mill will be kept in operation. The attachments removed amount to $900,000. This evening, however, an attachment of $270,000 was placed on wool in which creditors of Brown, Steese & Clark claim an interest. It is claimed that the stockholders of the Riverside Oswego company are individually liable for the corporation's debt, as the corporation ignored the law demanding certificates annually, showing the indebtedness to be not above the capital stock.

The following notices was posted at the Oswego Falls factory the fore noon:

NOTICE.

The R. & O. mills will resume operations in full as soon as the formalities of the case are attended to which may require ten days. If an earlier start can be made due notice will be given, wages due employes will be paid in full on the day of starting.

WASHINGTON, Aug. [illegible]

During the President's absence at Bar Harbor the [illegible] have [illegible] away and all the offices that are vacant are generally disposed of to the entire satisfaction of the gossipers. The latest of the rumors is to the effect Secretary Noble will be given the vacancy on the Supreme Court bench and that Assistant Post-master-General Clarkson will be elevated to the Secretaryship of the Interior. Secretary Noble is quoted as denying the rumor. In view of the denial and of surrounding circumstances it is probable that the original plan will be adhered to and Attorney General Miller appointed to the Justiceship.

In Indiana people are devided as to the respective merits of Justice Wood and Attorney General Miller, as to which is the greatest Indiana lawyer. Unfortunately the fame of neither gentlemen traveled beyond the borders of the Hosier State prior to this year but the President is acquainted with Indiana lawyers and with commendable modesty, regards his own law partner as the best except, perchance, the President of the United States.

Mr. Noble's appointment at this time would be peculiarly unfortunate. His policy has been an active one and full of the promise of sensible reforms. He is a hard working and a fearless man. In so quickly putting his foot down on the frauds winked at in the Pension Bureau, which are now under investigation, he showed more resolution then secretaries are wont to exhibit in such cases. To promote him to the Supreme Bench at the present time would be to squelch his investigations and to leave the sincerity of the administration in question.

It is said that the President has told Corporal Tanner that in no case will he be disturbed and that he may rest assured of his tenure. If this be so, it may be that Secretary Noble would be glad to go to the Supreme Bench to relieve himself of the humiliation of insubordination in one of his bureaus. The incompetency of Mr. Tanner for so important a position as that of Commissioner of Pensioner was urged upon President Harrison previous to his appointment by such eminent counsellors as Senator Hiscock. If President Harrison has passed his promise to retain the present Commissioner, he will likely be compelled to recall it within a twelve month.

The appointment of either Secretary Noble or Attorney General Miller to the Supreme Bench would dispose of one vexed problem. When Assistant Postmaster-General Clarkson accepted the position it was with the definite expectations of entering the cabinet at the first vacancy. It was then stated that John Wanamaker had only accepted a cabinet portfolio for the honor it conferred and would be content with a short rule. But Mr. Wanamaker proved a better stayer than was expected. The only possible outcome of the dilemma, save of course that some obliging secretary would die or resign, seems to be by some one's promotion. In the event of Attorney General Miller's selection, Secretary Noble would likely be transferred to the department of Justice, where he would not drop out of sight as he would on the bench.

The Supreme Court, has, however, many attractions for a tired Cabinet Officer. Who would not live in a legal Andalusia, where there is only sufficient work to relieve the monotony of idle hours and where the satiated senses are lulled to slumber by the delightful consciousness of ones own importance. To continually move in an atmosphere of black silk and harmless mystery at $10,000 per annum for life, is not so bad after all. Ask Mr. Fuller, late a minor light of the Chicago bar, how he likes the situation with the added salary of Chief Justice. The members of the Supreme court are the happiest family in the world. They undoubtedly earn their salaries but as the Irish laborer said of a bishop's lot, "it's a nice, clean, easy bit of a job."

As a specimen of the rank nonsense that is sent from Washington to leading dailies nothing better has appeared for some time than a New York World special dispatch to the effect that the Washington banks have been temporarily embarrassed by the withdrawal of about $75,000 of the funds of certain Catholic societies. Apart from the fact that no such withdrawal can be ascertained to have actually occurred, it is absurd to suppose that the withdrawal of $75,000 could seriously affect the local banks which are among the strongest in the world and whose business involves transactions of the most extensive character.

Cheese Market Report.

(From the Utica Herald.)

AT UTICA.

UTICA, Aug. 12.

If salesmen could have had their own say about the market to-day we doubt if they would have made prices and higher than they were, after taking into consideration the New York market. According to reports, it was understood that New York was almost demoralized, and salesmen were prepared to take considerable lower prices. But there proved to be a sustaining power somewhere that kept the ruling from declining more than ⅛c and put the top within ⅛c. of New York top quotation. Is it true that Montreal is bidding on our cheese, as the Gazette of that city suggests? At all events the effert is in the dairyman's favor, and he will welcome assistance from any quarter. About one week of the July cheese still remains to be sold, but next Monday will clean it up. The cooler weather is in the makers' favor, and will enable factorymen to hold back stock if it shall seem desirable to do so. Sales as follows:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
78	7,755	7⅞
82	2,889	8c.
13	1,940	8⅛
13	1,328	8¼
7	649	8⅜
3	423	p. t.
157	15,531
	2,141	Com.
Total.	17,672

Ruling price 7⅞c. Transactions one year ago 15,849 boxes, ruling price 8¼c. Two years ago, 14,324 boxes; ruling price 11⅝c.

There were sales of 56 packages creamery butter at 18¼@20c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Aug. 12.

Cheese—We have had a pretty slow trade to-day owing to a decline in prices of about three eighths cent. Most dealers lost money on last week's purchases, and of course are pretty cautious to-day. Salesmen are not over anxious to sell at the decline, and most buyers have advised light shipments. Factorymen think they can safely sell light, as stocks are in fine condition and the weather continues cool. All are disposed to accept the view that this set back in prices is only temporary, and that it can not be long before improvement in prices shows. Following are the tranactions:

48	3,212	7¾
23	2,537	8c.
9	515	Com.
95	7,432
Farm dairy	1,117
Total	8,549

Farm Dairies—There were 1,117 boxes farm cheese sold at 7½c. to 8c., the bulk going at 7¾c.

Butter—Thirty-three packages of creamery butter sold at 17c. to 17½c, an advance of fully one cent. Twenty packages of farm dairy sold at 16 @17c.

AT FULTON.

Twenty-four factories were represented with 2,550 boxes of cheese at this market Monday. They sold at 7⅞ to 8 cents. Market slow.

The Young Men's Christian Association of Fulton and Oswego Falls have received word that A. T. Carson of Toronto has accepted their call to the Secretaryship of the association. Mr. Carson will commence his labors Sept. 1. He comes highly recommended and having had a special training for this particular work at the Springfield, Mass. training school together with his later work as Assistant Sec'y. at Toronto, in the association of fifteen hundred members it is thought he cannot but do excellent work for and with the young men of Fulton and Oswego Falls; From those who have met the young man we understand his heart is full of the work and he is what has been greatly needed a gymnast of no small ability. He is to start training classes in each of the different departments of association work in September so that hereafter thorough and systematic Moral, Mental and Physical training for young men will be carried on. The Madison University Gospel Band draw large audiences at their meetings in the Baptist church. "The Glad Tidings" issued from this office, and edited by Rev. Mr. Brunning, is coming out in a $2,000 edition for the Oswego Falls Fair. Our best business men are his advertisers. His first issue was very popular on account of its spicy articles of reading matter and news. Considerable matter for this new issue is now in the hands of the printers and we feel sure that this number will be fully up to the standard of the other. It is to be issued two weeks in advance of the fair so as to be in the hands of the public. It goes all over the county.

[illegible] the Mail Bag.

Some [illegible] months ago about 40,000 small circulars were printed at THE TIMES office under the direction of the Fulton Business Men's Association. No effort was made to dispose of these but business men, anxious for the growth and prosperity of Fulton sent in their orders for one or two thousand or as many as they considered they could dispose of to advantage. The 40,000 printed went like hot cakes. It is the plan and one that should not be overlooked to put one of these little pamphlets in every business or private letter that you write, that they may reach persons in search of a desirable place to locate. The advantages are well set forth in the pamphlet, so don't fail to hustle around and get some either of business men that have more than they are able to dispose of to advantage or at THE TIMES office where your orders will be gladly filled at a nominal charge. When you get them don't fail to send them out in every letter you write. From a source that you least expect, results may come that will be of vast imprortance to the village and community.

OBITUARY.

Thomas H. Nichols died at the home of his niece, Mrs. Carrie Leonard on Second street, Saturday, Aug. 10, at the age of 68 years. The deceased was deaf and dumb and had lived here over thirty years. Until within the past two years he had always lived at the Lewis House, where he was known to all transients that were accustomed to stop there as well as residents. He was a cabinet maker by trade. Funeral was held from Mrs. Leonard's house yesterday at 10 a. m. Interment at Mt. Adnah.

Rev. John P. Kendall D. D., of LaPorte, Ind., died of apoplexy at Baldwinsville on Saturday last. The deceased was born in Volney in 1832 and for the past eighteen years has been pastor of the Presbyterian church at LaPorte. Three brothers survive him. Dr. Henry Kendall of New York city, Jacob Kendall of Volney, and Dr. James V. Kendall of Baldwinsville. The funeral was held from the church at Baldwinsville yesterday.

Base Ball at the Fair Ground.

The factorymen took advantage of their forced "lay off" yesterday afternoon and assembled at the fair grounds where two nines selected from their number battled against each other for seven innings at that national game—base ball.

The winning side consisted of Winters, 1st base; Watson, 2d base; Fitzsimmons, l. f.; Hartigan, p.; Ellis, 3d base; Wilson, c.; J. Winters, c. f.; Rowland, r. f.; Davis, s. s. This side proved to be sluggers from away back and before they had finished 53 runs had been placed to their credit. Their hitting was of such a character that had Brouthers, Connor, Anson or Ewing seen it they would have turned pale with envy.

The nine competing against these were Coates, 1st base; Brooker, p.; Vanloven, c. f.; Lee, l. f.; Phillips, 3d base; Currier, r. f.; Willard, c.; Simmons, s. s.; Williams, 2d base. This nine was not slow at the bat and rolled up 40 runs in the seven innings played. Currier especially distinguished himself at the bat making no less than six home runs without once hitting the ball. Brooker pitched good ball and had it not been for him the opposing side would doubtless have made three or four hundred runs instead of fifty-three. After the game was called Messrs. Ellis, Lee and Currier set up the refreshments for the players. There was lots of sport yesterday but how are you feeling today?

The Big Fair at Oswego

is developing into a larger and more important exhibition every day. The secretary is kept busy answering letters of inquiry concerning opportunities and accomodations for exhibitors from larger cities who are anxious to add to our already large, assured display. Every effort possible is being made by the management to accomodate all who apply.

There are to be balloon ascensions two days, with the most daring parachute jump from the clouds. Jumping from a trapeze bar, instead of the basket as of old.

A wild west show upon the grounds and tracks introducing features of the wild life of the western cowboy upon his native soil, the boundless prairie and endless pastures. There will be the pursuit and capture of the indians who are making their murderous descent upon the Deadwood stage coach. The killing and drawing off of the savage band in their murderous work. The chase and the rescue of the reckless white girl who has fallen a capture to the savage red man; snatched from the arms of the wild indians by the intrepid cowboy, while both are upon the backs of the flying broncho horses.

The trial, conviction and execution of the western horse thief as done where no law is known; the riding of the wild steer by cowboys; the stage robbery, the picking up of the pistol from the ground by the cowboy, while on horseback under full speed; all the excitement of the wild and reckless life of the far west.

But space will not allow us to say more; but next week we will continue with still a greater list. All the attrations are free and cannot fail to be interesting and entertaining to the vast crowds, that visit our Fair in September.

Goodjon is showing some bargains in Gents' Low Shoes, and he also has a few pairs of Gent's Russet Bals left that will be closed out very cheap.

WORTH KNOWING.

The Wyandotte fowls are highly prized as winter layers.

It will pay to shake off a large proportion of the fruit from trees that are overloaded.

The deeper the milk is set the less airing the cream gets while rising.

Provide a place of shelter for fowls where they can be kept dry during hard rain storms.

Wagons and carts that are used daily should have the axles well greased at least three times a week. It lessons the work of the horses.

Rye straw, cut short, is the best material for packing eggs in barrels. Wheat and oats are more susceptible of retaining moisture.

Don't throw soft feed on the ground, where half of it will be wasted and then complain because "it cost so much for feed for those hens."

One advantage in well-tilled land is that the surface water drains off rapidly without washing and the land warms up quicker and seeding can be done easier.

After the crops are harvested and stored away is often the best season to secure good drainage in the orchard and garden and it is a very important item in securing a strong healthy growth of the trees.

Potatoes at fifteen or twenty cents a bushel are cheap food for milch cows; better than turnips at any price, if fed in suitable proportion with grain and good hay.

The quality of milk is effected by the food and water given the cow, by the condition of the stable in which she is kept and by the care of slovenliness used in milking.

The safest way to dispose of weeds is to burn them. Make a small fire of any wood, throw on the weeds, a few at a time. It is astonishing what an amount of green stuff may be burned in this way and quite a quantity or ashes will be left which should be spread. They will benefit any crop.

Terms Used in Gardening.

Young people, especially those in rural life, should familiarize themselves with the terms used in garden and farm operations, and understand their meaning. A little study and attention will enable anyone to do this.

For example, a seedling plant is so named to distinguish it from such as have been grafted, budded, inarched, raised from suckers or cuttings.

A seed-bed is a space for seed only—in smaller lots, seed-pan, box and the like for the same reason. Seeds may be sown in rows or broadcast; if my the former process, drilling machines are useful. There are also broad-cast machines for sowing grass-seed, and hand machines for drilling.

A seedling is said to be picked off when transplanted in its young or seedling state Race is used when a variety reproduces itself more or less uniformly from seed.

They Have Millions

Some of the richest women are the least extravagant in their clothes as in the case for example, with old Mrs. W. H. Vanderbilt, does not spend above $1,000 a year, and the late Mrs. Gould not so much. Nellie Gould, who will inherit $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 and already has an income of $40,000 a year, spends about $2,500 in dress.

The late Mrs. A. T. Stewart was a fortune to the dress-makers, who put away $8,000 to $10,000 a year on her furbelows. When she died and an inventory of her effects was taken, her great white mausoleum of a house on Fifth avenue was found to be run over with the most marvelous amount of clothes, laces, furs, bonnets and jewels, most of them very youthful in appearance, though she was over 70 years of age.

Mrs. Astor dresses with a solemn handsome expensiveness at the cost of $4,000 or $5,000 a year, and all of the younger Vanderbilt women spend a great deal of money on their clothes.

Mrs. George Gould, who was Edith Kingdom, the actress, and who has been the quietest and most careful of women since her marriage, spends money like water when it comes to a a question of clothes, and must put a good $10,000, a year in the hands of the dressmakers. Her dressmaker, by the way, is a woman who had a good deal of social position, but who, when financial misfortune came, followed the example English women of rank have set for years, and went into the milliner's business.—Chicago News.

The English lion growls a little at the action of the Rush in Behring Strait. It is the first time in the history of the world that a nation has Rushed the growler.—Binghamton Republican.

Wanted Vacations.

The chief physical good resulting from a vacation, or a summer in the country, is due in a majority of cases to a change of air and scene and to the greater amount of time one spends out doors.

Physicians are agreed that there is no such sovereign restorer of waste as pure air, taken in connection with just enough exercise and abundant rest and sleep.

It is discouraging to note what a large proportion of people at summer resorts fail to utilize their opportunities for improving their physical condition. At half the seaside places a majority of the people neither bathe nor go boating. The women eat too much, and sit on the piazzas to gossip and grow fat. The men laze and smoke, and in the evening play the same old games of cards in an atmosphere of burned tobacco and lamp or gas fumes.

In the parlors there is the same old competitive exhibition of gowns, figures and jewels that is seen in the winter, with simply a difference in fabrics and fashions.

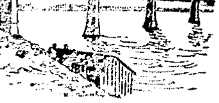
Drives and piazza promenades help the situation somewhat, but the summer outing loses half its value by being made so much an inning. To secure rational enjoyment and to store up vitality and vigor for the long season in town are the main objects of [illegible] in the summer. To miss [illegible] time and money—

TWO ST. LOUIS BRIDGES.

RAILROADS CROSS ONE AND THE OTHER CROSSES RAILROADS.

The New Merchants' Bridge—Its History and the Discussion Which It Has Excited—The Grand Avenue Bridge and Its Purpose.

The new Merchants' bridge at St. Louis has again become the subject of much discussion. The difficulty now seems to be to know what to do with it. When the project was first broached, the citizens of St. Louis were anxious to have the bridge built as a matter of course, but it is said that, now the thing is being done, the railroad companies propose to stick by their first love, the old bridge. The only reason for building a bridge over the Mississippi was to accommodate increased railroad trafic.

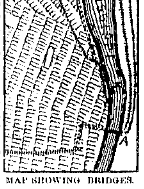


THE NEW MERCHANTS' BRIDGE.

The new bridge was first proposed as far back as 18[illegible]. It came up prominently in the transportation committee of the Merchants' Exchange during the presidency of S. W. Cobb, and on the recommendation of the committee the board of directors of the exchange appointed a committee of thirteen to take charge of the project. Of this committee seven gentlemen made up a board of directors and carried the plan through to the point of securing the charter from the government and the railroad franchise from the city. They then discovered the fact that the Merchants' Exchange could not build, own or operate a bridge or railroad. They then offered to surrender the charter and franchise, and asked to be relieved, but were requested to continue their efforts to accomplish the desired results simply as individuals. This they did, so that the building of the bridge is entirely independent of the exchange, and is the result of the efforts of a number of the enterprising citizens of the "Mound City."

The bridge people, of course, did not suppose that a man like Jay Gould, who was so largely interested in the old bridge, would like to have a new one built, and thus deprive him of a good share of the profits resulting from the traffic, but they relied on their financial status to carry them through.

Now, however, that the bridge has got so far along, it is claimed that Mr. Gould has put his financial finger in the pie and by delicate manipulation has arranged matters so that not a single railroad company will patronize the new bridge. In fact, it is claimed that Mr. Gould proposes to squeeze the bridge people so hard that they will be obliged to turn over the bridge to him, and thus, instead of having any competition, he will have increased facilities for railroad traffic at a lower price than if he had built the bridge himself. But, on the other hand, Mr. Cobb declares that there is not a word of truth in this, and in fact he has published an emphatic denial. That is the way the matter stands at present.



MAP SHOWING BRIDGES.

A—Old Bridge.
B—Merchants' Bridge.
C—Water Works.

The new bridge crosses the Mississippi at the northern limits of the city, at a point opposite Venice, which is a small town on the Illinois side of the river. At the point where the bridge is built, the river at low tide is 1,250 feet wide. The bridge has a span of 300 feet, and is fifty feet above the water level, as required by act of congress. According to the plans, the superstructure is supported on four masonry piers, founded on pneumatic caissons resting on limestone or rock. The two river piers are 12 feet thick and 48 feet long under the coping, and contain 1,250 yards of masonry each, the caissons on which they are founded being 25x70 feet and 17 feet high. The two shore piers are 10 feet thick and 48 feet long under the coping, containing 2,400 yards of masonry each, and founded on caissons 26x70x17 feet. The upper portions of these piers have straight sides with rounded ends. The lower portions have the ends slightly pointed so as to pass the water with the least resistance. The total length of the bridge is a little less than a half mile.

St. Louis has another bridge, which has probably attracted as much attention as the one described. It is in an entirely different part of the city and has been erected for a different purpose. Grand avenue is in the western part of the city and is considered, and probably is, the most fashionable thoroughfare of St. Louis. It is the Fifth avenue of St. Louis and it is here that, especially on Sunday, all the wealth and fashion of the city can be seen. But Grand avenue is cut in two by the railroads and the Grand Avenue bridge has been built over them, thus furnishing an uninterrupted roadway for fashion's march. The work on the bridge was begun three years ago and has but recently been finished. The appearance of the structure is very pleasing, combining in its plans massiveness with graceful.

In its construction only the very best material has been used, and it is the equal in every way to any bridge of its kind in the United States. The superstructure is of steel, with iron floor system, the whole resting on massive rock faced [illegible] piers capped with Missouri granite. The length of the bridge proper with its approaches is 1,600 feet. It is 60 feet [illegible] wide, the same as the ordinary street, with a 36 foot roadway and two foot paths on either side 12 feet in width. The approaches of the bridge are 200 and 210 feet respectively, and the three viaducts on each side aggregate 360 feet in length. The main span of the bridge is 700 feet in length, with a middle span of 400 feet in the clear. It is 0 feet wider than Eads' great bridge across the Mississippi and cost a total sum of $450,000.

Two steel towers, 55 feet above the stone piers, themselves 35 feet in height, support the steel eyebars, twelve in number, which take the place of the cables of suspension bridges. The bridge across the middle span is 40 feet in height.

This bridge is undoubtedly one of the most pleasing architectural objects in the city of St. Louis.

An Attack of Gravel!
The Terrible Suffering of a Woman at 60,—& How She was Happily Cured.

There is nothing I now enjoy that I do not owe to having used Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y. My troubles began in my kidneys and from which I never expected to recover. First there were pains in my back, I was feverish, with no appetite and could not sleep, I was compelled to use a cane, and finally got so weak that I could not stand alone. The distress in my back was terrible. I was burning up with a fever or constantly shivering as if cold. My physicians said which was alarming information. To add to my affliction after I had been ill about two years, I had a bad attack of Gravel. When this made its appearance my physician gave up my case, and I resigned myself to die. I had four doctors attend me, the best in the country, yet I constantly grew worse. Six years ago last June, how well I remember the time! I saw Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy advertised in our paper. After using one bottle I threw away my cane and went to New York on a visit, and three bottles cured me. I have never had a return of Gravel, nor of the pains or weakness in the back, and though I am over sixty years of age I am

HAD BRIGHT'S DISEASE!

Now Vigorous and Strong

as I was in my prime. [illegible]

The Doctor.

Oh, doctor, in our hours of ease,
We scorn your counsel as we please;
When peach and watermelon green
The bosom rings with anguish green;
When in the night the hoarse "ka-whoop"
Rouses the house with fear of croup;
When midst the storm that rends the skies,
"Newralagy" tackles grandma's eyes;
When roaring thunder c ouds low hung
Retards the play of ma's left lung;
When wintry drifts the roads impede,
And baby's nose begins to bleed;
When hub deep mud clogs the way,
And Tommy's ear ache come to stay;
Whene'er the least of human ills
Clamors for poultices or pills,
Come right away—no matter how—
A ministering angel thou;
All aches and pains are cured by you,
Save pa's tick dollar I owe you.

THE PROPER THING.

In the new woolens for next season's wear solid colors will prevail.

Simplicity of design is as much the fashion as brilliancy of color.

Plaids and stripes of great size will be popular during the autumn and winter.

Armure, faille francaise and brocades are among the first importations for next season.

Green promises to retain its hold upon the fashionable fancy during the coming season.

Gay woolen handkerchief dresses that are made up of eight large squares of serge or camel's-hair of bright red, blue or green, surrounded with black borders in irregular stripes will be worn by young ladies.

Rough-surfaced borders, like bourette with its uneven threads, are along the selvages of camel's hair in odd colors, and sometimes the rough bourette threads from figures of crescent, disks, or balls.

Tapestry coloring and designs are woven in the new scarfs that are placed down the middle of the skirt, a great flowered breadth being seen there as if beneath the plain wool sides that appear to open upon it.

A novelty for the coming season is ladies' cloth, (the smoothly woven faced cloth used by tailors,) with woven borders of stripes along the selvage, and in these the fancy for black is also shown, two black stripes—one four inches broad, the other only two inches—being a stylish bor ber for green, blue and rust-colored cloths.

Black woolens have all the rich designs described for colors woven on them in black, such as satin-like stripes forming handkerchief borders on camel's hair or serge, and wide panels of gros grain and satin blocks, plaids or stripes, and in escalier designs, like stars, or intricate geometrical figures. Raised velvet borders, both wide and narrow, are on the all-black fabrics in arabesque, palm, and ostrich feather designs.

Tardy Consideration.

"The blow would not be so severe," said President Allen, of the Forty-second Street Railway, when confronted with proofs of his fraudulent bond issues, "if I had to bear it myself: but the disgrace and suffering will be shared by my family." "I want to settle this if possible," said Lawyer Collom, the detected Minneapolis forger, on the same day, "for the sake of my wife and children. My disgrace is likely to kill my wife." The old question arises, Why did not these men think of their families when they were tempted to crime? There is a too-prevalent idea that the disgrace consists in getting found out. But the stigma is attached by the wrong deed, not by its disclosure. The honor and peace of these families were involved and endangered when their heads began to raise money dishonestly. "Consequences are unpitying," wrote a stern moralist. And a man who has a real regard for his wife and children will remember that before he exposes them to the consequences of his own misconduct. Moaning after discovery is a poor performance. It will neither avert disaster nor heal wounds.—World.

A man's wife should always be the same, especially to her husband but if she is weak and nervous and uses Carter's Iron Pills, cannot be, for they make her "feel like a different person," so they all say and their husbands say so too!

Another Oklahoma.

By perseverance and threats a sufficient number of Sioux Indians have been induced to sign a document by which a vast domain in Dakota reverts to the General Government, while they are transferred to another section of their reservation.

The territory surrendered embraces about 11,000,000 acres—an area more than twice as large as the State of Massachusetts. The Indians receive $14,000,000 in cash and still they have more land than they can profitably utilize. This is another move, of course, in the gradual process of forcing the gentle savages to the wall. Their extinction is only a question of time. The opening up of the big end of the Sioux Reservation to civilization will confer a vast benefit upon the newly born States of the Northwest. Another Oklahoma rush may be anticipated.—World.

Will be found an excellent remedy for sick headache. Carter's Little Liver Pills. Thousands of letter from people who have used them prove this fact. Try them.

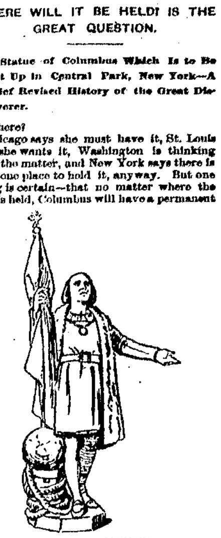
THE BIG WORLD'S FAIR.

WHERE WILL IT BE HELD? IS THE GREAT QUESTION.

The Statue of Columbus Which Is to Be Put Up in Central Park, New York—A Brief Revised History of the Great Discoverer.

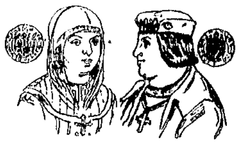
Where?

Chicago says she must have it, St. Louis says she wants it, Washington is thinking over the matter, and New York says there is only one place to hold it, anyway. But one thing is certain—that no matter where the fair is held, Columbus will have a permanent testimonial to his memory in the statue which will be put up in Central park, New York, and a cut of which is given with this article. The statue is a very stately piece of sculpture, as will be seen from the cut, and is the work of the famous Spanish sculptor, Sunal.



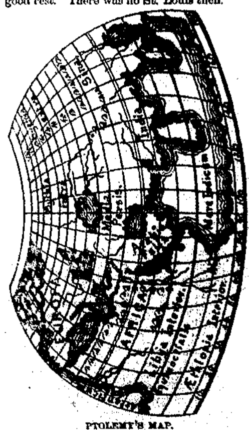
STATUE OF COLUMBUS.
[To be erected in Central park, N. Y.]

It is not generally remembered, but there was celebrated in 1792 the third centennial of the discovery of America, and although it was not of such grand proportions as the coming event, yet as an evidence of the sentiment of the time it deserves attention. The event was held in Boston on Oct. 23, 1792, and it is a curious fact that the learned men of the day, in calculating the difference between the old and new style, made a serious error, and the event was in consequence celebrated on the wrong day. It should have taken place on the 21st. Previous to this time, however, the name of Columbus was not so familiar to the people, and it was not until the Massachusetts Historical society and the Columbian order in New York took the matter up, that the fame of Columbus became fully established and the misconceptions regarding the magnitude of his work were dispelled.



FERDINAND AND ISABELLA.

If Christopher Columbus had ever dreamed that, after spending seventeen years in raising enough money to pay his passage to America, there would be such a fuss over the event, it would have made him feel sad, but then Columbus didn't know anything about it. No one knew, or at that time thought, much about the World's fair. The great problem of the latter part of Columbus' time was how to keep out of jail—not that he had ever done anything to deserve it, however—and this occupied most of his time to the exclusion of the claims of St. Louis and Chicago. He was much afflicted, and now they think it is about time to make a few amends, even if he has been dead for some time. They propose to do something in memory of the man who went out of his way to find a new place to spend a vacation. At that time there were no good places where a man could go and spend a few weeks where he had a good time and be all alone; in fact, take a good rest. There was no St. Louis then.



PTOLEMY'S MAP.

Columbus was almost the only man of his time who held that the world was round. There was a very curious notion of the shape of the existing earth, which is well shown in the accompanying map, gotten up by Mr. Ptolemy. The fact of the matter was that very little was known and the whole fabric of geography was so tinctured with superstition that it was hard to discover the few grains of truth. Columbus, however, had the right idea. He had it firmly established in his mind that if he only sailed far enough to the westward he would strike land. He thought, however, that he would strike India. The only trouble with Columbus was that he thought the earth was smaller than it really is. But this little misconception is shared by several people today.

On the 3d of August, 1492, Columbus set sail from Palos and bore away toward the West Indies. It was a little early for the season at San Domingo. People don't usually go down there until well along in the winter, but Columbus wanted to get a good start. After they had sailed many days the men concluded that Columbus had made a slight error in his calculations, and wanted to 'bout ship and go back, but Columbus, knowing that something of this sort was bound to happen, had anticipated them. Putting his long my fingers apparently into the sea he picked up a piece of seaweed which he had carefully tacked to the vessel's side before sailing, and then going down into the cabin and grabbing a pet canary which he had concealed carefully in the pocket of one of his wife's dresses, he rushed back on deck and exclaimed:

"Fools! Is this not evidence enough that we are near land? Look first at the seaweed and then at this fatigued bird which just flew into my hands."

This convinced the men, and they shrank back to the forecastle, while Columbus, carefully [illegible]

[illegible] down to the present day, but few people know that it originated with Columbus. It has been a matter of common history that when Columbus landed he unearthed a band of natives who were in hiding on Cat Island, just inside the city limits, and the following conversation ensued:

Spokesman (of natives)—When did you arrive?

Columbus—We just got in.

Spokesman (turning sadly to his comrades)—It's no use kicking, boys; we're discovered at last.

This story, however, is not authenticated, and as Irving has left it out of his history it may be set down as mythical. There is some dispute as to whether Columbus landed at Cat Island (or San Salvador) or San Domingo. Columbus was at that time a member of the Thirteen club, and he had planned previously to make his landing on Friday, Oct. 12. He stayed around the West Indies some months, wasting much valuable time which might have been spent in advertising in the Spanish papers, but finally turned his face toward Spain and landed there on Friday, March 15, 1493. He was met by Ferdinand and Isabella, who asked him, before he had time to get ashore, his impressions of America. Calling up his favorite typewriter, Columbus rapidly dictated a few words, which were put in a book with wide margins and illustrations of himself in the act of discovering America, and which sold on the news stands like hot cakes.

In September, 1493, Columbus went on a second voyage and discovered the Windward Islands. They were to windward of him when first seen, hence the name. If the wind had been blowing the other way they would have been called the Leeward Islands. Columbus returned to Cadiz in due time, and again set sail on his third voyage on May 30, 1498. This time he wasn't so successful, and about the only thing that he discovered was that his friends had gone back on him, and after he had been accused of various things he was put in fetters.

The king of Spain, however, thinking that perhaps Columbus' feelings might be hurt by his confinement, had him released and he went back to Spain, where he died amid ungrateful people. But then Chicago hadn't been enlarged and they didn't appreciate fully the value of his discovery.

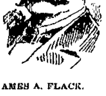
Now after so many years have passed away, American citizens are going to make up for lost time and show that they are full of gratitude for what Columbus did for them.

TOM MASSON.

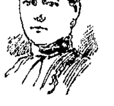
THE FLACK DIVORCE CASE.

One of the Most Sensational That Has Developed in America.

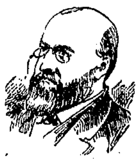
There has been no greater divorce sensation in the United States than that caused by the developments in the Flack case. The barest outline of the facts furnishes material for one of the most extraordinary plots for story or stage that has ever been evolved, either in real life or fiction. A high court officer determines that he must be rid of his wife. Instead of trying to get a divorce from her he has her personated before the court and a divorce is obtained from him by her on the most serious charges. She is kept in ignorance of this, but believes a separation simply has been agreed to. The public knows nothing of the whole business, and the denouement comes when the story is divulged. The dramatic personæ, besides the husband and the wife, include Judge Bookstaver, who presided at the alleged trial, the son of the parties, the referee, "Mrs. Raymond," the woman in the case, etc., etc.



JAMES A. FLACK.



MRS. RAYMOND.

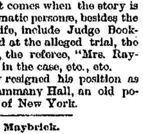


JUDGE BOOKSTAVER.

Flack has already resigned his position as grand sachem of Tammany Hall, an old political organization of New York.

Mrs. Maybrick.

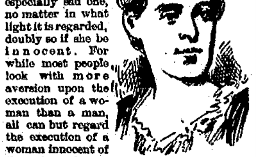
The story of Mrs. Maybrick, the American wife of a Liverpool cotton merchant, who has been convicted of poisoning her husband to his death, is familiar to all newspaper readers. It is an especially sad one, no matter in what light it is regarded, doubly so if she be innocent. For while most people look with more aversion upon the execution of a woman than a man, all can but regard the execution of a woman innocent of the crime of murder with the greatest horror. But the jury has found her guilty and the law, justly, makes no distinction in regard to sex.



MRS. MAYBRICK.

It Will Rise from Its Ashes.

It is gratifying to know that Spokane Falls, the Washington city that suffered so severely from fire the other day, will shortly be rebuilt, and that in a more substantial manner than before. The cut of the city before the fire here given is from a photograph, and shows the beautiful falls from which the place takes its name.



SPOKANE FALLS BEFORE THE FIRE.

Gen. Grenfell.

Gen. Grenfell, who led the combined British and Egyptian forces with such marked success against the Dervishes at Toski the other day, has in this action again proven his right to be called an able commander. The movement of the Dervishes, which he stopped, was first checked on July 2 at Arguin, when Col. Wodehouse, the officer in command of the Egyptian advance guard, dealt a severe blow at Wad-el-N'Jumi and his followers. He was not, however, strong enough to block their advance, while on their side the loss of 500 killed and wounded and as many prisoners did not avail to stop their march toward the north. PITTSBURG'S EXPOSITION.

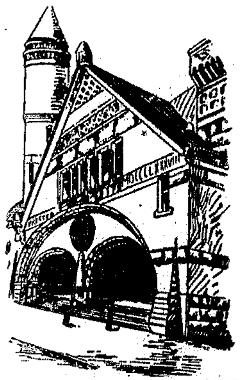
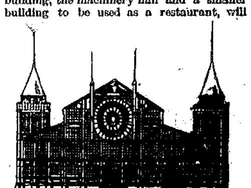
It Will Open Sept. 4 and Continue Until Oct. 19.

Pittsburg is going to hold an exposition, beginning Sept. 4 and closing Oct. 19, the object being, of course, to make the world acquainted with Pittsburg's resources. Since 1886 the era of improvement has been marked. Many who are interested in the material interests of the United States have been attracted to Pittsburg by the introduction of natural gas, and it is predicted that Pittsburg will eventually rank first in the manufacture of finished articles, as she now leads in the manufacture of iron, steel and glass.



EAST ENTRANCE, MAIN EXPOSITION BUILDING.

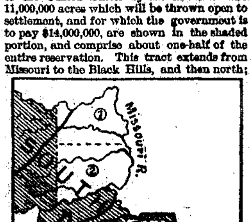
The importance of an industrial exposition was recognized four years ago, when the Western Pennsylvania Exposition society was incorporated. The object of the association was "to advance the industrial arts and sciences, and of agriculture and horticulture; also the establishment of a polytechnic school." The site chosen for the buildings is between Third street and "the Point," on Duquesne way, opposite the old Exposition buildings. Allegheny river bounds the northwestern, the city the southeastern side of the new buildings. The cost of the exposition building, the machinery hall and a smaller building to be used as a restaurant, will amount to $350,000. It is also intended to erect a music hall of magnificent proportions, and there is a possibility of the levee between the exposition grounds and the Sixth street bridge being turned into a public park and promenade; active steps have already been taken in that direction.



MACHINERY HALL, PITTSBURG.

These They Cede and These They Keep.

The map here given shows the Sioux reservation, parts of which were recently ceded to the United States by the Indians. The 11,000,000 acres which will be thrown open to settlement, and for which the government is to pay $14,000,000, are shown in the shaded portion, and comprise about one-half of the entire reservation. This tract extends from Missouri to the Black Hills, and then north; it embraces also a part of the fertile Winnebago-Crow Creek reservation on the east bank of the Missouri river, south of Pierre. The area of this great tract is equal to that of New Hampshire and Massachusetts combined. Two great railroads run into Pierre, which is opposite the centre line and but half a mile distant from the border. It is estimated that farms can be provided for not less than 70,000 families. Already the slans are gathering along the shores of the Missouri, and a rush equal to that which marked the opening of the Oklahoma lands is expected to begin as soon as President Harrison shall give the word.



1. Proposed Standing Rock reservation. 2. Proposed Cheyenne River reservation. 3. Proposed Presho Lower Brule reservation. 4. Proposed Crow Creek reservation. 5. Oglalla Sioux reservation. 6. Proposed Pine Ridge reservation. 7. Proposed Rosebud reservation. 8. Military reservation.

[illegible]

ALMOST EIGHTY YEARS.

THE AGE OF DR. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, POET AND SURGEON.

His Profession Has Perhaps Absorbed Most of His Attention, but It Is His Poetry and His Philosophy by Which He Will Be Remembered.

Among distinguished Americans, for pure brilliancy, Oliver Wendell Holmes should rank very high. On the 29th of August, 1889, the doctor will celebrate his eightieth birthday, and will then enter upon the period called octogenarian. For half a century he has been the delight of all who love a bon mot or a comic or humorous bit of verse sprinkled with pathos, and only a year ago he published an account of a trip abroad which he made at an age when most men prefer to be dozing by the fireside.

Dr. Holmes was born in Cambridge, Mass., and breathed a literary atmosphere from the day of his birth. When old enough to go away to school he was sent to the Phillips Andover academy. Here he began to make verses by translating the first book of Vergil's "Æneid" into heroic couplets. In 1825 he entered Harvard. There he was a frequent contributor to the college periodicals, and when the appointments for commencement were given out Holmes was made the poet. That his standing in scholarship was excellent is manifest from the fact that he was chosen a member of the Phi Beta Kappa society, which selects its members from those who stand among the highest.

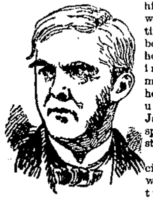
The young graduate found himself famous within a year after his graduation. Many a literary man has attracted his first notice in a literary way by a few verses hitting off some topic at the time uppermost in the popular mind. In 1830 it was proposed to break up the old frigate Constitution. One day there appeared in The Boston Advertiser a protest against such a desecration beginning:

Ay, tear her tattered ensign down,
Long has it waved on high.

The author was O. W. Holmes. The piece took at once, was copied widely in the newspapers, circulated in handbills, and saved the ship.

Holmes studied law for a year at the Cambridge law school, but if he did not learn more of literature than law he at least produced more in the literary field, for he wrote a number of humorous pieces which added to his reputation as a writer. It was destined that he should be a physician, however, and having changed his mind as to the law he studied medicine under Dr. James Jackson, and then spent three years studying abroad.

But while medicine furnished him with work, literature presented a field for amusement. The year he received his medical degree (1836) he published a book containing his poems to that date. This volume contained one of the best known as well as the most delicate mixtures of the comic and the pathetic in all his pieces: "The Last Leaf."



OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES

Dr. Holmes served for awhile as professor of anatomy and physiology at Dartmouth, and in 1849 filled the same chair in the medical school at Harvard. While he is not known to the public as a writer on medical topics, he gained three of the Boylston prizes for medical dissertations. They were published together in 1838. Besides these he has published half a dozen books on medical science.

When in 1857 James Russell Lowell began his work as editor of a new magazine called The Atlantic Monthly, Dr. Holmes was called upon to put a shoulder to the wheel and start the new enterprise on the road to popular favor. He began with a series of papers called the "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table." Twenty-five years before he had begun a series of articles with that title for The New England Magazine. The papers not only successfully launched the magazine but when published in book form became the most popular piece of literary work bearing the author's name, not only then but ever afterwards. Indeed they were so fascinating that the public eagerly absorbed everybody "at the breakfast table" that Dr. Holmes would write about. "The Professor at the Breakfast Table" and "The Poet at the Breakfast Table" followed the "Autocrat" and are still regarded among the doctor's best works.

In verse Dr. Holmes has touched very little that is not especially noted for the sparkling rather than the poetic. He has written some pieces, however, in which there is the true poetic ring. Perhaps the best specimen of this kind of verse in his works is "The Chambered Nautilus." The most marvelous feature, however, about him, is the work which he has been able to do upon occasion. Let there be a meeting of his classmates to celebrate their past in college, a dinner of doctors, a supper of authors; Dr. Holmes would be called upon to cook up something choice in verse to grace the literary menu. And when the feast was set the doctor's dish would not only be devoured by the classmates or doctors or authors, but would be seized upon by the whole public. Indeed many of his choicest pieces were produced in this way.

Dr. Holmes during his long life in literature wrote only two novels—"Elsie Venner," a study of heredity, and "The Guardian Angel." "Elsie Venner" being a scientific novel, its appreciation is limited, and the author succeeded in his novels rather in drawing character than for dramatic power.

Beyond his literary work Oliver Wendell Holmes is known among his friends as a genial companion and especially a wit. One of his witticisms, produced more than thirty years ago, has crept into various forms and been attributed to others, but it was perpetrated by the doctor himself. It is this:

Dr. Holmes was one day standing about an autopsy table. He is a little man, and a number of other physicians in attendance were all exceptionally large men. Holmes looked up at the massive frames about him and for a moment seemed to be impressed with his own insignificance. But it did not take him long to recover his equanimity. "Upon my word, gentlemen!" he exclaimed, glancing with a twinkle in his eye from one to the other, "I feel like a three cent piece among a lot of pennies!"

The doctor in his poetical works, best of all American poets, touches the modern taste. Such poets as Will Carleton, Lowell (in his "Biglow Papers") and Bret Harte and John Hay are of this school, but Holmes overtops them all; while the plane on which his poems are written is far higher than theirs. In some there is a depth of meaning unnoticed by the casual reader, but what remains is so good that it stands of itself. The "Wonderful One Horse Shay," for instance, was written to show a collapse of logical reasoning. But few of those who have read it know this; yet the "One Horse Shay" still lives, perhaps the most popular of all the doctor's efforts. Fortunately for his admirers, the author also still lives, and is honored not as poet, author, wit, humorist, alone, but as an original in all these, and as the most genial and lovable of men.

IT IS FOOLISH

To send for the doctor every time you don't feel just right. My doctor's bill for years was over a hundred dollars a year, which made a pretty big hole in my wages. For the past two years, I only spent ten dollars, with which I bought a dozen bottles of Sulphur Bitters, and health has been in my family since using them.—ROBERT JOHNSON, Machinist. 13w2

THE HAY FEVER SEASON

July, August, September.

"At this season, when life offers the greatest attractions and the most delightful resources to persons whose soundness of body permits out-of-door exercises and amusements, multitudes are debarred from the joys of the summer by hay fever, one of the most exasperating, wearisome, and depressing ills to which humanity is subject—obscure, inexplicable, descending on a given date like an invisible blow of fate. The sufferers from hay fever have looked in vain for any trustworthy remedy. Many of them, however, have looked in vain because they have been ignorant of Ely's Cream Balm, an admirable remedy for hay fever in all its forms. Agreeable in the use, entirely devoid of any unpleasant after-effects, this Cream Balm quickly allays inflammation and secures that relief for which the sufferer has longed in vain."—From the Christian Union, New York City, July 18, 1888.

THE awful suggestion is made that Brown Sequard's elixir of life may be administered to our vast army of pensioners. The country is grateful to its defenders and wants to treat them liberally, but the prospect that they may live two or three hundred years, drawing their pensions every quarter day with all the vigor of youth, is enough to turn the hair of the tax payer gray. No, if the pensioners are inoculated, the rest of us must have a double dose.—N. Y. Tribune.

THE proprietors of tenement houses which are without proper means of escape in case of fire are again receiving a scourging from the metropolitan press, and with good reason. The last of the long list of disasters from fire in these houses is that of Monday morning when a five story tenement house on Seventh avenue, containing over sixty people caught fire and nine were smothered or burned to death, being unable to escape owing to bad exits. The press does great good in its work against criminal carelessness.

THE bruiser John L. Sullivan was sentenced to a year's imprisonment in Mississippi last Saturday. An appeal was however made and John L. was released on $1,000 bail until the third Monday in Feburary 1890 when his case will come up again before a higher court. He has returned to New York and received an ovation all the way along the route and on his arrival at the metropolis. Kilrain is now there and the same modus operandi will doubtless be gone through with. There should be no appeel in the case of either and a year is too short a time for their incarnation.

William McKinley of Ohio, Gen. H. A. Barnum and Hon. Charles T. Saxon are down for speeches to-day.

Auer's battery of artillery (6 pieces) and Captain Remick's battery of Oneida are announced to take part in the great sham battle to-morrow. Post Schenck of this village are there in large numbers.

Parish.

(Special Correspondence to THE TIMES.)

On account of the increase of business in this place, the railroad company is putting an addition to the depot of twenty feet.

At our school meeting H. A. Mosher and Edwin Palmer were re-elected members of the Board of Education. There is a change of teachers in our school, in principal and preceptress, Prof. E. E. Scribner, a graduate of the classical department of the Oswego Normal school and who has also attended Cornell University several years, is principal, and Miss Alma Blanchard a graduate of the classical department of the Cortland Normal school is preceptress. The fall term commences Sept. 2d, 1889.

THE FULTON TIMES last week brought us the sad news of the death of little Hazel Holly. The grief stricken parents have our deepfelt sympathy.

Hastings and Parish are somewhat excited over the elopement of Mrs. Daniel Davey with her husband's brother, Henry Davey, which took place last week Tuesday. There has been numerous improprieties for some time. They eluded the attention of the husband by the woman going to Parish station to get on the train and Henry going to Mallory to get on the same train. The train was going south. The woman took their only child along, a boy about six years of age. The husband is in grief particularly in the loss of the boy. Henry had lived in the family for some time. He had no wife. The parties were residents near Hastings station.

Haying is nearly finished. Oat harvest is progressing. The crop on high land is very good. There is but little fruit this year. Potatoes are stricken with blight.

The next Oswego County Council of the Patrons of Husbandry will be held at Parish, Tuesday, Sept. 3d. Let all grangers attend. The Parish grange will furnish tea and coffee for all who attend, the grangers furnishing their own lunch. Hotel charges will be reasonable.

The 14th annual meeting of the Old Settlers' association of Oswego county will be in Gilbert's Grove, at Richland Station, on Friday, Aug. 23, 1889, and to begin about 10:30 o'clock a. m. The oldest persons in the county are expected at the re-union, and likewise the oldest residents. Short speeches will be the order of the day and an opportunity for the old folks, as well as the young, to enjoy themselves. It will be understood to be a basket picnic, so that all who attend will take a lunch with them to put on tables prepared for the occasion. Mr. Gilbert has generously tendered the use of his buildings and grounds free of charge, and also hot water with which to make tea and coffee.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16, 1889.

The hot weather oppresses the average office seeker, and as he mops his hot face he tells you that he has about concluded to go home, and adds in a confidential whisper, that he is only waiting for a remittance. He no longer stops at the Ebbitt House though he daily haunts its nearly deserted corridors like an uneasy ghost. The fact is that the movements of the President excite little interest here as enough of him has been seen to justify one in deciding that he will do nothing surprising. And outside the close profession of politics, this is a pleasant state of affairs. Only the self elected statesmen mourn and will not be comforted.

You can never tell when a politician is permanently done for. Take for ex-Hon. James W. Reed, formerly of North Carolina. A number of years ago Mr. Reed represented the Fifth district of that State in the House. He was an able, companionable, easy going man and he became involved in financia difficulties, resigned his seat in Congress and left North Carolina under a cloud. Few knew where he had gone. On the frontier he commenced life over again, and now reports come from Idaho that he has a fine chance of being chosen as United States Senator, if the Democrats have a majority of the nowly organized State Legislature.

The latest developments in the Californian Sharon-Hill-Terry drama created a profound impression in Washington. The shock to public feeling is to be attributed more to the indignity offered to the Supreme Court, and through that body to the entire country, than to the killing of the misguided and unscrupulous Terry. While no one disputes that the deputy marshal was not to be excused in killing Terry unless he knew the Justice's life to be in danger, still public sentiment would be largely with him even had he no reason to so believe. On the immunity of judges from danger of personal harm on account of acts committed in the fearless discharge of their duty, rests the sanctity of the the law. And Marshal Neagle, in his wild western way, pretty well supported it.

Lieut. Dick Arnold was yesterday made superintendent of street and alley cleaning for the District, an appointment that recalls a police department scandal in the first part of President Cleveland's administration. A ridiculous coxcomb named Walker, a real estate dealer, had just been appointed Major and Superintendent of police. Walker attended a fashionable church and after his appointment always attended services in full uniform, an object to behold and be blinded by, and he generally departed hastily in the middle of services as if the public safety was at issue. In fact, Walker succeeded in making such a howling ass of himself that his official career rather abruptly terminated and shortly after his discovery of an alleged plot to "shadow" members of Congress who were inclined to be indescreet and to thereby obtain their influence in favor of certain pending uneasiness favoring the District police under pain of exposure. It was this scandal that rightly or wrongly, occasioned Lieut. Arnold's discharge.

Murderer's Row at the District jail is uncomfortably filled during the dog days and the capacity of the space is seriously threatend by the increasing number of homicides. There have been at least a dozen murders among the colored population since the middle of May. These negro toughs fill themselves with gin costing seventy cents a gallon and then repair to their sweltering, fetid dens up in unventilated alleys and fall to fighting, a thing by no means surprising when one considers the possibilities of gin and hot weather combined. Active hostilities are generally introduced by a game of "carp" an interesting social game played upon the ground with large dies, being a negro hodge-podge complication of the common game of poker die. No city in the United States contains so many idle negro men as does Washington. How they all live is a mystery. Thousands came here at the close of the war and have remainded, without visible means of support, ever since, and have brought up numerous progeny to learn the same trade, living without work.

Baltimore and Philadelphia have come nobly to the assistance of Washington, in its three-cornered fight with New York and Chicago for the location of the three Americas Exposition. The Baltimore adherents base their endorsement of the propriety of holding the exposition in Washingington upon the national character of the enterprise and the fact that no municipality in the country is equal to the burden of expense attached to such an enterprise. It should be under Gouvernment supervision and control and nowhere would such control be as unhampered by other authority as in Washington.

ALL IS FAIR AT BUFFALO.

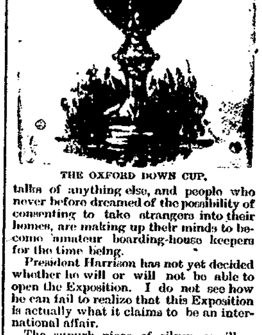
THE QUEEN CITY NOT IN THE SULKS AT LOSING THE CONVENTION.

A Tremendous Crowd of Visitors Expected Next Month and Ample Preparations Being Made for Their Entertainment—An Advance Peep at Some Fair Wonders.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

BUFFALO, Aug. 20—The Queen City having lost the much coveted Republican State convention through sign Saratoga's sumptuous charms, is much disappointed, but is not exhibiting the slightest tendency towards the sulks. Everybody who lives in Buffalo seems to feel a gentle pity for the men whose poor tastes led them into the error of preferring for the convention, a watering place out of season to a bright wideawake and hospitable city whose September climate is unsurpassed. They say "very well, if the wise politicians choose to make their own bed let them lie in it" a figure of speech which seems peculiarly appropriate when it is remembered that chamber-maids and other attendants are not generally over abundant at any fashionable watering place towards the end of September.

No doubt the brilliant prospects of the International Fair do much towards furnishing balm for Buffalo's wounded vanity. The Fair (which opens two weeks from to-day) is literally overshadowing all other interests. Nobody talks of anything else, and people who never before dreamed of the possibility of consenting to take strangers into their homes, are making up their minds to become amateur boarding-house keepers for the time being.



THE OXFORD DOWN CUP.

President Harrison has not yet decided whether he will or will not be able to open the Exposition. I do not see how he can fail to realize that this Exposition is actually what it claims to be an international affair.

The supurb piece of silver, an illustration of which accompanies this letter, shows beyond any doubt that some of the most important agricultural or breeding associations of Great Britain are fully alive to its international importance. The splendid Oxford Down cup, valued at several hundred dollars, is as its inscription declares, "given by the Oxford Down Sheep Breeders' Association of Great Britain for the best flock of Oxford Down Sheep in America." There is an international ring about that which sets the blood of all sheep breeders a-tingle.

The Shropshire Cup, which is offered by the Shropshire Society of England for the best flock of one ram and five of his get under two years old, is also a magnificent specimen of silver ware and is valued at $250.

Although Cappa's Seventh regiment band is to make the chief and most delightful music at the Fair, he is to have a formidable rival in the shape of the Continental Drum Corps of Sardinia, N. Y. This Continental Drum Corps is composed of ten extremely patriotic individuals whose ages average rather more than that of the ordinary man's grandfather. In the first place, as president and leader of the band, is Mr. S. H. Nott, who is 70 years of age, and who is in possession of a canteen carried by his grandfather in the Revolution and again by his father in the war of 1812. Mr. Nott plays upon a drum that was used in a stirring fashion at the battle of Yorktown. All his "boyish" companions in the Continental Drum Corps are gentlemen of Revolutionary descent and of decided musical proclivities. Maj. Nathan E. Humphrey, Maj. E. E. Fiske and Capt. McCrady are fifers of the corps. The snare drums are played respectively by Mr. E. Rowley, who carries his light weight of 83 summers jocularly; Mr. Frank Hadley and Mr. William Smith, the two last mentioned gentlemen having arrived at the middle period of life. The standard bearer, Mr. William Smith, is 73 years old and the standard from which floats the flag is composed of a gun seven feet in height which was captured by Maj. Nott's grandfather at the battle of Yorktown.

I have been permitted to take a peep in advance into the Palace of Illusions, which is just completed. It is going to be one of the most attractive features of the Fair. There are to be a dozen different illusions simultaneously exhibited in this immense building, but I have space to describe only two of them. In a georgeously upholstered and beautifully illuminated apartment rises a splendid white and gold staircase with brilliant lamps burning upon pillasters on either side. Festooned from these lamps is an enormous cobweb, in the centre of which reposes a spider two feet across. The peculiarity of this spider is that its head is that of a living, breathing and beautiful woman. You see the spider; you look through the web to the gorgeous staircase beyond but aught of the woman's body you are unable to perceive.

The other illusion to which I refer consists of an iron fountain which stands in the centre of a booth hung with peacock blue draperies. The bowl of this fountain is twenty-six inches in diamater and seven inches deep. Two jets of water arise from the fountain and splash into the overbrimming bowl, and in this bowl, in full sight of every spectator, with every recess of the gorgeously decorated booth in perfect view, floats Lurline, to all outward appearances, a living, breathing mermaid.

One of the most fascinating exhibits in the live stock department of the Fair will be without any question a little horse not yet six weeks old, which at three weeks of age weighed only twenty-three pounds. This wonder comes from Rochester, a fact which leads Buffalo editors to remark with a malicious grin that Rochester has always been famous for little things.

Mr. Jeremiah Horrley,

Who lives in the town of Warren, R. I., writes under date of March 20, 1889: "We have used Brown's Sarsaparilla in our family for a long time and always found it a reliable medicine." Such is the testimony of thousands of people who have given Brown's Sarsaparilla a trial. When you have tired all gone feeling; when you have pains across your back around your hips; when your urine is high colored and dark with brick dust deposit; when you feel languid, don't want to work, hurts you to get up or sit down, you may be sure you have kidney disease. Mr. John W. Kenworthy, Middlebury, Vt., writes March 25, 1889: "We have used Brown's Sarsaparilla in our family for kidney trouble and my wife thinks there is nothing like it." C. C. Bartlett, Kittery, Maine, writes March 30, 1889, "Have used Brown's Sarsaparilla in the family and have always found it very beneficial." Try it and see for yourself.

They Will Sue the R. W. & O.

The members of the Trades Assembly are indignant and will not hold their labor day picnic at Three River Point. Three weeks ago a committee made arrangments with Mr. Stark, an agent of the R. W. & O. company, to carry 15,000 or 20,000 people, if necessary, to that place. A week later the committee were notified that Mr. Stark had no authority to make any such contract, as the railroad company could not carry any such number. A few days afterwards an agreement was arrived at by the Trades Assembly and the railroad company. Last Thursday L. H. Banford, chairman of the committee, received a telegram from Mr. Butterfield, saying that he found that the railroad could not accommodate the Trades Assembly excursion on September 2 and that he cancelled the agreement he had entered into. The Assembly proposes to hold the railway company to their contract and the matter will be carried into the courts. A special meeting of the Assembly will be held at which some other place will be selected for holding the picnic.—Syracuse Journal.

Cheese Market Report.

(From the Utica Herald.)

AT UTICA.

UTICA, Aug. 19.

The market to-day was an agreeable surprise to salesmen, who were looking for about the same prices as last week. But advices from New York and Montreal were more encouraging, and although it is suspected that buyers somewhat exceeded instructions, they believe that there is a commission in the cheese this week. Salesmen very generally closed out their July stock, although, in exceptional cases they had not boxed the last two or three days and could not get them off. There was, however, no anxiety to sell, as it is hoped that the advance has come to stay. The stock was pretty well distributed among the buyers, nearly all taking a few of the best lots. But little difference was made between white and colored, the former bringing within ⅛c. as much as the latter, and occasionally selling quite as high. Small sizes are also in somewhat better demand. There were rumors that rather more cheese was sold at the highest price, but no quotations could be found to sustain them. Following is the list of sales:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
7	845	8c
72	6,913	8¼
21	2,024	8¼
20	1,270	8⅜
38	3,025	8½
1	115	8⅜
8	903	p. t.
167	15,095
	1,644	Com.
Total.	16,729

Ruling price 8¼c. Transactions one year ago 12,616 boxes, ruling price 8c. Two years ago, 12,844 boxes; ruling price 11¼c.

There were sales of 84 packages creamery butter at 18 @ 20c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Aug. 19.

Cheese—While the ruling price remains the same as last week, there has been a a slight advance in the higher priced goods and there is quite a noticeable improvement in the general tone. It is believed that the prices paid are likely to be sustained by the general market and matters be left in good shape for another week. It has so frequently happened that the slightest improvement in the city has been the pretext for an unwarranted advancehere, causing a set back the following week, from which dairymen have suffered, that our salesmen have come to understand the folly of such movements. That the market has escaped just such an experiment this week is quite generally felt and hence the situation is looked upon with considerable satisfaction. Following is our usual list:

27	2,053	8c.
29	2,178	8¼
12	757	Com.
130	8,726
Farm dairy	1,244
Total	9,970

Farm dairies—The sales of farm dairy cheese were at 8 @ 8¼c., with the bulk at 8¼c., total sales of 1,244 boxes.

Butter—Forty-one packages of creamery butter sold at 18 cents and 15 packages farm dairy butter at 17 to 18 cents.

AT FULTON.

Twenty-four factories were represented at this market on Monday evening, with 2,675 boxes of cheese, which sold at 8¼c. to 8⅜c. Market was quite lively.

Opening Performances of Robb[illegible] Circus.

The American Institute Building, in third Ave., near Sixty-third St., has been leased by Frank A. Robbins for a Winter Circus. Nothing which makes its Summer counterpart so fascinating to the small boy, except the opportunity to crawl under the canvas and see the performance for nothing, is lacking. The opening of the circus took place yesterday afternoon. Ranged around the walls are the cages of the fierce wild beasts who are wont to entertain visitors with their jungle roar and their huge proportions. The menagerie is small, but select. It contains all the animals usually to be found in traveling collections. The circus begins 20 feet from the outside walls of the building. That is, a corridor 12 feet wide extends completely around the building, and is made attractive by the cages of wild animals, while the circus in the body of the hall contains seats for 3,000 people. There are two rings and a central stage, and a program of 16 numbers was presented yesterday, many of them keeping the two rings and the stage full of interest at the same time.—New York Times. THE SATURDAY MORNING FIRE.

Phillips' Drug Store Burned—Adjoining Stores Damaged by Smoke.

It was about 12:30 Saturday morning when the fire alarm sounded the third ward. A second alarm followed and then a third so that those who did not get out at the first alarm knew that the fire was a serious one. It was R. E. Phillips' drug store on First street. The fire was peculiar from the fact that for the first hour after it was discovered no flames were seen and it was hard for the firemen to locate it. At one time four streams were playing on First street and none of them on the burning building. It looked to the spectators standing in front of the store as though there was bad management somewhere but there never was a fire better handled. For at the rear of the store two powerful streams were being thrown upon the fire in the interior. The front of the building being closed no draught was created and consequently the fire was kept under control. A hole was cut through the floor in the rooms of A. Ramage who occupies the second story of the building by the "Hooks" and through this opening another stream was thrown and the fire conquered but not until the stock was almost entirely ruined by heat, smoke and water.

The basement of the building was used as a store room by L. T. Miller and the contents were badly damagby smoke and water.

The stock of C. S. Eggleston, D. C. Draper, C. E. Chappell & Co., C. R. Nichols, A. Bristol, A. J. Snow and Morrill Bros. were somewhat damaged by smoke and the furniture of A. Ramage.

Phillips had $5,000 insurance on stock in Rice & Lovejoy's agency and $3,000 on the building in C. W. Steerter's agency.

The appraisers are to be here tomorrow to make an estimate of the amount of damage done which will doubtless run up to the full amount of the insurance as Mr. Phillips' stock in the store amounted to between $7,000 and $8,000.

NOTES ON THE FIRE.

L. T. Miller had $500 insurance on his stock stored in the basement.

The origin of the fire is unknown but it was near the prescription case in the back part of the store.

Arthur Goman, clerk for Phillips had his hand badly cut by broken glass during the fire.

The drug store presented a hard sight after the fire Saturday morning there being scarcely an article but what was badly damaged if not made utterly worthless.

Both steamers were used and the hydrants in front of Morrow's store, at the water works office and two streams from the hydrant at the corner of First and Oneida streets. There was abundance of water.

One of the Morrill boys went into their printing office to see if there was any fire there and turned on an electric light. Firemen thinking that fire had broken out there turned the hose on it through the open window and did considerable damage by water.

Johnson Hose company were the first at the fire and got on the first stream.

Damage by smoke in the adjoining stores is covered by insurance.

At times about a foot of water covered the floor of the store.

C. M. Sabin, the veteran fireman, while wading about in the water was struck by a floating box with a sixty pound stream from one of the nozzles playing on it and had a free bath and Rockaway Beach swim.

The firemen cannot receive too much credit for their work at the fire and the chiefs for the manner in which they handled it.

Masons at Oswego.

Nine members of Ontario commandery of this village, namely: J. H. Case, G. C. Webb, F. E. Rice, A. E. Keller, W. J. Watson, S. F. Case, George Berzee, George Saunders and John Campbell went to Oswego on Friday last and with the Oswego members of Ontario Commandery assisted in entertaining Salem Commandery of Auburn who were there on a picnic. Kingsford's band escorted the masons with their guests in a parade through the city. A speech of welcome was made by Eminent Commander Watkins at the Commandery rooms. The fire department turned out for them. The members of the life saving service showed what they were able to do in rough weather, tipping over two or three times in their boats and Mayor Stockwell gave them a speech. Later on a banquet was held and a good time all around was the result.

THE R. & O. MILLS.

To be Started Friday Morning—If not then Positively on Monday.

During the past week the employes of the R. & O. Mills have waited for good news which they felt confident would come announcing the date at which work would be resumed in the factory.

Yesterday Mr. Chester A. Braman of New York was appointed receiver of the property in Oswego Falls. This fixes the legal part of the affairs so that business can be resumed.

Supt. Ballou expected to receive instructions to start this morning but the attorneys for the National Trust Co. and the Revere Bank of Boston, judgment creditors to the extent of $40,000 each, considered it necessary to confer with the directors of the above mentioned banks before authority to start was granted, as the laws of Massachusetts differ from those of this State. As surance is how ever given that the matter will be decided to-day and positive information as to when the factory will start given

A representative of the Washington Mills at Lawrence, Mass. is here to-day making an endeavor to secure some expert help for the above mentioned mills but with the bright prospects of our mills starting at once and continuing to run steadily, it is not prabable that many will leave.

The following was posted at the factory this morning.

NOTICE!

It is expected that the Mills will be STARTED ON FRIDAY MORNING. If not then, most POSITIVELY ON MONDAY next, and continue to run steadily.

Positive information will be given later in the day, on receipt of despatch from New York.

Opening of Robbins' Circus at the American Institute, New York.

The Ribalk scoffer hereabouts is won't to say that the circus even antedates Manager Noah's menagerie, and that there is nothing new in it. While this is generally true, the exception, of course, must exist. It existed yesterday afternoon and last evening and expects to exist for the rest of the season at the American Institute building, on Third avenue near Sixty-third street. It is Frank A. Robbins' winter circus, and the first performances were given yesterday as a sort of Christmas Eve offering to the little folks. Mr. Robbins is a bold man to establish himself in this city with a permanent circus, for New York has been oftentimes victimized by "fake" shows, and looks with rather a cold eye on innovations. Robbins was sanguine, however, when he began to prepare for the winter campaign, and the performances have justified his faith.

One of the features of the show is the dance by eight elephants who furnish their own music. The performance closes with a four horse bareback business in each ring. It is an interesting show and has an unusual attractiveness for children. There was a fair audience in the afternoon and a better one in the evening but the people will come eventually, for it is not too much to say, perhaps, that Robbins came here to roost. Merry Christmas to you of the circus! —N. Y. Herald.

WORTH KNOWING.

Sweet corn may be had until frost by successive sowings of early varieties.

Heavy loses of peaches are reported on the Delaware Peninsula.

Good pastures will keep the swine in best condition at this season.

The run of a good pasture will bring the pigs in excellent condition for fattening.

Cutting and burning the bushes and weeds in pastures represent important August work.

Young hogs will do no damage in the orchard, and will pick up all the wormy apples and keep the clover from killing out and the weeds from taking possession of the orchard.

Now is a good time to kill off (and eat) the mongrel fowls that have accumulated, and start anew with pure stock of whichever variety may be preferred.

A sun struck cow is ruined as a milker for this season, if not for ever. Avoid such a calamity, if there are no trees in the pasture, by putting up a frame and roofing it with leafy brush for an artifical shade. Later plant trees.

The Statistician of the Department of Agriculture estimates the total value of oxen and other cattle—as contrasted with dairy stock—in the United States to be $14,513,708 less than the value of the stock at the time of closing his report last year. Dairy stock has maintained its value.

The first year after the orchard is planted out the young trees make a large growth, and this is the time advised by a practical orchardist to prune and shape the trees. If you wait a few years you will have to cut off big limbs to shape the tree. Attend to trees while small. It is a light job then and does not injure them.

If a farm is running down and the owner getting poor there is, according to the American Agriculturist, no rotation that will turn the tide in his favor more promptly than rye, clover and sheep. The land is ploughed in August and rye sown, five pecks to the acre. In September timothy seed is sown and in March, a liberal supply of clover, which by August is in the height of its glory. Then the sheep are turned in.

As to Weight of Cows.

According to Major Alvord, who is considered good authority, it takes very little arithmetic to prove that 200 pounds extra weight of cow, kept alive for five years, while returning no profit during this time, will actually cost as much as the fatted carcass of the animal is likely to bring in the end. Unnecessary size or weight in a milch cow is a source of constant loss to her owner. The profit of the cow should come, all of it, while she is productive in the dairy.

Oats in the West.

Rev. B. Brunning read us a report from his Iowa farm, his son being the farmer. The report shows 782 bushels, threshing machine measure which is equal to about 850 bushels by weight, or an average of 60 bushels per acre. The same report says. "Our corn crop now, promises to be a whopper." Mr. B. says there is 50 acres of corn on the place. Haying had just begun, which sounds strangely to eastern farmers; but small-grain harvest always comes before haying, except in tame grasses, which are not plenty. Low ground prairie grass continuing to grow better until into August.

Best Locomotive Speed.

The question, "How fast can a locomotive run?" has been a good deal discussed recently in the engineering papers. The conclusion appears to be that there is no authentic record of my speed above 80 miles an hour. That speed was obtained many years ago by a Bristol and Exeter tank engine with nine foot driving wheels—a long extinct species, down a steep bank. But it has, apparently, never been beaten. It is, indeed, not a little strange how sharply the line appears to have been drawn at 80 miles an hour. Records of 75 miles an hour are as plenty as blackberries. Records of 80 are exceedingly rare. Records of any greater speed have a way of crumbing beneath the slightest touch.

Bad Business on the Same Basis.

A burly Texan went into a gambling house and, after a sitting of a couple of hours, arose $15,000 winner and demanded gold for his chips. The "banker" began fumbling in his drawer, ostensibly for the purpose of getting the money, but instead brought forth an ugly-looking six-shooter, and leveling it at the Texan calmly remarked.

"I pay these large amounts in lead".

In a twinkling, and before the "banker" realized what he was doing, the Texan had him "covered," and remarked:

"And I receipt in the same way. Pay that money or take your receipt."

He got his money.—Atlanta Constitution.

A woman who is weak, nervous and sleepless and wha has cold hands and feet, cannot feel anc act like a well person. Carter's Iron Pills equalize the circulation, remove nervousness and give strength and rest.

A Woman's Discovry.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made and that too by a lady in this county. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed eminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for the Consumption and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. ONE HUNDRED AND TWO.

THE AGE REACHED BY LAVINA FILLMORE, OF LAWRENCE, N. Y.

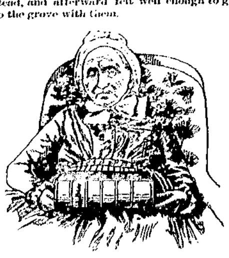
Her Husband Was a Cousin of President Millard Fillmore—She Was Living When George Washington Was Inaugurated a Hundred Years Ago—Sketch of Her Life.

"I have preached in Clarence over thirty years and yet I have to lock up my grocery," exclaimed Rev. Gleson Fillmore sadly.

The speaker was a cousin of President Fillmore, and when he died in 1675 left his wife, Mrs. Lavina Fillmore, in the old Fillmore homestead at Clarence, N. Y., seventeen miles from Buffalo.

She was living when George Washington was inaugurated president of the United States 100 years ago, and no one was more delighted than she at the magnificent celebration of his centennial day.

Mrs. Fillmore's one hundred and second birthday fell on the 13th of August, this year. The picture of her printed herewith is from an excellent photograph taken when she was 100 years old. A great celebration of the event was held at Clarence at the time, at which over 1,000 people were present, many notable persons attending from distant parts of the state. She received her visitors sitting in a rocking chair at the old homestead, and afterward felt well enough to go to the grove with them.



LAVINA FILLMORE.

Mrs. Fillmore gets about the house still, and even feeds the chickens in the farm yard, but for some months has not ventured far from the house. A short sickness this summer occasioned great anxiety to her friends, but she has wonderful vigor for one of her age and soon recovered. She insists on presiding at table and pours out the tea with old fashioned grace, and is never known to get the milk and sugar in the wrong cups, which can't be said for some good ladies not quarter of her age.

The same glasses that Mrs. Fillmore began to wear when failing eyesight required them are still used by her, a fact in which she takes a great deal of pride. She can still read, and it is part of her daily routine to read her Bible. The volume in her lap in the picture above is a Bible left to her by her husband, Parson Fillmore. Her hearing is very good.

When dressed for company she wears a black silk dress, a lace cap, and her gray hair is brushed smoothly back and tied in a knot at the back of her head.

A peculiarity about her is that although she can remember incidents that happened fifty or seventy-five years ago, her mental record of recent events is rather hazy. The old house in which she lives was built, it is said, in 1813, the year after Buffalo was burned. That was six years after her husband arrived in Clarence and began expounding in the wilderness the doctrines of the Methodist Episcopal church. He walked all the way from Oneida to Clarence. She followed him six months later.

Mrs. Fillmore was born in Waterbury, Conn., in 1787, and lived for a while in Oneida county.

Though she has lived more than a century and is the same age as the constitution of the United States, she has never ridden on the cars, never heard the electric click of the telegraph instrument, and the quick "Hello—lo-lo!" of the modern telephone is to her but curious hearsay.

After living a few years in Clarence Mr. and Mrs. Fillmore removed to Buffalo, afterward returning to Clarence. When Buffalo was burned by the British in the war of 1812 they fled from their home. After the scare was over they returned and were overjoyed to find that not a bit of their property had been injured.

One of the notable events in early Buffalo history witnessed by Mrs. Fillmore was the hanging of the three Thayer brothers, who were executed on the same gallows June 17, 1825. It was estimated that there were from 20,000 to 30,000 spectators of the execution. Rev. Gleson Fillmore was called on to preach to the multitude, which he did about an hour before the hanging.

Rev. Mr. Fillmore was for fourteen years a pastor and for twenty-seven years a presiding elder. He built the first church in Buffalo. In was 25x35 feet, and the work of building occupied forty-eight days. When he was born it is said that there were but 25,000 Methodists in the United States; when he died the number had increased to 3,000,000. He officiated at 200 weddings, and so it might be said that in more ways than one he encouraged the propagation of Methodism.

Once in the early days a minister who was a guest at the Fillmore house heard an unearthly howling in the woods near by.

"What is that?" he cried, alarmed.

"It is nothing," replied Mrs. Fillmore, quietly; "it is only a wolf concert."

"Millard has done well," Gleson Fillmore is remembered to have said, referring to his cousin, the president, "but he would have done better if he had been a Methodist preacher."

Mrs. Fillmore's maiden name was Lavina Atwell. She was converted to Methodism at the age of 17, and was married near Utica to Mr. Fillmore when she was 23.

"She is a true Methodist," says her pastor, Rev. Isaac Harris, of Clarence. "She indorses the old doctrine, and often puts to shame those who are younger. I have seen her put to rout even ministers who have become possessed with the modern spirit. She gets down upon her knees to pray."

She reads half a dozen newspapers a week, but her Bible is her chief companion. She gives $40 a year regularly to the support of her church. Maggie Friens, a faithful servant, who has lived with Mrs. Fillmore for a score of years, takes good care of her and is greatly attached to the wonderful old woman. Philip Lout, a God fearing man, who also fears and loves his mistress, has for about the same length of time looked after the farm.

"You may expect to live a long time yet," observed a reporter recently to Mrs. Fillmore.

"Till the Lord calls," she replied, resting her hand upon the Bible at her side, and through the myriad seams and wrinkles of her fine old face there shone a radiant look that sprang from more than earthly joy.

RHEUMATISM

For More than Twenty-five Years.—A Complete Recovery.—The Means Used.

I had Inflammatory Rheumatism. For nearly a year I had to be fed and turned in bed. I could find no relief. My stomach was ruined and cut to pieces with powerful medicines taken to effect a cure so that I was compelled to live on bread and water. I suffered for twenty-five years in this way. I was induced to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy made at Rondout, N. Y., and thanks to this medicine. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is my best friend. With it I am enabled to enjoy a good night's rest. Also food, such as meat and pastry, which I have been deprived of for years, showing that the Favorite Remedy has no equal for the cure of Indigestion and Dyspepsia as well. If any should doubt this statement I will send the ready proof at once.—Garrett Lansing, Troy, N. Y.

It is my pleasure and absolute duty toward those who are struggling for very life against the deadly to add my testimony to the already weighty evidence of the wonderful efficacy of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. My wife was a hopeless case, abandoned by the physicians. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was resorted to; not because any hope was placed in it, but because nothing else remained. All means and medicines had been tested without avail. The effect was little short of a miracle. At the second bottle she had regained strength, and continuing the treatment has fully recovered.—Jay [illegible], N. Y.

The TORTURES OF DESPAIR

Can be no worse than the agony of a man or woman troubled with Sick Headache. The terrible pain; the nausea; the lack of all interest in life; the disgust with everything and everybody; the world can afford no pleasure to any one when suffering from Sick Headache.

Why have Doctors never been able to cure this fearful trouble?

Because they have never discovered the right thing!

Have they tried?

Yes, for hundreds of years.

But a Chemist of Troy, N. Y., discovered the remedy, and the remedy that will cure in EVERY CASE arising from a deranged stomach.

Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders

Go right to the Seat of the trouble—the Stomach. They are purely vegetable, and contain no narcotics. They act with wonderful promptness and never leave any bad after-effect.

Phillip Phillips, the "Singing Pilgrim," says of them:—"I cannot tell you how glad I am to get something that relieves my wife of her headaches."

Rev. George F. Pentecost, D. D., says:—"I have received many benedictions from those to whom I have given these powders."

The late Rev. C. P. Sheldon, says:—"They are a wonderful remedy, and all they claim to be."

A SAMPLE

of these wonderful Powders will be sent FREE to any sufferer from this terrible affliction, or they can be procured of all reputable druggists at 25 cents a box.

Will deliver free of charge, show cards and samples to any druggist who will keep the card in his window and give the samples to the most desperate cases.

The Clouds.

The sky is full of clouds to-day,
  And idly to and fro,
Like sheep across the pasture, they
  Across the heavens go.
I hear the wind with merry noise
  Around the house-tops sweep,
And dream it is the shepherd boys—
  They're driving home their sheep.

The clouds move faster now; and see!
  The west is red and gold.
Each sheep seems hastening to be
  The first within the fold.
I watch them hurry on until
  The blue is clear and deep,
And dream that far beyond the hill
  The shepherds fold their sheep.

Then in the sky the trembling stars,
  The little flowers shine out,
While night puts up the shadow bars,
  And darkness falls about.
I hear the shepherd wind's good night—
  "Good-night and happy sleep!"
And dream that in the east, all white,
  Slumber the clouds, the sheep.

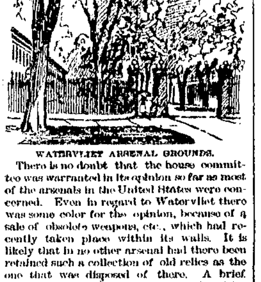
WATERVLIET ARSENAL.

IT WOULD BE UNCLE SAM'S CHIEF DEPENDENCE IN WAR.

How and Why It Is an Important Institution—Improvements Recently Made in Machinery and Appliances—Concerning the Manufacture of Steel for Cannon.

For many years the United States arsenal at Watervliet, N. Y., has been carried on with a very small number of men. Gun carriages, harness and lighter equipments have been the principal articles manufactured, and the supply of these articles for the army has come almost exclusively from this arsenal. To many it appeared as though the arsenal had passed its usefulness, and that its days were numbered. Indeed in February, 1883, the military committee of the house of representatives agreed to the report in favor of doing away with more than half of the arsenals maintained by the government of the United States. Of thirteen only three or four were declared necessary, and Watervliet was one of those to be abandoned.



WATERVLIET ARSENAL GROUNDS.

There is no doubt that the house committee was warranted in its opinion so far as most of the arsenals in the United States were concerned. Even in regard to Watervliet there was some color for the opinion, because of a sale of obsolete weapons, etc., which had recently taken place within its walls. It is likely that in no other arsenal had there been retained such a collection of old relics as the one that was disposed of there. A brief glance at the old paraphernalia will be of interest. "Linestocks," of which there were eighty-nine to be sold, were the old fashioned powder primers for cannon. A gunner was required to fill the place of priming with powder; then, when all was ready, to bring out the linestock, a kind of torch, and touch off the prime and gun. This mode of firing was in vogue in the time of the revolution. Today a friction primer is used, a closed brass tube of fulminate of mercury being placed in the small hole of the cannon and the gun discharged by pulling a cord attached to the friction primer.

In the sale were included 33,099 "sabots" of various sizes and descriptions. "Sabots," in the revolutionary days, or in the rebellion even, were indispensable, but now are unknown. They were round pieces of wood utilized as wadding, to which the shot were strapped by bits of tin. Cartridges are exclusively used in army cannon now. There is no such thing today as "hot shot," but in years past a battle could scarcely be fought without them. There were in the collection "five furnaces for hot shot," "two ladles," "five rakes," "five shovels," "four tongs" and "five forks," all of which were obsolete. There were nearly 5,000 complete sets of cavalry accouterments and 2,700 incomplete sets for sale.

In days of battle the soldiers were required to strap themselves in harness and to haul heavy guns over the hills, while now this task is performed exclusively by animals. The rope articles composing this peculiar harness and drag rope was composed of "prolongs," "bricoles" and "men's harness." Besides, there were 13 "scrapers for cannon," 27 "port fire stocks," 251 "gun sights;" for

The situation of Watervliet, however, is exceptionally fine. A tract of considerably over 100 acres is contained in the triangle, which has a base on the Hudson river and a direct communication with the world by the Erie canal, which runs through it. This double wharfage, on the canal and on the river, gives ready access to the city of New York and to all the ocean ports, as well as to the lake ports in the interior. Close by are some of the largest iron and steel mills in the country, from which supplies of raw material can be drawn. As a fortress, it is one of the strongest in the country, for it can be easily guarded by a comparatively small force of men. In this respect it is better to maintain this arsenal than some other arsenal that is more accessible to vessels drawing more water than is afforded by the upper half of the Hudson river.

Water power is furnished from a raceway cut from the canal to the river with a fall of eighteen feet. Almost unlimited power is thus close at hand during more than six months of the year. The capacity of the arsenal in time of war was one gun carriage [illegible] senate in 1883 for the erection of two large gun factories, one for the army at Watervliet and one for the navy at Washington. This was the first practical measure proposed for the adequate protection of the United States sea coasts. The bill provided for the erection of the two factories at a cost of about $1,000,000 each, and also for the purchase of about 10,000 pounds of tempered steel from private firms to be converted into cannon. At that time it was estimated that between 300 and 400 guns, of various bores, would be required for the forts and ships, some of these to weigh 100 tons. It was expected that each of the proposed factories would be able to turn out in a year twelve 16 inch guns, seventeen 12 inch guns and fifty 6 inch guns, the annual expense being about $2,000,000. This bill did not pass the house of representatives.

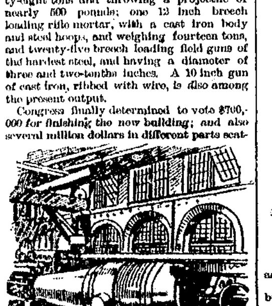
Early in 1885 a report was made to the senate by Mr. Hawley recommending that the government establish two great factories for the casting of guns, and the best locations were said to be the Washington navy yard and the Watervliet arsenal. This bill failed for want of an agreement between the two houses of congress. It was, however, arranged that a small amount of money might be used to make an experiment at Watervliet, and orders were given to the commanding officer directing the purchase of such grounds and buildings as were needed. The floor of one of the storehouses was taken out and heavy masonry built as a foundation for the planers and other machinery that was brought there from the arsenals and foundries at West Point, South Boston, Frankford and Fortress Monroe. While this was a great gain upon what had been done, yet the capacity of the new machinery was only two 10-inch guns and six or eight 6-inch guns a year.

The possibilities of Watervliet were found to be so great that bills were introduced in congress appropriating something over $1,000,000 for the purpose of erecting a new building, in addition to the old storehouse already adapted and now in use, for the manufacture of the larger class of guns. Ten and twelve inch guns will be assembled in this new building, and it is so planned that an extension may be made in which guns of sixteen inch bore may be made hereafter, if it is thought they are necessary. In the old storehouse which is now in use may be seen twenty and thirty foot guns upon the planers. The thirty foot guns revolve two and a half times every minute, and chisels of the hardest steel shave off delicate ribbons just as if they were of wood, only that the process is much slower. The works are now about ready to give out one 8 inch gun weighing fifteen tons and throwing a projectile of 250 pounds; one 10 inch gun weighing twenty-eight tons and throwing a projectile of nearly 500 pounds; one 12 inch breech loading rifle mortar, with a cast iron body and steel hoops, and weighing fourteen tons, and twenty-five breech loading field guns of the hardest steel, and having a diameter of three and two-tenths inches. A 10 inch gun of cast iron, ribbed with wire, is also among the present output.

Congress finally determined to vote $700,000 for finishing the new building; and also several million dollars in different parts scattered about among other foundries and partly by contracts with parties outside of the United States government. As soon as the building is done guns will be made thirty-five feet long, twelve inches in diameter, weighing fifty tons and throwing projectiles of 1,000 pounds. The writer asked what the range was and was answered: "From ten to twelve miles; but the really effective range for any gun is only about five miles. That is to say, you cannot depend upon its hitting the mark at over five or six miles."



TWELVE INCH BREECH LOADING MORTAR.

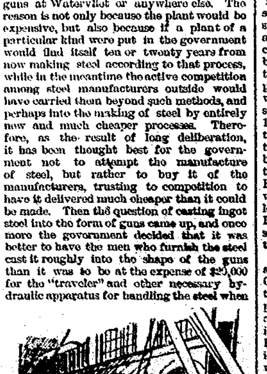
"How about the larger bores for guns?"

"Twelve inches is large enough, but as long as the European nations have guns larger we shall have to do the same."

"Do you bring your tubes for the larger bores from England, as has been reported?"

"Some of them—that is of the ten and twelve inch bores—are brought from Whitworth's, in England; but it is likely that few will be brought from there in the future, because they are made in this country now. The eight inch bores are made at Midvale, in Pennsylvania."

In conversation with the authorities of the arsenal the writer was told that the government is now decidedly of the opinion that it is better not to attempt the casting of large guns at Watervliet or anywhere else. The reason is not only because the plant would be expensive, but also because if a plant of a particular kind were put in the government would find itself ten or twenty years from now making steel according to that process, while in the meantime the active competition among steel manufacturers outside would have carried them beyond such methods, and perhaps into the making of steel by entirely new and much cheaper processes. Therefore, as the result of long deliberation, it has been thought best for the government not to attempt the manufacture of steel, but rather to buy it of the manufacturers, trusting to competition to have it delivered much cheaper than it could be made. Then the question of casting ingot steel into the form of guns came up, and once more the government decided that it was better to have the men who furnish the steel cast it roughly into the shape of the guns than it was to be at the expense of $25,000 for the "traveler" and other necessary hydraulic apparatus for handling the steel when cast. Therefore the shops at Watervliet will be devoted strictly to assembling and finishing the guns, jackets, rings, and all other parts of the guns proper that will be furnished to them from the outside. It is under advisement whether or not the manufacture of carriages for the great guns shall be attempted. It should be stated, however, that there are now constructing cupolas and other appliances known to foundries at Watervliet for the purpose of casting projectiles; and it is likely that the different parts of cast iron mortars will be made at this place so that they can be put together more readily. It is very evident that the greatest reliance of the United States for guns for coast defense and possibly for a part of the naval armament must come from the Watervliet [illegible]



TURNING A THIRTY FOOT GUN.

OF THE TERRY TRAGEDY.

BRIEF REVIEW OF THE LIVES OF THE PRINCIPAL CHARACTERS.

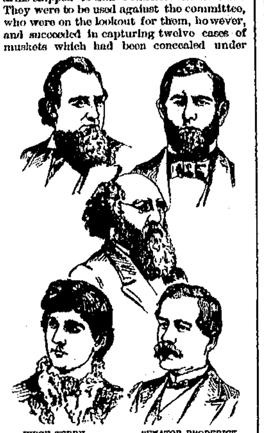
How the Enmity Between Judge Terry and Justice Field Finally Resulted in Terry's Death—An Extraordinarily Tumultuous Career—Sarah Althea Hill.

The killing of Judge David S. Terry the other day by a deputy United States marshal was but another and a very lively act in a tragic drama in real life to which the attention of the world has been occasionally directed for more than thirty years, and in which Justice Field, Sarah Althea Hill and the deputy are the only characters of consequence now living, but in which the lamented Broderick, Senator Sharon, Judge Terry himself and many lesser lights took exciting parts at various stages of the performance.

Judge David S. Terry's death was a consistent culmination of the stormy life which he led from the time he left his home in Kentucky, where he was born in 1823. The spirit of adventure early took possession of the Kentucky youth, and he went to Texas and joined in the war against Mexico, fighting through it under the banner of Sam Houston. Later he was admitted to the bar, and in 1849 he went to California, where he soon became prominent. In 1855 he was elected justice of the supreme court of California on the Native American ticket, and in 1857 he became chief justice, succeeding Chief Justice Murray.

The famous vigilance committee, of which so much has been written, was organized in 1856. Its members were among the best citizens of San Francisco, and at its head was W. T. Coleman, the great shipping merchant and railroader. The committee was organized to quell the lawlessness which in those days ran riot.

Neely Johnson, who was at that time governor of the state, had ordered a quantity of arms shipped to San Francisco in a vessel. They were to be used against the committee, who were on the lookout for them, however, and succeeded in capturing twelve cases of muskets which had been concealed under brick in the sloop's hold. One of the men who was instrumental in having the arms shipped was Dr. Shirtliff, who was a friend of Judge Terry, and whom the committee promptly decided to arrest. Judge Terry, in order to prevent this, immediately left his seat on the supreme bench and proceeded to San Francisco. There Dr. Shirtliff and Terry were found in a lawyer's office by a part of the committee, headed by one Hopkins, who demanded Shirtliff's surrender. Both men gave up their firearms, and then Terry, without warning, plunged a knife into Hopkins' neck. The two men, Terry and Shirtliff, then escaped to a neighboring armory, but eventually, however, they gave themselves up.



JUDGE TERRY. SENATOR BRODERICK.
JUDGE FIELD.
SARAH ALTHEA HILL. SENATOR SHARON.
DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

It looked bad for Terry for some little time, but he finally escaped, owing much, it is said, to the efforts of David C. Broderick, whom he afterwards shot in the duel which is so historically notorious, and who declared that he paid a newspaper $200 a week to help Terry out of his scrape. It was at this juncture that the hatred which Terry carried in his heart toward Senator Sharon was first conceived. Sharon was a member of the vigilance committee and a man of great influence with his constituents. Terry in the hour of his need appealed to Sharon for aid, but was refused. Terry never forgave him. His enmity to Broderick is of later date and belongs to the political controversy which followed, and in which the two men were opposed to each other.

David Colbreth Broderick was born in Washington in 1820. He removed to New York when a boy and received a public school education there. His father was a stone cutter and he served his apprenticeship at the same trade. Later on he acquired considerable political influence in New York, but he was defeated for congress in 1846, and then determined to go west, where he at once plunged into the political pot. In 1849 he was elected a member of the California constitutional convention, in 1850 and again in 1851 he was elected to the state senate, and in the latter year he became presiding officer of that body. It was at this point that the breach between Broderick and Terry began to widen. Broderick was the leader of the Free Soil wing of the Democratic party, while William M. Gwinn and Terry were leaders of the Pro-Slavery party. In 1856 Broderick was elected to the United States senate, and at the same time he gained control of the state legislature.

Another vacancy in the United States senate occurred a little later. Broderick had Gwinn elected, first, however, requiring him to write a letter renouncing all federal patronage, which was afterwards published and became known as the scarlet letter. During the campaign of 1859 the breach between Broderick and Terry widened, until Broderick went so far as to make a few remarks which were overheard by a friend of Terry's and were promptly taken up. Terry challenged Broderick to mortal combat. The duel was fought on Sept. 13, 1859, and resulted in the death of Broderick. Nothing was done to Terry. He joined the Confederate forces during the war, and afterwards went back to California, where he was elected to the legislature and grew rich. His political career, however, was practically over. He lived a comparatively peaceful life, attracting but little attention to himself until Sarah Althea Hill began her celebrated divorce suit against Senator Sharon.

Sarah Althea Hill was and is in all respects a remarkable creature. She was born in Cape Girardeau, Mo., in 1850, and came of good stock, numbering among her relatives some of the best families in the state. She was beautiful, dashing, and many were her conquests over her numerous admirers. Although she was known as a coquette and inclined to be fast, no breath of scandal had ever been raised against her down to the time she left her home for California with her [illegible] where Justice Field made his decision that Sarah Althea accused him of bribery, and it was here that Judge Terry drew his knife, for which actions he and his wife were both sentenced to imprisonment, and both vowed vengeance, it is said, against Justice Field. The rest of the story is well known. The meeting of Field and Terry in the hotel at Lathrop, and the shooting of Terry by Deputy United States Marshal Nagle, who had been appointed Justice Field's body guard, forms a tragic ending to a tumultuous life.

Justice Field, who seems to have had a narrow escape, is one of America's most prominent men. He is one of four brothers—David Dudley, Stephen J., Cyrus W. and Dr. Henry M.—all famous men. Judge Field was born in Haddam, Conn., in 1816. He is a graduate of Williams college, and went to California in 1849. He succeeded Judge Terry in 1859 as chief justice.

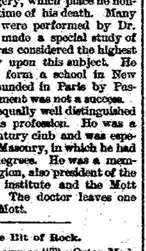
THE LATE DR. MOTT.

One of America's Most Distinguished and Famous Surgeons.

Dr. Alexander B. Mott, who recently died on his farm at Yonkers, N. Y., was born in New York city March 31, 1826. At 10 years of age his father took him to Europe, where he remained in school for five years. Returning to New York he studied medicine in his father's office and in the Medical college of the University of New York. He also studied at the Vermont Academy of Medicine in Castleton, where he was graduated in 1850. Then he began active practice in New York city. The New York Medical college gave him a diploma in 1851. In 1850 he was appointed surgeon in the New York dispensary, and three years afterward was made visiting surgeon at St. Vincent's hospital, which he had helped to found in 1849. In 1857 he took the degree of M. D. from the University of Pennsylvania and was appointed attending surgeon at Bellevue hospital in 1859. The medical corps of the militia regiments that were sent to the war was organized by Dr. Mott in 1861. Later on the United States Army General hospital, of which he was director, was founded. In 1862 he received the commission of surgeon of the United States volunteers, with the rank of major. Toward the close of the war he acted as medical inspector of the Department of Virginia and was attached to the staff of Gen. Edward O. C. Ord. He was present at the conference between Gen. Grant and Gen. Lee when they arranged the term of surrender of the Confederate forces.



DR. A. B. MOTT.

The success of Bellevue Medical college is due largely to Dr. Mott, who was one of the founders of that institution, and in which he held the chair of surgical anatomy from 1861 till 1872, when he became professor of clinical and operative surgery, which place he honorably filled to the time of his death. Many difficult operations were performed by Dr. Mott. The doctor made a special study of hydrophobia, and was considered the highest American authority upon this subject. He and his son tried to form a school in New York like the one founded in Paris by Pasteur, but the experiment was not a success.

Dr. Mott was as equally well distinguished in society as in his profession. He was a member of the Century club and was especially interested in Masonry, in which he had a number of high degrees. He was a member of the Loyal Legion, also president of the American Pasteur Institute and the Mott Memorial library. The doctor leaves one son, Dr. Valentine Mott.

A Strange Bit of Rock.

The bit of rock known as "The Orton Madstone" is the property of T. M. Orton, a typical Illinois pioneer, who removed to that state from Kentucky when Joseph Smith and his Mormon followers fled from Missouri into Illinois. It is claimed by its enthusiastic admirers that this stone has wrought untold good to humanity. It is estimated to have saved no less than a hundred people from the horrors of death. An old man from Louisiana, named Hoagland, located in Kentucky in the neighborhood of the school Mr. Orton was attending, having this madstone with him. His story is that the stone was found in an Indian mound by a colored preacher. Hoagland did not know of any wonderful cures that had been effected by its application [illegible] tained, nobody treated by the stone has ever suffered from hydrophobia. A young man who had been bitten through the wrist by a rabid dog sought treatment in Denver. The madstone was applied and adhered immediately; in a few moments a great stream of blood, water and greenish matter soaked through the stone and ran down upon the floor. The arm was swollen to twice its natural size, but in a short time the swelling was all gone. So far this year Mr. Orton has applied the stone to a number of persons who are all recovering.

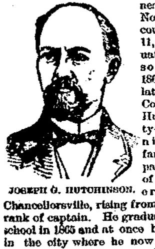
The stone is first boiled in milk and water, the wound is then scarified by an attending physician and the stone applied. Those who use it complain of a strange drawing sensation, and say that the stone acts as if it were alive. It resembles a piece of petrified honeycomb, and is like coral in general appearance and weight.

GUBERNATORIAL NOMINATIONS.

Hutchinson, Republican, in Iowa, and McKinney, Democratic, in Virginia.

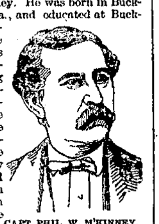
Joseph G. Hutchinson, who was recently nominated for governor by the Republicans of Iowa, is a resident of Ottumwa, having lived there since 1865. He was born near Watsontown, Northumberland county, Pa., Sept. 11, 1840, and graduated from Dickinson seminary in 1862. Two months later he enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Thirty-first Pennsylvania volunteer infantry, and participated in the battles of Antietam, Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville, rising from private to the rank of captain. He graduated from a law school in 1865 and at once began practicing in the city where he now lives. Six years ago he gave up the law to become president of the Ottumwa National bank, which position he resigned last fall.



JOSEPH G. HUTCHINSON.

He has been elected to the state legislature a number of times, having served as representative several terms, and as state senator during the last two sessions.

The Virginia Democratic state convention named as its candidate for governor Capt. Phillip W. McKinney. He was born in Buckingham county, Va., and educated at Buckingham Sidney college and at Judge Brockenborough's law school at Lexington, graduating from that institution with the honors of his class. He entered public life at an early age, being elected to the general assembly when he was but 21 years old. He won his military title in the Confederate cavalry, and received a wound at Brandy Station that incapacitated him for further field service during the war.



CAPT. PHIL. W. M'KINNEY.

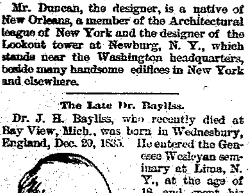
He went to Farmville after the great civil struggle ended, and has practiced law there ever since. He has been nominated for but one political office since his election to the general assembly until the present gubernatorial nomination was tendered him. In 1881 he was named for attorney general on the same ticket with Maj. John Daniel and Mr. James Barbour, but was defeated, the Mahone party sweeping the state.

IN SOLDIERS' MEMORY.

Sketch and Cut of the Arch to Be Erected by the City of Brooklyn.

The city of Brooklyn now proposes to erect an arch to the memory of the Union soldiers who went from within her borders to fight in the civil war. The prize design has been chosen by the committee, John H. Duncan, of New York, being the successful competitor. The accompanying cut will give the reader some idea of the proposed arch.

The structure will stand in a detached place across the roadway at Prospect Park, between the fountain and the park entrance proper. It is to have a span of sixty-four feet, with a clear space between the ground and the keystone of sixty-five feet. It will be one hundred feet high over all, and very nearly the same figures will measure its breadth.



THE PROPOSED ARCH.

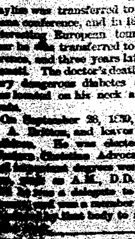
The arch will spring from two heavy masses of masonry, which will not be pierced by smaller gateways for foot passengers, but which will contain stairways, reached by doors on the sides, which will lead to a chamber at the top of the structure, where will be exhibited various relics of the war. This apartment will be lighted from above, so that there need be no windows to lessen the idea of massiveness presented by the simple unbroken lines of the masonry. What the architectural details of this attic will be is to some extent undecided upon, but they will be bold and simple. A space will be left for the inscription:

TO THE DEFENDERS OF THE UNION.
1861—1865.

Mr. Duncan, the designer, is a native of New Orleans, a member of the Architectural league of New York and the designer of the Lookout tower at Newburg, N. Y., which stands near the Washington headquarters, beside many handsome edifices in New York and elsewhere.

The Late Dr. Bayliss.

Dr. J. H. Bayliss, who recently died at Bay View, Mich., was born in Wednesbury, England, Dec. 20, 1835. He entered the Genesee Wesleyan seminary at Lima, N. Y., at the age of 16, and spent his student days there, as well as in Genesee college, until February, 1857. The same year he entered the New York Genesee conference, and in 1866 was transferred to the Chicago and Rock River conference. In 1871 Dr. Bayliss was transferred to the Southeast Indiana conference, and in 1878 he went on an interesting European tour. The following year he was transferred to the Detroit conference, and three years later to that of Cincinnati. The doctor's death was caused by a very dangerous diabetes carbuncle, which was located on his neck at the base of the brain.



J. H. BAYLISS, D. D.

On September 26, 1859, he married Miss S. A. Britton, and leaves behind him five children. He was elected editor of The Western Christian Advocate in 1884. Several important degrees were conferred upon him, such as A.M. D.D. and LL.D. THE HAY FEVER SEASON
July, August, September.
"At this season, when life offers the greatest attractions and the most delightful resources to persons whose soundness of body permits out-of-door exercises and amusements, multitudes are debarred from the joys of the summer by hay fever, one of the most exasperating, wearisome, and depressing ills to which humanity is subject—obscure, inexplicable, descending on a given date like an invisible blow of fate. The sufferers from hay fever have looked in vain for any trustworthy remedy. Many of them, however, have looked in vain because they have been ignorant of Ely's Cream Balm, an admirable remedy for hay fever in all its forms. Agreeable in the use, entirely devoid of any unpleasant after-effects, this Cream Balm quickly allays inflammation and secures that relief for which the sufferer has longed in vain."—From the Christian Union, New York City, July 18, 1889.

BARNUM'S Circus was wrecked near Potsdam last Friday morning and thirty ring horses a chariot team and two camels killed. The loss is estimated at $40,000 besides the loss of the day's receipts for the show at Montreal which would be between $15,000 and $18,000. Montreal is that much ahead however.

A NEW YORK paper is already figuring on the profits that will accrue to the city from the World's fair in 1892. It figures that there will be half a million visitors in New York daily during the six months of the fair; that the expense for board, etc., per capita will average not less than $5 per day, making a total of $450,000,000. It also estimates that these visitors will, in the aggregate, buy goods to the amount of $900,000,000.

A PREMEDITATED and brutal murder was committed in Lenox, about four miles distant from Oneida, on Thursday last. The victim was Miss Maud Bortle, a sixteen year old daughter of a prosperous farmer living in the above mentioned town. The murderer is a dissipated individual aged thirty-five years and a cousin of the murdered girl. He shot her dead in the house with no apparent cause than that his infatuation for her was not met with favor. Let the law take its course speedily and surely.

Four murderers, Packenhein, Nolan, Lewis and Carolin, paid the penalty for their crimes and were hanged in the tombs at New York on Friday last. Each was the murderer of a woman.

[illegible] Circus.

The circus arrived in town Sunday afternoon and a large crowd watched with interest the transfer of the tents, animals et al from the cars at the R. W. & O. depot to the grounds on the plains. The circus and everything connected with it is not a gilt edged affair in fact it is rather tame throughout but it is a circus and for time eternal for aught we know anything that travels under that name will attract a crowd. On Monday morning early large numbers began to arrive from all points of the compass and by 10 o'clock First street presented quite a Broadway like appearance. All had come to witness the grand free parade and many to attend the afternoon performance. The circus procession went across lower bridge to Oswego Falls; back by the upper bridge and down First street to the grounds. The afternoon performance was not very largely attended and although some of the specialities were good, there seemed to be no one but considered that they had seen better before, unless it was someone that had never seen a circus That number is small in this locality. The evening performance drew out a larger crowd.

THE NEW [illegible] GUN.

A [illegible]

The latest addition to the [illegible] of warfare is another form of the pneumatic gun. The chief difference between it and the Zalinski gun is found in the method of compressing and using the air that propels the shot. In the Zalinski weapon very powerful air pumps compress the air, which is stored in reservoirs large enough to provide for about twenty shots. At each fire a specially constructed valve admits the air to the gun from the reservoir. In the recent invention there is to be no storage of air, but at each discharge the air is compressed by a charge of powder which acts upon a moving piston and at the same time drives the shell from the bore of the gun.

The first cut gives a very good idea of the general construction of the large caliber gun of this variety, which is something like an ordinary powder gun mounted on trunnions. Only a small part of the barrel is shown here. The patent is upon "the combination of chamber A, so made as to contain an explosive. B is a piston, located therein. In the rear of the piston is a chamber for the explosive. D is the gun barrel, with a projectile in it. F, the headpiece, connects the gun barrel with the air compressing chamber in front of the piston. Means for loading the barrel breech piece, I; the explosive chamber, C, and the means for loading and exploding the charge."

The gun will work as follows: The charge of powder is placed in position in the small chamber C, with the heavy piston B, at the rear of the chamber A, also the projectile as shown in the cut. The powder is exploded by the usual means, driving the piston forward in the chamber, rapidly compresses the air between the piston and projectile and starts the latter in its flight. The larger the size of the chamber in proportion to the size of the barrel the greater will be the speed of the shot.

At the point E the barrel is hinged and locked at H. Release H to load and let the gun barrel drop into an inclined position. The piston is then pushed back to the rear of the chamber, the shot placed in the gun barrel and by turning the breech to one side the charge of powder is put in from the rear. The range of the new gun will probably be much less than that of the Zalinski and it appears that such heavy charges cannot be thrown. As no air compressing machinery is required, a number of these guns could be mounted like ordinary guns on board ship for using small charges of high explosives at short ranges. The Mefford-Zalinski dynamite gun, which throws immense charges at all distances up to two miles, still remains a distinct type.

When used as a field gun the system is somewhat changed, though the governing principle remains the same. The Zalinski gun is not intended, nor can it be used, for field artillery service, owing to the necessity for reservoirs and pumps. An entirely novel means of throwing high explosives in army operations is found in the new gun. The second cut shows the gun mounted on its field carriage. The chamber, A, is adapted to contain air to be compressed by an explosive therein. B is the breech piece. C is an explosive charge, with firing mechanism B. There is also a safety valve consisting of a diaphragm plate, D, and the cap EE holds it in place. A gun barrel, G, contains the projectile H and has a breech piece, I, and the tube, F, uninterruptedly connects the air compressing chamber with the gun barrel.

The field gun has no piston to compress the air, as the expansion of the powder gases performs that function. The diaphragm plate, D, being thinner than the breech piece or the walls of the gun, will certainly give way first, as a round opening is left for its fragments in the cap, EE, and thus safety is secured. By removing the breech piece, I, the projectile is put in at the breech end of the gun barrel, and the charge in the chamber is put in from the rear by removing the breech piece, B. The gun can be elevated like any other field piece. A considerable range would very probably be attained if the gun barrel was of small caliber and the air chamber made very strong. The two systems are radically different. Each may have its uses—the former owing to the increased velocity, greater range and penetration, and the latter has the advantage at times of securing the explosive force of immense charges of high explosives against ships and forts.

Scribner's Magazine.

Scribner's Magazine for September contains the opening chapters of a new serial—an exciting and patriotic romance of colonial days by Harold Frederick, the last regular article in the successful railway series of twelve papers, which, after thorough revision, are soon to be published in a handsome volume; another of the fishing articles, this time describing the picturesque Nepigon region of Canada; an out-of-door paper by W. Hamilton of Gibson, with the author's own illustration; an end paper by the famous Irish leader, historian and novelist, Justin McCarthy; and other striking papers on literary, educational and military topics by eminent writers, with short stories and poems. Andrew Lang writes the opening article of this issue—a eulogy of Alexandre Dumas, "A Word of Gratitude and delight to the Indomitable Master." "Safety in Railroad Travel," is by H. G. Prout, editor of the Railroad Gazette. Harold Frederick's romance of the Mohawk region of New York, entitled "In the Valley," opens with one of the last raids and massacres of the French and Indian war in the eighteenth century. The various departments are unusually interesting.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23, 1889.

The consular service offers to a worn out and hard up politician an opportunity to gracefully retire from the world for a time and give Mr. Micawber's something a chance to "turn up." Once in a while you find an ex-Congressman brave enough to accept a clerkship or the chiefship of a division, but they are very few as most men would prefer to take even a consulate worth $1,000 per annum net rather than meet the patronizing sympathy of old associates. Even a post on some storm-swept island where a vessel calls once in three months, would be preferable to that. There is at least a high sounding title and the respect of the natives in it.

Not more than twenty-five per cent. of the incumbents of diplomatic positions have been changed although the State department is stacked with applications and still they come. Not a few of the positions yet to be filled are really valuable ones.

The most important appointment to be made is that of Minister to Russia, which position has been vacant since the death of Allan Thorndyke Rice. The salary is $17,500. The next in importance is that of Minister to China, which is of the second class, with a salary of $12,500. Then comes the Corean post, which silver-tongued Bill Bradley, of Kentucky, refused saying that he would not accept it if the salary were doubled. The position is worth $7,500. Bolivia, Persia and Siam remain to be filled with Republican ministers at the rate of $5,000 per annum and there is a regular Kilkenny fight among the colored republican statesmen over the post at Liberia and the $4,000 salary.

Only fifteen changes have been made among the thirty-eight consulate general4. These positions pay from $8,000 up and the average is $5,000. Only one fourth of the consulates have been filled by Republicans, although the salaries average $2,500 per annum. In the third class only three out of twenty-four have been filled. The salaries in this class are $1,000 per annum and fees. There have been no changes in the eighty-five consulates of the smaller class, which pay only a few hundred dollars per annum and are given to permanent residents of the countries in which these posts are located.

The ex-Treasury employes of the last Republican regime, who are still waiting anxiously for reappointment, are grievously offended by Secretary Windom. When President Harrison selected that large loose jointed individual, whose retirement from politics had been supposed to be final, for his Secretary of the Treasury and brought him again before a public that had long forgotten him, the small fry Republican politicians were unqualified in their delight There was to be, they thought a good old-fashioned take-everything-in-sight administration of the Treasury department. But a change seems to have come over the Secretary since he was Senator. He has imbibed of the doctrine of civil service reform and there is woe in the camp of the faithful.

The disagreements of Secretary Windom and certain Congressmen come to light every day. When he returned to his desk the other day he found a letter from Tom Reed, asking why the revenue collector for the district embracing Maine had not been appointed. The letter set forth that the Maine delegation was solid for one candidate, and it appeared to the writer remarkable that the appointment had not been made. To this petulant communication he replied that, as the district comprised also the States of Vermont and New Hampshire, and the delegations from these States had agreed upon candidates from their respective States he hesitated to select anyone until he "could more fully investigate." Think of talking to a Maine man of the political rights of the States of Vermont and New Hampshire compared with those of the mighty commonwealth of Maine.

Despite the alleged coolness between Col. Dudley and Pres. Harrison few men have a greater influence than Col. Dudley in the departments. All day long his office is crowded with people who wish him to endorse them for appointment to clerkships in this or that department. As his sympathies are quick, the reply is generally favorable, and thus the number of people he has endorsed for various positions must reach several hundred. They are not alone Indianians. His influence is greatest in the Pension Bureau and in the new Census office, where he has already secured forty or fifty appointments.

The latest sensation created by Secretary Windom is his order regarding special agents of the Treasury department. Hereafter all candidates for such positions must appear before a board of examiners, and be examined as to their fitness.

Cheese Market Report.

(From the Utica Herald.)

AT UTICA.

UTICA, Aug. 26.

There was no anxiety among salesmen over the decline in cheese to-day. Their confidence that it will revive again soon was evidenced by the holding back of two to four days make in many cases. The cool weather, combined with the solid character of the August cheese, gives them courage to wait a little longer. There were no special features to the market. Prices were not named until very late in the day, but it was known that they would be lower. Nearly the whole offering was of August stock, with a small sprinkling of late Julys. White cheese and small sizes sold at ⅛@¼c. lower, than the same quality of Shippers. It would not be surprising if some of this stock was taken to store away until a more convenient occasion. It is certainly cheap enough to tempt a buyer with a good home trade.

Sales of the day were as follows:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
77	7,016	7¾
37	2,945	8
1	80	7⅞
15	1,021	8⅛
20	1,734	8¼
4	400	8⅜
4	425	p. t.
158	13,701
	1,066	Com.
Total.	14,767

Ruling price 7¾c. Transactions one year ago 13,982 boxes, ruling price 8¾c. Two years ago 14,535 boxes; ruling price 11¼c.

There were sales of 65 packages creamery butter at 17 @ 20c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Aug. 26.

Cheese.—To-day's market has been an almost perfect reproduction of that of a week ago. Prices are the same and quantities are almost identical with those reported last Monday. There is some disappointment that the clearing out of July stock has not helped prices, and the confidence in a speedy improvement is firm enough so that there is quite a holding back of cheese which would go forward under a more favorable market. It was believed that the shipment to-day would be larger than last week. but the figures show a falling of 500 boxes. This is the time of year when better prices are always expected, and many conservative cheese men believe that it must come soon.

Following is our usual table:

Lots	Boxes	Price.
30	3,177	7¾
49	2,819	8c.
22	1,665	8¼
1	80	p. t.
12	502	Com.
134	8,243
Farm dairy	1,058
Total	9,301

Farm dairies—1,058 boxes of farm dairy cheese sold to-day at 8@8¼c., with the bulk at the former price.

Butter—The sales of butter are: Thirty-three packages of creamery at 18c, 15 packages farm dairy at 17@18c.

AT FULTON.

The usual number of factories were represented at this market on Monday with about 2,420 boxes of cheese. Less than 300 boxes sold at 7¾ cents the Utica ruling. Buyers would not pay more and the salesmen did not care to let it go at that figure.

Sunday's [illegible] Accident.

About 7:30 Sunday morning a coal car on a freight train of the N. Y. O. & W. road going north jumped the track at the frog just south of the Cayuga street crossing. The car which was the third from the end of the train was dragged along tearing up ties, &c. until at a point near Rust's coal and lumber office where the hind truck was wrenched from the car. The hind half of the body of the car dropped onto the track and was dragged along another 100 yards or so before the train was stopped. The damage done was slight for an accident of this kind. Section hands were soon on the ground replacing the broken ties and rails and a wrecking train came from Oswego. In a few hours the track was cleared so that trains could pass by using the switch track below Oneida street. The great power of a train could not but be noticed by anyone walking down the track Sunday forenoon and observing the torn ties, twisted rails and broken pieces of iron scattered about. It is fortunate that nothing more serious occurred.

"We Are the People."

Twenty-eight members of The Pathfinder Boat Club went to Three Rivers yesterday in True Bros. Naptha yacht, the Foster Bros. steam yatch, Pathfinder, and "Herm" Collins new electric yacht. A most enjoyable day was spent on the journey there and back and at this new resort.

An exciting base ball game was played between two nines chosen from the members present. Lack of time prevents a detailed account of the many excellent plays made by those that participated.

Foot ball, quoits and other games were also enjoyed. As a quiet and pleasant outing the trip to Three Rivers yesterday will be an occasion long remembered by the members of the club that went.

"Herm" Collins' new electric yacht caused no small amount of favorable comment on its trip to Three Rivers yesterday. He had two other electricians on board, J. B. Phillips and Newton Rogers. The motor and battery was made by Mr. Collins himself and will run the boat 15 hours after the battery has been charged. It runs very nicely and can make the time which is made by steam yachts.

The manufacture of glass may be compared to the crystalization of pure water by the action of the air, for it is the breath of the workman that puts life and beauty into the lumps of soft metal that he draws from the pot; but when a man draws a carriage or wagon from Bristols it is the low price that puts life into him so that he can joyfully contemplate the beauty of the vehicle and the wondrous cheapness of his purchase.

The Gates Still Closed.

The hope and expectation that the R. & O. mill would be opened Monday and operations resumed proved of no avail. They are still idle and no one can tell when work will commence although Superintendent Ballou expects every day that a settlement will be reached with the Boston creditors and orders received to commence operations. Nothing new could be ascertained up to noon to-day. A number have been sent to Lawrence, Mass. by the agent for the Washington mills, Mr. Fitch. Many will follow if news of a definate nature is not soon received.

Round trip tickets will be sold on the R. W. & O. road to Syracuse from this station Monday to attend the Labor Day parade.

The Three River Point Accident.

On last Wednesday afternoon the steam yacht Bessie G. Lang was nearly cut in two by the Wide Awake another yacht from Brewerton at the junction of the Seneca and Oneida rivers. The Bessie G. Lang had just started on her return trip to Phœnix from the picnic grounds and had thirty passengers on board when she was run into. She rapidly sunk. The Wide Awake succeeded in rescuing all but one, Miss Clara VanWormer, a maiden lady of Phœnix about fifty years of age who was drowned.

Coroner Drury held an inquest and a jury investigated the facts connected with the death of Miss VanWormer. Their verdict was that Miss Clara VanWormer came to her death by drowning caused by an unavoidable collision between the boat Wide Awake and the boat Bessie Lang at Three Rivers on August 21, 1889.

The verdict does not meet with popular favor as it is considered that there was great carelessness if nothing more somewhere.

Old Settlers' Meeting.

The meeting of the old settlers of Oswego county at Gilbert's Grove, Richland, on Friday was well attended. John C. Wells of Granby was made president. Secretary Squires read his report in which he said that the oldest persons now living in the county were: Mrs. Perkins of Oswego Town, 105; John Sieith, of Orwell, 102; Mrs. Carey of Sandy Creek and Mrs. Keeler of Hastings, 101 years each; Mrs. Snow of Hastings and James Pete of Parish 99 each; Mrs. Banderlinder of Granby, 97; Mrs. Irish of New Haven, 95, and Dea Jaben Wood of South Richland, 94. The resident longest in the county is Hyman Evarts of Granby, who was born at Middlebury, Vt., October 2, 1795. He came with his father Henry Evarts, and settled at the foot of Seneca Hill, in the town of Scriba, in the spring of 1798.

A Long Time on Its Way.

An interesting relic turned up in the Waterloo post-office last Thursday morning. It was a letter addressed to John Higbee, Waterloo, N. Y., and bearing the post mark of Syracuse, N. Y., December 28, 1860. it bore one of the old style one cent stamps with the profile of Franklin. It also bore the postmark of Leadville, Col., August 4, 6 p. m. 1889. One end of the envelope, which was a faded yellow color, was partly motheaten and it presented a decidedly "back-number" appearance. The time consumed by this letter in traveling from Syracuse to Waterloo is twenty-eight years, seven months and ten days.—Rochester Union.

Wednesday Aug. 28, 1889.

WORTH KNOWING.

Reports of potato rot are general.

Oats and hay have both been more or less damaged by rain, although large crops were secured.

Rye is one of the best things to sow for fall, winter and spring pasture.

Sweat and dust, as well as ill-fitting collars, cause the horse's shoulder to gall.

The cattle industry of the United States represents the immense capital of $1,200,000,000.

Kentucky raises 300,000,000 pounds of tobacco every year, half of the crop of the United States.

Henry Wilson of Jefferson county, Ohio, has a cow that is 7 years old and weighs less than 200 pounds. The animal is about 3½ feet high.

A watermelon farm at Adams Park, Ga., which consists of 600 acres and produces 400 carloads of melons, is said to be the largest watermelon patch in the world.

Prof Johnson is credited with the statement that very finely ground bone is now one of the cheapest sources of quickly available nitrogen and phosphoric acid.

Beets, carrots and parsnips may be left in the ground where grown if covered over with earth.

Owners of horses and cattle are realizing more than ever before the necessity of keeping their stalls clean and healthy. Land plaster makes one of the very best absorbents.

The farmer who keeps careful account of his farm, stock and products will be able to meet the census taker when he comes next year with correct statements and not guessed at positions.

To produce good wool, the sheep must have the proper food. There is no better hay then clover for sheep and no better grain than oats and bran with a little oil meal.

Undrained lands suffer from hot and dry weather, the reason for it being, according to an authority on drainage, that, although there may be water within a few inches of the surface, the ground becomes so compact and baked that it is not sufficiently porous to draw up moisture.

If you had taken two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring you would not have had that coated tongue or bad taste in the mouth this morning. Keep a vial with you for occasional use.

THE PROPER THING.

Camel's hair, china crape, faille and armure are the materials for handsome black dresses for autumn.

A novelty among long wraps, called the Ursuline cloak, is a conventional garment similar to those worn by nuns.

Large plaids in fancy colors and in many of the genuine clan tartans in thick, yet light, soft wools, will be worn this winter.

Faced cloths for next season's tailor gowns will be trimmed with fur bands and with much braid set on the foot of the skirt.

Bandeaux of gilt beads are placed in black lace bonnets for the demi-season, instead of the flat bands of gilt worn last winter.

Shoulder capes of cloth, with an upper cape almost as full as a ruffle, will be worn in the intermediate season before heavy wraps are required. Fur shoulder capes will also be worn in the early autumn days.

Bead necklaces are the fashion of the moment in Paris. Large, round gold beads in a single strands, linked together in the old fashioned way, are worn high around the neck, with the low-throated dresses that are now in vogue.

Large bowls of faille or satin ribbon are placed down the flat front of dressy gowns, and similar bows cross the foot of the front and side breadths. Five bows are down the front, one at the belt, another at the foot, and three in the space between. Three loops at the top of each bow extend upward, and three are below, with a tight cross strap in the middle.

"Is Colonel Carter in, sah?"

"No, sir. He went down to see the editor of the Press about three hours ago."

"Was he going to stay?"

"I guess not. He was pretty mad when he lefs here."

"I have about concluded that he found the editor in."—Time.

A Woman's Discovry.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made and that too by a lady in this county. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed eminent. For three months she coughed incessently and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for the Consumption and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus write W. C. Hamrick & Co. of Shelby N. C.—Get a free trial bottle at R. E. Phillips' drug store

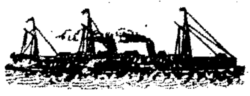
THE STEAMSHIP TEUTONIC.

She Is the Longest Passenger Boat Now Afloat.

The Teutonic, the new steamship of the White Star line, which recently made her maiden trip across the Atlantic, is the first of the great steamships which will be famous for their great length. Her builders are Messrs. Harland & Wolff, of Belfast, Ireland. She is the longest ship now afloat; her length is 582 feet; breadth of beam, 57 feet 6 inches; depth, 39 feet 4 inches, and gross tonnage nearly 10,000 tons. She is built of Siemens-Martin steel, and is furnished with two independent sets of triple expansion engines. Her twin propellers are provided with manganese bronze blades. She resembles her predecessors, the Adriatic, Germanic, etc., in the distinctive features of the form and build of the hull. She is subdivided by athwartship bulkheads, and a longitudinal bulkhead runs fore and aft throughout the greater part of her length. The additional rigidity and strength, as well as greater security of the ship in case of collisions, is accomplished. Instead of the familiar four masts the Teutonic has only three, which are entirely free of yards. The twin screws render a larger amount of sail power superfluous.



THE TEUTONIC.

This vessel has accommodation for only 300 saloon passengers, who will all dine at one time; 150 second class passengers, and about 750 steerage. The forward end of the ship is for the single men of the steerage, the center for the saloon passengers, and the after end for the second cabin passengers and the married people and single women of the steerage. The main saloon is exactly in the center. The promenade deck is 245 feet long, with a clear space of eighteen feet on each side of the deck houses, and will be free of all obstruction, as the boats are placed on an awning deck. On this deck, besides the usual accommodation for the commander, there are state rooms for passengers, having direct communication with the decks below.

The library joins the main entrance; it is paneled with light oak and will be lighted at the sides by windows covered by glass shutters. The smoking room is on the upper deck; richly gilt embossed leather covers the wall; the design is a reproduction of old Flemish "cuir repousse." Panels in the sides of the rooms are filled with paintings of marine scenes. Shallow niches, each holding a figure in high relief carved in pear wood after Donatello, fill up the other spaces. The ceiling is of an old English plaster pattern, in variously shaped panels with molded rosettes. Ornamental glass shutters will darken the windows at night.

The decoration of the principal saloon is of the Renaissance period. The walls are penciled out by shallow molded framework, richly enameled and slightly relieved with gold. The figures will have an ivory like surface and tint. The ports are fitted with stained glass blinds emblazoned with the arms of the principal states and cities of America and Europe. Electric lights are placed behind these, so that the design is visible by night or day. The ceiling is in ivory and gold and richly ornamented. Forward and immediately below the saloon are the first class staterooms. A large proportion of these are two berth rooms, only without an upper berth. There are many large rooms for families, and some suitable for single passengers only. The pantry, galley, baker's shop, scullery, bread room and butcher's shop are abaft of the main saloon.

On the other side of the ship are the staterooms for the second class passengers. The accommodations for second class passengers include staterooms as good as the old fashioned first class rooms, and a dining room on the upper deck with smoke room above. A promenade deck is set apart for their own use, and there are also baths and lavatories. In the steerage the quarters for the single men and women are completely isolated from one another at each end of the ship. The quarters of the married people consist of two and four berthed rooms with separate entrances, closets and lavatories in each division. There is a bathroom for the women and children and a smoking room for the men.

The Teutonic is provided with electric light throughout.

The Teutonic is placed upon the naval reserve list of Great Britain, and it has been so arranged that twelve guns can be mounted on her forty-eight hours after arrival in port.

A Triumph of Dressmaking.

The ladies will surely be interested in the accompanying cut of the wedding dress of the Princess Louise, who was recently married to the Duke of Fife, and lest the engraver and the printer have not done the charming subject full justice, here is the official description thereof from the pages of the latest issue of The London Pall Mall Budget:

"The train is three yards long, made of white satin inside and out. The white satin bodice is nearly covered with the old lace, and so is the high Medici collar. The 'going away' dress is a simple dress of white Sicilian silk trimmed with narrow stripes of biscuit colored Velasquez lace. The front of the skirt is plain. The silk bodice is draped on the right side with silk from the shoulder, and fastens on the left side. Over this pretty gown the princess will wear a traveling cloak of white cloth in the Russian circular shape, with high sleeves and a Medici collar. The inside of this high collar is filled in with ostrich feather trimming, and the same trimming carried down on both sides of the cloak from the waist to the feet looks like a long boa. The going away bonnet is of white drawn tulle bordered round the brim with heather and trimmed with heather and white velvet. The narrow strings are of white velvet."

Bright's Disease.

A Ten-Year-Old Child Saved After the Failure of Four Physicians.

My little girl, ten years of age, was taken sick in March, 1888, with scarlet fever. When recovering she took a severe cold, which developed Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. Her ankles, feet and eyes were terribly swollen; she had a burning fever, and all the symptoms of an aggravated case of Bright's Disease. Four of our best physicians attended her, but without success, and

Her Life was Despaired of.

But a mother's love and prayers surmount all difficulties, and I determined to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y. This was a last resort, and I hoped, although my little daughter's case was a very severe one, that the Favorite Remedy would do for her what it had done for others whose condition had not been, seemingly, so hopeless. How happy I am that I determined upon this course—for an improvement was at once perceptible. The fever left her—her appetite improved—she gained six pounds in a short time, and one by one the well known and dreaded symptoms of the disease left her. Words fail to express my gratitude, and I cannot too earnestly recommend the Favorite Remedy. It was

The London Enquirer says the United States has the best torpedo service of any nation in the world.

Our readers have doubtless often noticed that Hood's Sarsaparrilla is well spoken of in the newspapers. The press is quick to recognize merit, and does not hesitate to give praise where it is due. The following is from the Baptist Weekly, a leading religious paper:

"Advertising may bring an article prominently before the public but no advertising can long help it if it has not real merit. Hood's Sarsaparilla is well advertised, but the best proof of its value is that so many persons use it on the recommendations of friends who have proved its peculiar virtues."

"Do you know why the chimney flue?" he asked, as he dropped into the visitor's chair. We didn't answer verbally, but we know why he tried to fly as we reached for the lever above the desk. But he was too late. There was a crash, a yell, a mangled form was thrown in the alley, a gong struck, and three figures appeared on the wall. Then all was silent. The Miller of Dee.

There dwelt a miller hale and bold,
Beside the River Dee;
He worked and sang from morn till night,
No lark more blithe than he;
And this the burden of his song
Forever used to be:—
"I envy no one, no, not I!
And no one envies me!"

"Thou'rt wrong, my friend," said old King Hal,
"As wrong as wrong can be;
For could my heart be light as thine
I'd gladly change with thee
And tell me now what makes thee sing
With voice so loud and free,
While I am sad though I am the king
Beside the River Dee."

The miller smiled and doffed his cap,
"I earn my bread," quoth he;
"I love my wife, I love my friend,
I love my children three;
I owe no man I can not pay,
I thank the River Dee
That turns the mill that grinds the corn
To feed my babes and me."

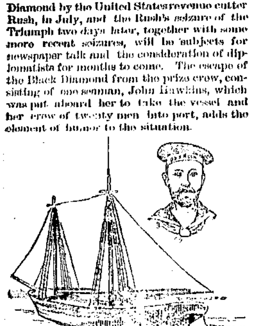
"Good friend," said Hal, and sighed the while,
"Farewell, thee happy be;
But say no more if thou'dst be true
That no one envies thee.
Thy mealy cap is worth my crown,
Thy mill my kingdom's fee;
Such men as thou art England's boast,
O, miller of the Dee."

IN THE ALASKAN WATERS.

POINTS SUGGESTED BY THE RECENT SEAL FISHERY COMPLICATIONS.

Pictures of the Black Diamond and the Triumph, English Sealers, the United States Revenue Cutter Rush and the One Man Crew, John Hawkins.

The seizure of the English sealer Black Diamond by the United States revenue cutter Rush, in July, and the Rush's seizure of the Triumph two days later, together with some more recent seizures, will be subjects for newspaper talk and the consideration of diplomatists for months to come. The escape of the Black Diamond from the prize crew, consisting of one seaman, John Hawkins, which was put aboard her to take the vessel and her crew of twenty men into port, adds the element of humor to the situation.



THE BLACK DIAMOND—JOHN HAWKINS.

The vessels concerned are all small craft and no interest is attached to them, except for the issues involved. The Black Diamond and the Triumph are only two-masted schooners; the revenue cutter Richard Rush is 161 feet long, 26 feet broad, 11¼ feet deep, 305 tons burden and was built in 1874 in Boston. She carries four guns. The schooner Minnie and the Pathfinder, both of which were seized after the Black Diamond and the Triumph, were sent to Sitka. The interests involved are national, and at this time something about the sealing ground will be of interest.

In 1725, under the commission of Peter the Great, an expedition was organized, crossed the continent from St. Petersburg to Kamchatka, where a vessel was constructed, and in July, 1728, sailed for explorations to north and east. That vessel was the Gabriel, and her master was Vitus Behring. On the expedition Behring crossed the waters of the Sea of Kamchatka, and discovered and named the island St. Lawrence. In 1733 a second expedition was organized under the auspices of the government and the commission of Queen Anne, and with Behring, raised to the rank of admiral, at its head, repeated the journey across Siberia, and in June, 1741, sailed for new discoveries. In July of that year Behring sighted the American continent, some authorities claim at the fifty-eighth degree of north latitude, others at the fiftieth degree. The latter is probably correct, as it rests on the authority of Stellar, who accompanied the expedition, and Behring undoubtedly sailed as far south along the American coast as the forty-fifth parallel, in accordance with his instructions. He discovered several of the Aleutian islands and the Komanderoff group or couplet. On the larger of this couplet, which bears his name, he died on Dec. 19, 1741, after having suffered shipwreck.

Behring's discoveries started an interest in the new region, and in 1743, 1745, 1747 and 1749 a Cossack sergeant named Bossof made four consecutive voyages from the mainland of Kamchatka to the Behring and Copper islands in vessels of his own construction. In 1745 a sailor named Novidchinof, who had served under Behring, crossed the channel which connects the North Pacific ocean with the Behring sea and discovered the islands of Attoo and Agatoo, the former of which is now a boundary mark. In 1744 a small Russian merchant vessel reached the island of Atka and some of the smaller islands surrounding it.

Ten years later Glottoff advanced as far as the island of Ounak, and subsequently discovered Ounalaska and the whole of that group of the Aleutian chain known as the Fox Islands. He made a map of his explorations, which includes eight islands east of Ounalaska.

In 1760 a Russian merchant, Adreian Tolstyk, landed on the island of Adak, explored it and some of the surrounding islands and made a report of his discoveries to the Russian crown. This group was named after him, the Adreian Islands. The next year a ship belonging to a Russian merchant named Bechevin made the coast of the Alirska peninsula, and in the autumn of 1763 Glottoff, who discovered Ounalaska and the Fox group, reached the island of Kodiak. In 1768 two captains of the imperial navy, Krenitzen and Levashoff, sailed from Kamchatka in two government vessels, and the former passed the succeeding winter at Kodiak and the latter at Ounalaska. Twenty-five years succeeding the death of Behring the Russian ensign waved along the entire Aleutian chain, from Behring Island to the mainland of the North American continent.

Then came the seal fisheries. Expeditions, stimulated by the large remuneration of the fur traffic, were constantly fitted out at the ports along the shores of the Sea of Okotak and the mouth of the Amoor river for voyages of trade and exploration in the new country. In 1772 there were not less than twenty-five companies, employing a considerable fleet of small vessels. Under the auspices of one of these companies Shekeloff, a merchant of Bylsk, founded the first permanent settlement on the Island of Kodiak in 1784. From this point exploring expeditions were sent out, one of which crossed the strait between Kodiak and the mainland which bears Shekeloff's name, and explored the coast of the mainland as far as Cook's Inlet, upon the shores of which, in 1786, a settlement was established. Another pushed along the coast to Prince William sound and Cape St. Elias. In 1788 another of Shekeloff's ships visited Prince William sound, discovered Yakutat bay, and made a thorough exploration of Cook's Inlet. In the meantime, in 1786, Gehrman Pribylov, a Muscovite ship's mate, sailed from Ounalaska in a small sloop called the St. George, discovered the islands which bear his name, located in the heart of the Behring sea, and now far famed as the only seal rookeries in the known world.

In 1794 Alexander Baranoff, who had four years before been placed at the head of all the enterprises in the new country, and had made further discoveries, established a ship yard at Resurrection bay, on Prince William sound. About this time the first missionaries of the Greek church arrived, and missions were established at Kodiak, Ounalaska and Spruce Island. The next year Baranoff extended his operations and trading posts to Yakutat bay. Following this was the consolidation of all Russian interests in North America, giving rise to the Russian-American company, which was chartered the year that Baranoff founded Sitka, 1799. Under this company, chartered by the crown, patronized by nobility, sustained by consolidated capital and led by the energy of Baranoff, new explorations and settlements inevitably followed.

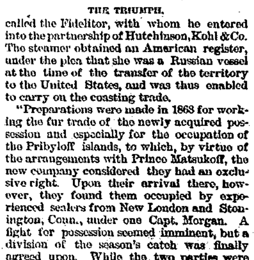
In 1867 negotiations were opened for the purchase of Alaska by the United States. The territory was transferred by Russia for $7,200,000, the treaty being ratified by the United States senate on May 20, 1867, and Gen. Lovel H. Rousseau, a Union general of distinction, was appointed commissioner to take possession. This he did on Oct. 18 of the same year. The headquarters of the military and collecting district were fixed at Sitka.

It is claimed by those who hold to the "closed sea theory" that when Alaska was ceded to the United States, the line of demarkation determining the western boundary of Behring's sea made it a Mare Clausum, from the southernmost point on Prince of Wales Island to a point near Atton Island of the Aleutian grant, thus making a complete close. This imaginary line of demarkation runs a course of about 900 miles from northeast to southwest. The whole area of Behring's sea, including Norton's sound and Bristol bay, is about 600,000 square miles. The St. George and St. Paul Islands, where most of the seal are captured, are about 700 miles north of the Aleutian peninsula and 500 miles west of the main line of coast. The seal are frequently found now several hundred miles from shore, and are gradually working their way to the northward.

An excellent summary of the events leading up to the present condition of the Alaskan seal fisheries was given by Sir Lionel Sackville West—afterward Lord Sackville—late British minister to the United States, in September, 1886, to Lord Addesleigh, then English secretary of state for foreign affairs:

"The transfer of the territory of Alaska to the United States government, in compliance with the terms of the treaty between the two governments, included the transfer of all the Russian government property, such as public buildings at Sitka, governor's house, custom house, hospital and wharves, etc. There were, however, certain buildings preserved as the property of the Russian Fur company, and as Gen. Rousseau, the United States commissioner, could not, in his official capacity, take any active or open part in its disposal, Prince Matsukoff, the Russian governor, concluded a bargain with Mr. Hutchinson, who accompanied Gen. Rousseau as his private secretary.

"This bargain included all the property of the Russian Fur company and the American officers stationed at Sitka, who claimed that they were entitled to a share of the spoils. By virtue of this bargain with Prince Matsukoff, who was governor of the company, Mr. Hutchinson proposed to take possession of the fur trade of Alaska and the seal islands, and left for Victoria, British Columbia, and San Francisco to make the necessary arrangements. At the former place he met with a Mr. Kohl, owner of a British steamer called the Fidelitor, with whom he entered into the partnership of Hutchinson, Kohl & Co. The steamer obtained an American register, under the plea that she was a Russian vessel at the time of the transfer of the territory to the United States, and was thus enabled to carry on the coasting trade.



THE TRIUMPH.

"Preparations were made in 1868 for working the fur trade of the newly acquired possession and especially for the occupation of the Pribyloff islands, to which, by virtue of the arrangements with Prince Matsukoff, the new company considered they had an exclusive right. Upon their arrival there, however, they found them occupied by experienced sealers from New London and Stonington, Conn., under one Capt. Morgan. A fight for possession seemed imminent, but a division of the season's catch was finally agreed upon. While the two parties were thus amicably at work, Mr. Pflugel, Russian vice consul at Honolulu, arrived at the head of an expedition, believing that he should find the islands unoccupied, but was eventually forced to retire before the combined forces of Capt. Morgan and Mr. Hutchinson.

"It now became obvious that the government must take means to preserve these valuable seal rookeries, and in the winter of 1868 an act of congress was passed, the conditions for permission to take seals being, however, reserved for future congressional action. The coalition between Hutchinson and Morgan still continued, and finally led to organization of the powerful and wealthy Alaska Commercial company. Since 1870 this company has controlled the entire fur trade of Alaska, and by virtue of its alliance with the lessees of the Russian seal islands controls the valuable fur seal trade of the world. With strong political influence in the congress of 1876 it obtained a lease of the Pribylof islands for twenty years at a rental of $55,000 a year and a royalty of $2.62 per skin, the take to be limited to 100,000 skins a year. It is calculated that the company pays annually $315,000 to the United States treasury, which, after paying all the expenses of the territory, yields more than 4 per cent. per annum on the purchase money paid to Russia for Alaska."

The "rookeries" of Behring sea contain several millions of seals. The adult males begin to arrive about the 1st of May each year, but the great body do not arrive till the 1st of June. The females come about the middle of June. Male seals under six years old are called "bachelors." They do not collect on the "rookeries," but have separate "hauling grounds." Nearly all the seals leave the islands about the end of October or the middle of November. The males on the "rookeries" do not go into the water from the time of "hauling up" in May till after the 10th of August. During this time they live by absorbing their own fat. After leaving the islands the seals spread out over the North Pacific.

The capture of seals for their skins begins when they first land on the islands, and may continue till they begin to shed their fur in August or September. The natives kill them with clubs, but only kill the "bachelors."

FALL FASHIONS FOR MEN.

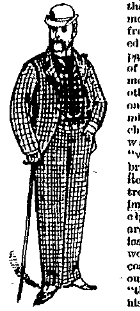
IF YOU HAVE A DRESS SUIT IT WILL REMAIN IN FASHION.

Some Interesting Descriptions, Illustrated with Timely Drawings of Some of the Suits That Will Be "the Thing" This Season.

To begin with, says The New York Haberdasher, in the course of an entertaining article on men's styles for this fall, you needn't worry about last year's dress suit; it's all right for the coming season.

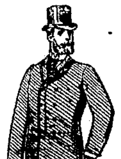
As for street garments there is little yet to be said. The single breasted cutaway still remains the popular garment for semi-dress. Although there has been some effort to bring forward double breasted cutaways, it has not been well received. Later they may go. So much for the actualities; whatever variation is developed later upon the two types mentioned above will be in matters of minor detail which will be unobservable to the layman's eye.

Coming to the possibilities, they add a new horror to life. Those somewhat unreliable persons, the London correspondents, represent that the Prince of Wales and his "set" are at present walking nightmares, by reason of costumes somewhat like that depicted. It is said that of late the prince has abandoned the tall hat at race meetings, and has frequently appeared clad in a suit apparently made up of unrelated fragments of several other suits, as item, one coat with a middle size gray check; item, one waistcoat (not "vest") with a little brown check; and item, one pair of trousers with an immense yellow check. As there are plenty of American idiots who would wear their coats wrong side out if they thought "the prince" wore his that way, it is not unlikely that this queer fad may take hold here, whatever may be its state of activity abroad; the more so that fancy waistcoats are quite the thing already, although of a decidedly different type from those making up part of the suit worn by the Prince of Wales.



Fancy waistcoats for street wear have been steadily increasing in favor for some time past, and bid fair to be extensively worn this season. The shapes are two—the materials legion. The double breasted vest, not worn extensively for many years, is again coming into marked favor. It is a rational and pleasing winter garment, and there seems no good reason why it should not be worn by many, especially when made up in "fancy" cloths. The more familiar shape is the single breasted garment with five buttons. Both shapes are illustrated in the accompanying sketches, which also depict typical patterns of the cloths used for this purpose. These cover a wide range of materials, various silk mixtures being the most general, and colored figures, except with blacks, being almost universal. Black grounds are numerous, either plain or embellished with figures. Colored grounds, such as dark blues, snuff, seal brown, tan, olive, etc., are also in much vogue, and these are all variously embellished both by fancy weaves in the grounds and by silk figures of white, red or blue. Silk is used to some extent in grounds, as in such weaves as matelasses, and it is univeral in the figures.

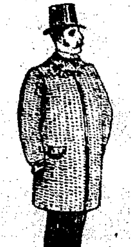
Another threatened innovation is in frock coats. Nobody wears frock coats nowadays but elderly gentlemen and country brethren from Wayback. But it is not the recent frock coat with which we are threatened—the genteel garment whose skirts come down well below the middle thigh—but a substitute for it closely resembling the bobby coat which Thomas and James wear when they go out with the coach and the horses. This frock coat is now worn to a considerable extent in England, and that it will at least be offered in New York is a foregone conclusion. Its distinguishing feature, of course, is its short skirts, which reach scarcely to mid-thigh, and present an appearance quite devoid of the dignity we are wont to associate with full skirted garments.



Heavy sack coats, worn without overcoats, were frequent upon the streets last winter. The same idea comes to the surface this season, but in a different and pleasing, because suitable, form. A round cut single breasted sack coat in winter leaves an impression of bareness and coldness. The garment worn by this stylish gentleman is not open to that objection; for a double breasted coat, closing to the very bottom, is not only warm and comfortable for winter, but looks warm and comfortable. Moreover, such a garment, of melton or kersey or diagonal, made up with lapped seams and heavy stitching, is extremely stylish in appearance.

Overcoats this season present some marked new features in detail; and, while the general effect is not materially different from that of last year, there is still difference enough to be distinctive.

The box coat is a handsome and stylish garment, made in meltons, kerseys and Irish friezes. All its seams are strap seams—that is, they have a narrow strap with rough edges overlaid upon them—which gives the coat great distinction. The coat hangs straight from the shoulders, and it is cut quite short, although not as short as the covert coat—say between that and the ordinary sack overcoat. The collar is a pretty feature. It is what is called a strap velvet collar—that is, one-half of velvet—and it has wide lapels. No box coat is good style unless it has fancy lining, and bright plaids are the thing. A very swell idea is a combination lining of fancy plaid and silk, the latter covering the upper, the former the lower part of the garment. The popular colors are the various blues, browns, drabs, tans, olive and black.



The English fly front overcoat is cut on very much the same lines as the box coat, but is somewhat longer. It also is cut to hang straight from the shoulders, as the strap collar and wide lapels. It has lap instead of strap seams, however. The back is cut full—that is, [illegible]

A very swell garment is the Lord Chumley overcoat, introduced last year and quite as correct this. It is this season made both single and double breasted, and its marked feature is a longer cape than hitherto. When the cape is detatched the double breasted form becomes a plain ulster. Fancy cheviots and nobby cassimeres are materials much used for this coat, comparative lightness being desirable in a garment whose main function is to wear with evening dress. Colors range from grave to gay, from light to dark, from plain to plaided, with plaids large enough and loud enough to stamp the wearer as an English lord.

In ulsters there is a decided innovation. All ulsters hitherto have had the piqued collar; this season the shawl, or continuous collar, is brought out. What it looks like is shown by the sketch. In this class of garments everything goes in the way of color and fabric, Irish frieze is just now a popular fabric. It has famous dirt and wear resisting qualities, but it is heavy for this climate. Chinchillas, plain and fancy, are also good.

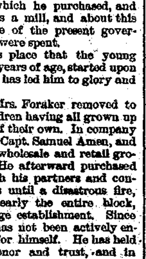
GOVERNOR FORAKER'S FATHER.

He Is Well Along in Years, but He Is Hale, Hearty and Genial Yet.

Few persons visit Hillsboro, O., without seeking an introduction to Henry S. Foraker, the father of Governor Foraker, and none leave without wishing the kindly old gentleman and his amiable wife many years of continued good health.

"I was born on Bumberhook island, in Delaware bay, on the 7th of June, 1815," said the old gentleman in reply to a question put by the writer. This makes him in his 75th year, five years older than Mrs. Foraker. Mr. Foraker's father, John Foraker, was a small farmer. He was of Irish descent, and his wife, whose maiden name was Robinson, was of German blood, and the old gentleman always insists that there is where the fighting qualities of the family came from. In 1819 John Foraker and his family removed to Ohio, settling on the land and building the hewed log house where his grandson, Joseph Benson Foraker, now governor of Ohio, was born.

Henry Foraker grew up on the farm, as most country boys do, and when his father died took his place, taking care of his mother until her death, and managing the farm to the best of his ability. In the course of time he fell in love with a rosy cheeked girl in the neighborhood, the daughter of David Reese, and they were married, and set up housekeeping at the old homestead. Here they remained until six children had been born to them, among them Joseph Benson. Mr. Foraker, Sr., delights in talking about this period of his lifetime, for although the days were full of toil, yet they were cheered and brightened by the help of his good wife and their young family. Mr. and Mrs. Foraker afterward removed to the farm owned by his father-in-law, which he purchased, and on which there was a mill, and about this romantic spot some of the present governor's happiest days were spent.



HENRY S. FORAKER.

It was from this place that the young country lad, but 15 years of age, started upon the pathway which has led him to glory and to fame.

In 1870 Mr. and Mrs. Foraker removed to Hillsboro, their children having all grown up and gone to homes of their own. In company with his son-in-law, Capt. Samuel Amen, and Mr. C. B. Miller, a wholesale and retail grocery was opened. He afterward purchased the interests of both his partners and continued the business until a disastrous fire, which destroyed nearly the entire block, swept away his large establishment. Since then Mr. Foraker has not been actively engaged in business for himself. He has held many offices of honor and trust, and in church and state affairs has always held the position of a leader. Tall, erect and active, he looks to be good for a century of years. His keen eye brightens when the name of his son is mentioned, but his conversation concerning him is extremely modest and restrained.

During the war, while a camp meeting was in progress in the Foraker neighborhood, news came of Gen. Lyon's death. Suddenly the services were closed, for all felt that soldiers were needed at the front. A drum and fife were secured, and a squad, headed by Joseph Benson Foraker, a lad then of 16, marched about the grounds calling for volunteers. It was too much for the old gentleman, and, jumping upon a stump, he too began calling for volunteers for the ninety days' service. "I'm going with you, boys," he said, and the result was fifteen recruits for Uncle Sam's service. At this time Mr. Foraker had one son already at the front, another (J. B.) enlisted and to start to the front in a day or two.

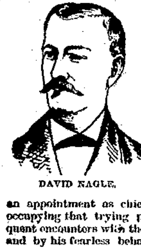
DAVID NAGLE.

The Man Who Shot Judge Terry in Defense of Justice Field.

Before Judge Terry slapped Justice Field's face that day he ought to have thought a bit about the quiet looking man who was sitting by the justice's side. Such men as David Nagle are unpleasant people to have around if one wants to do anything of that sort. A glimpse at Nagle's record is interesting as showing the kind of men that the emergencies of the west have turned out.

David Nagle is known throughout the Pacific coast as the terror of desperadoes, a lightning shot with the pistol, and a man who never yet allowed an antagonist to get the drop on him. He was raised in San Francisco, but early in the seventies he went to Arizona, having been attracted there by the mining excitement. He went into the contracting business, and took several large contracts to sink shafts in mines.

He was of a quiet, unassuming disposition, but desperadoes whom he came in contact with soon learned that he was a man who knew his rights and would not allow any one to trample on him. He opened a saloon at Tombstone and was soon doing well. In a short time he became a great favorite with the law abiding citizens of that booming town, and in 1881 he received an appointment as chief of police. While occupying that trying position he had frequent encounters with the criminal element, and by his fearless behavior he soon earned for himself the reputation of being a man of undisputed courage.



DAVID NAGLE.

While he was serving as chief of police at Tombstone, a drunken Mexican desperado entered the town and began to enliven things by shooting at the people on every side. He defied arrest and vowed that the first man who tried to arrest him would be shot down in his tracks. Joe Poynton, who was serving under Nagle, tried to take him into custody and was shot through the groin. As soon as Nagle heard Poynton had been wounded he armed himself and started in pursuit of the shooter. He soon found him and ordered him to surrender. The only reply he received was a shot from the desperado's revolver. The bullet, luckily, did not take effect, and Nagle returned the fire.

The Mexican, finally realizing that he had a determined man to deal with, took to his horse and tried to escape. As he rode away he fired several shots at Nagle, and with defiant yells dared him to follow. Nagle, revolver in hand, gave chase to the escaping felon, and yelled for some one to get him a rifle. The Mexican headed for the rocky portion of the mountain, and when Nagle was handed a rifle he called on him to halt. The Mexican again opened fire on him and Nagle used the rifle. He fired but one shot, and the Mexican dropped back dead, with a bullet through his brain. Nagle was exonerated by the coroner's jury, and although the friends of the dead man threatened to run him out of town, they thought better of the matter and did not molest him.

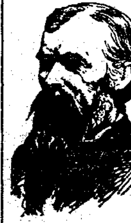
At the following election Nagle ran for sheriff and was defeated by a few votes. He soon after left Tombstone and went to Butte, M. T., but did not remain there long. He returned to San Francisco in 1883, and during the Cleveland campaign the following year he was found as an earnest party worker in the Democratic ranks. When Sheriff Hopkins took office in January, 1885, Nagle was appointed deputy sheriff and served during the administration. He next went into the license collector's office. He was then made a deputy to the United States marshal's office.

Terry had met Nagle before the fatal encounter in the Stockton breakfast room. When the fire eating judge made his assault on Marshal Franks, in September, 1888, he was quickly and skillfully disarmed by a quiet looking bystander. The quiet looking bystander was David Nagle. Nagle was detailed to guard Justice Field by order of Attorney General Miller when it was learned that Terry and his wife made threats against Justice Field's life if he ever ventured to cross the California boundary again.

GEN. WILLIAM MAHONE.

He Has Been Named for Governor by the Republicans of Virginia.

Gen. William Mahone, who was recently nominated for governor of Virginia by the Republican party, was born at Southampton, Va., in 1827. He is an indefatigable worker and one of the greatest poker players in the United States. At the age of 20, he graduated from the Virginia Military institute. Until the outbreak of the war he was employed in engineering and the construction of the Norfolk and Petersburg railroad. In 1861 he took part in the secession movement, soon after joined the Confederate army and had a hand in the capture of the Norfolk navy yard the same year. He raised and became commander of the Sixth Virginia regiment and was with it in most of the battles in the Peninsula campaign, distinguishing himself especially around Petersburg, where he earned the sobriquet of the "Hero of the Crater." He was always conspicuous for his bravery and was known as a fighting commander. He was made both brigadier general and major general in 1864, and afterwards commanded a division in Hill's corps. He was also regarded as one of Lee's best and bravest generals.



WILLIAM MAHONE.

At the close of the war Mahone returned to railroad engineering and became president of the Norfolk and Tennessee road. He took part in politics, and was the leader of the movement that elected Gilbert C. Walker governor of Virginia. Failing to secure the nomination for that office in 1873, he organized and became the leader of the Readjuster party. He made a very strong canvass of the state in 1880, and, although supporting the Democratic candidates on the national tickets, carried the legislature for the Readjuster party. He was elected to the United States senate in place of Robert E. Withers, and took his seat March 4, 1881.

When Mahone took his seat the senate was equally divided, and it was very doubtful for which party he would vote. He had always been a Democrat, and there was great surprise when he voted for the Republican candidate for the secretary of the senate. His senatorial career ended in 1887, having failed to carry the state at the previous legislative election.

Mahone was a delegate to both the national Republican conventions of 1884 and 1888. While in the senate he was a member of the Republican congressional committee, and since his retirement has been a member of the national Republican executive committee.

THE HAY FEVER SEASON

July, August, September.

"At this season, when life offers the greatest attractions and the most delightful resources to persons whose soundness of body permits out-of-door exercises and amusements, multitudes are debarred from the joys of the summer by hay fever, one of the most exasperating, wearisome, and depressing ills to which humanity is subject—obscure, inexplicable, descending on a given date like an invisible blow of fate. The sufferers from hay fever have looked in vain for any trustworthy remedy. Many of them, however, have looked in vain because they have been ignorant of Ely's Cream Balm, an admirable remedy for hay fever in all its forms. Agreeable in the use, entirely devoid of any unpleasant after-effects, this Cream Balm quickly allays inflammation and secures that relief for which the sufferer has longed in vain."—From the Christian Union, New York City, July 18, 1888.

LABOR Day was generally observed in the cities throughout the country on Monday. This new holiday is as its name signifies, for laborers and it is proper that this mass of people should have a day set aside for them once a year. It is not as yet of much account in villages and rural districts. Syracuse and Oswego presented a regular holiday appearance.

THE first Republican caucus held in Oswego county this fall was that at Phœnix, Saturday, for the purpose of electing delegates to the county and district conventions. The chief contest was for delegates to the county convention between the friends of Hon Francis David and L. J. Carrier. The result was a death blow to the aspirations of the latter gentleman as far as this fall's chances are concerned as by a vote of 179 to 34 the caucus adopted a resolution allowing Mr. David to select the delegation.

THIS is the month in which fairs are held in this section of the country and in localities in the same latitude. The advantages of these fairs are many and of great importance. The country fairs bring together for exhibit the best products and are of great value. The progress of the farmer in agriculture, the inventions and improvements in agricultural implements, the skill of the horticulturalists are here displayed and show but a small portion of the many advancements that are being made yearly by the progressive American people and it is at these fairs that they can be best shown. May the country fairs never grow less in their importance.

(Special correspondence to THE TIMES.)

Our usual quiet place was worked to a terrible excitement yesterday over the drowning of Milo Bargy a 16 year old son of Frank Bargy of Volney. Deceased went to Crook's Lake, a small lake situated about one half mile south of this place in company of too small boys, sons of John Voglesang to bathe. Milo went in to the water first and when about a rod from shore went down and was drowned in sight of the small boys who stood on the shore. The boys were to small to render any assistance and the nearest house was a half a mile away. Before any assistance arrived he must have been in the water fully an hour. The coroner was summoned and arrived about 8 o'clock p. m. The inquest was adjourned till Wednesday at 3 p. m.

Deceased was a very quiet inoffensive young man and was respected by all who knew him. The heart broken family have the sincere sympathy of the whole community in their bereavement.

Our school began Tuesday with Miss Adelia McDonald of Volney Center as teacher.

The following are [illegible] gleaned from the [illegible] statistical report just forwarded to Albany from the first commissioner's district.

We now have 127 teachers, 5,[illegible] children between 5 and 21 years of age of which 4,685 have attended school some part of the year the average attendance dropping down to 3,806. For the accommodation of these children there are 96 school houses the estimated valuation of school houses and grounds being $105,058.

For the support of these schools we have received from the state about $28,000 and raised by tax about $20,000. We have paid for teacher's wages about $29,000 for rebuilding, repairing and furnishing school houses about $11,000, for incidentals about $4,000 and for school apparatus about $700.

The amount on hand Aug. 21, 1888, was about $3,000 and July 25, 1889, about $6,000.

Teacher's wages in the rural districts have ranged from $4 to $10.50. the average for the year being about $5.75 in Granby, $6.25 in Hannibal, $5.50 in New Haven, $6.00 in Oswego Town, $5.75 in Scriba and $5.50 in Volney.

The law regarding health and decency have been very generally complied with and 71 of the 95 districts have delivered written memoranda of hiring to the teachers.

Only four rural districts now have more than one trustee.

The town of Granby reports the largest number of children but Volney is far ahead in attendance.

Commissioner.

There is a great [illegible] the various [illegible] associations of Washington for "[illegible]." During this week meetings have been held by the associations and plans considered for ousting the enemy. The members in no measured terms denounce the retention of turn-coat republicans, who either went over to the enemy during the Cleveland administration or else maintained a masterly inactivity. These State associations are of necessity constructed of government clerks and inasmuch as most of these organizations died during the Cleveland administration and were only reorganized after the last election, it appears amusing to see the members pose as martyrs and lick imaginary wounds. In the terse slang of the street, the heads of departments are "on to" these associations. They are generally conducted by a clique of four or five and are rarely representatives of the employes from the State they claim to represent. This was true of even the boasted New York Democratic Association of Mr. Cleveland's administration, which had but a short popularity and was speedily known as the "Albany Association," a name given it by "Sunset" Cox, who may be said to have had his own personal and private convictions concerning the friends of Mr. Cleveland who had known him in Albany and who cut such a wide swath here for a year or so.

All this rage of the associations is due to personal disappointments. After the last election, two thirds of the republican holdovers, hundreds of whom were from doubtful states like New York and who failed to go home to vote, expected nothing less then to be chiefs or assistant chiefs of divisions. Hundreds talked vaguely of getting paid for sufferings and services by appointment to places in some other department. That these things have not been done is a great and sore disappointment. Men who have not been home to vote in ten years and who never have paid one dollar of political assessments since Mr. Cleveland's inauguration, expect promotion purely on political grounds. Sympathy for for them is wasted. Even if to the victor belong the spoils it goes without saying that the people who had nothing to do with the victor except wait for it, are not entited to the spoils.

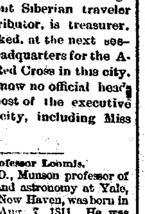
The movement suggesting the removal of General Grant's remains from New York to Arlington or the soldier's home meets with appropriation generally outside of New York city. The failure of New York to provide a suitable monumen thas disgusted General Grant's old friends and associates everywhere. there is very little doubt that Mrs. Grant will consent to the removal and Congress would make ample provision for the tomb. The statement of the New York papers that General Grant frequently expressed a desire to be buried in that city appears without foundation. General Grant seldom alluded to such matters and even in his last illness did not mention any preference. He did, however, in war times often express a desire to eventually rest at West Point. What he felt in after life, it is hard to tell. He was cosmopolitan. He belonged to no city but to the Nation. Born in Ohio, reared in Illinois, educated at West Point, in a long war, afterward a resident of Washington and finally of New York, only the wish of his family and of the American people as a body, should be consulted as to his final resting place.

The President has been invited by Miss Clare Barton to visit the Red Cross headquarters at Johnstown, Pennsylvania and will probably comply before his return from Deer Park. Later in the season probably during the extra session of Congress an effort will be made made to secure a visit of representative legislators to the scene of the Johnstown disaster. President Harrison is one of the members of the Red Cross Association, being president of the board of Consultation, while the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Treasury were the trustees of the association. This arrangement has existed since 1882.

Miss Clara Barton president of the association, is a familiar figure in Washington, where her enthusiasm, courage and organizing ability have long been recognized. She is a woman whose whole life is sacredly devoted to succoring the victims of war and disaster. Walter P. Phillips, general manager of the United Press, is secretary and George Kennan, the eminent Siberian traveler and magazine contributor, is treasurer. Congress will be asked, at the next session, to establish headquarters for the American National Red Cross in this city. The Red Cross has now no official headquarters, though most of the executive officers live in this city, including Miss Barton.

The Late Professor Loomis.

Elias Loomis, LL. D., Munson professor of natural philosophy and astronomy at Yale, who died recently at New Haven, was born in Willington, Conn., Aug. 7, 1811. He was fitted for college under the direct supervision of his father, and was graduated from Yale in 1830. For three years, beginning in 1833, he was a tutor at Yale. Together with Professor Alexander C. Twining, of West Point, he spent a good deal of time during this period in making observations to determine the altitude of shooting stars. In 1835 he made his first distinct mark in the field of science, when, computing the elements of its orbit from his own observations, he discovered Halley's comet on its return to perihelion. In 1836 he went to Paris, where he remained a year studying under Arago and others.



PROFESSOR LOOMIS.

On his return he became professor of mathematics and natural philosophy in the Ohio Western Reserve college. This position he left in 1844 to become professor of natural philosophy in the University of the City of New York, where he remained for sixteen years, during which time he prepared a series of mathematical and astronomical text books, of which more than half a million copies have been sold. In 1849 he assisted in observations to determine the velocity of the electric fluid on telegraph wires. He accepted the chair held at his death at Yale in 1860. He was made LL. D. by the University of the City of New York in 1854.

A [illegible] DAY [illegible] OF BUFFALO.

Our Correspondent "Vindex" Pictures the Condition of the Queen City on the Opening Day of the Great Exposition and Gives a Forecast of Pleasures to Come.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

BUFFALO, Sept. 3.—Children! Goodness me, I had no idea there were so many "future voters" and "future mothers" in the whole state of New York, as I have seen on the streets this morning. I feel ashamed of my age. I am at least twenty years out of date. The inhabitants of Buffalo under twelve years old, own the town. For the last hour I have been watching a juvenile army storm the street cars, and the fun has only just begun.

As was mentioned in one of my previous letters, the managers of the Buffalo International Fair voted early in the summer to distribute tickets for the opening day among the children of the public schools. Upwards of twelve thousand tickets were thus bestowed. Last week the Fair people said to themselves, "Why not take in all the kids, and make the inaugural of the Exposition a 'Children's Day' in every respect?" The suggestion was considered a good one, and the press of Buffalo was instructed to proclaim the glad news that on the first day of the Fair, no child under twelve years of age would be barred from free admission.

This is the first day of the Fair, and the children are seizing their opportunity. I hope to be a personal witness of their enjoyment before the day is over, but if I delay this letter until after a visit to the Fair grounds, I fear it will not be written to-night. To me there is much that is interesting in the arrival of the multitudes from abroad. There is no doubt that Buffalo has accomplished its desire to be over-ridden by strangers and from present indications we shall have nothing which we can call our own for the next ten days.

The Bureau of Information which the Fair people have established at the corner of Main and Exchange streets, has been crowded ever since sunrise. Fortunately, however, a perfect system of furnishing strangers with information as to where they can secure accommodations, prevails, and there is no danger of anyone's being compelled to walk the streets.

It is rather more than three miles from Exchange street to the Fair grounds, but there is one continuous line of street cars and the journey is made in remarkably quick time.

I had the privilege of seeing the finishing touches of preparation given to the Exposition yesterday, and I have no hesitation in saying that the show is ten times as vast as it was last year. Visitors of 1888 would hardly recognize the grounds. New buildings have gone up everywhere and that enormous meadow which is enclosed by the mile race course, and which last year was a barren waste, presents today the appearance of a minature city. It is laid out in streets and avenues and is the home of the agriculturalists. People thought the art gallery was pretty fine last season, but the splendid structure (splendid from an architectural point of view) which has taken its place this year, makes the memory of the other ridiculous. Everything has been doubled in capacity, and none of the signs of hasty preparation which abounded on all sides in 1888, are to-day visible. The "Horse Show" a year ago occupied a building 400 feet square. To-day it fills two such structures, the broad aisle of which are decorated with sheafs of oats tied with red ribbons, making a beautiful effect as you look down the long vistas.

There are not only double the number of attractions to be seen, but there is more system, exhibited on all sides. A highly ornamental programme, which is worth preserving as a souvenir of the Exposition, has been issued for the first day, and is, I am told, to be a thing of daily publication. This is something new at Fairs, and strikes me as an excellent departure. It contains for example a list of all the animals which are to be judged and the hours of the judging, and gives the numbers which the grooms will wear on their arms so that nobody who sees a supurb animal led out in front of the grand stand for critical inspection, need be in doubt as to what he is looking at. Nearly all the judging is to be done in front of the stands, and as the horses and cattle are of world-wide reputation the spectacle, by the aid of this daily programme, will be a more than commonly interesting one.

Cappa's Seventh regiment band is to give three concerts daily and the list of selections is to be found in the programme. I notice in looking at to-day's programme that a parade of ponies and calves is to occur this afternoon. This will charm the children, and on each day of the Fair there is to be a procession of magnificent live stock. What with races, daily exhibitions of the Buffalo Fire department, jumping of hunters, judging of blooded beasts, balloon ascensions and open air concerts it would seem that visitors will find plenty to amuse them without going in doors, but on the other hand there is so much to see in the Main building, Art Gallery, the Palace of Illusions, the Public Museum, the Poultry and Pigeon Show, and the vast Live Stock structures that nobody can well afford to stay out of doors. The truth of the matter is it will take at least two days of very active sight seeing to exhaust the attractions of the Fair.

Next Saturday is going to be "Citizens' Day" and nearly all the business houses of Buffalo will close. A doubly fine programme is arranged for that occasion.

Buffalo has gone wild over the Fair and Main street to-night will be a blaze of color through a splendid and systematic illumination of that thoroughfare.

To-morrow and next day (Sept. 4 and 5) will see the much talked of contest for supremacy in drill between firemen's companies from Canandaigua, Lockport, Albion and Olean. This afternoon Prof. Hogan (a brother of the aeronaut who lost is life in the Campbell air ship) will make the first of six ascensions and parachute flights through the air. Next Saturday Hogan and a daring female named Louisa Bates will ascend in rival balloons and race back to terra firma by the parachute route. I wish them good luck.

Cheese Market Report.

(From the Utica Herald.)

AT UTICA.

UTICA, Sept. 2.

The market to-day has been weak and slightly lower. The starting price was only 7½c, but many salesmen declared they would not sell unless they cound get somewhere near what they got last week. In fact there was quite a general holding back of part of the offering, both for its influence on the market and because it is believed that the stock will be worth more money.

Factorymen begin to say if the dry spell now upon us continues there will be a rapid shrinkage of milk very soon. Feed is good as yet, but we have had no rain in about two weeks, and at this time of year a dry time tells upon the production. The make of July and August exceed that of last year's without doubt, but the earlier make was short and it is possible the last make may be also.

Sales of the day were as follows:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
2	114	7¼
74	6,711	7½
3	245	7⅝
23	1,758	7¾
8	748	7⅞
29	2,542	8c
5	900	8⅛
1	100	8¼
145	13,018
	1,710	Com.
Total.	14,728

Ruling price 7¾c. Transactions one year ago 15,965 boxes, ruling price 8¼c. Two years ago 14,829 boxes; ruling price 9¼c.

There were sales of 57 packages creamery butter at 17¼ @ 20c. Bulk went at 18½c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Sept. 2.

Cheese.—To-day we have the lightest shipment of cheese and the lowest prices seen on this market, the first week in September, during several years past. There has been very little life to the business, and none of the buyers have been at all anxious to purchase cheese for shipment abroad. The ruling price falls ¼c. below that of last week. There are no local causes for this state of affairs.

Farm Dairies—The sales of farm dairy cheese are at 7¾ to 8½c., with the bulk at 8c, and 1,109 boxes sold.

Following is our usual table:

Lots	Boxes	Price.
20	[illegible]	7¾
26	1,764	7⅞
16	[illegible]	8c.
12	[illegible]	p. t.
17	499	Com.
101	7,007
Farm dairy	1,109
Total	8,116

Butter—There are not over a dozen packages of butter sold. A very few packages of dairy and creamery went at 17 to 19c.

The handiwork of man, expressed in "breathing marble," is too costly to be within the reach of those with ordinary means, and yet a man with very slender means can get a splendid piano or organ if he only have sense enough to go to Bristol's.

We have received from Alonzo Chamberlain, Corona, N. J., a copy of the "Teacher's and Pupil's guide to Music." 8 pages. Price, 30 cent. It is a curiosity of typography, besides being eminently practical and useful to teachers and students of music.

Probably no drama of modern times has been so successful as "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and when played by a competent company the beautiful story is brought out with telling effect. No better descriptive matter has ever been written in the opinion of the best critics, and though old, the play is interesting to those who have seen it many times. Peck & Fursman's Company give an excellent representation of it. They will be at the opera house next Friday evening.

Entries for the Big Fair at Oswego are coming in from all directions, and the activity displayed by exhibitors at this early date proves beyond doubt that every class will be filled with fine exhibits. And although the Sutton Wild West Show has cancelled its engagement at this late date, the management have secured several other first class attractions, which will more than compensate for it. We wish to assure the public that we have done everything in our power to force this Sutton to fill his contract, but were unable to do so on account of the unreliableness and financial standing of the unprincipled manager of the show. The society feel keenly the embarrassing position in which it is placed and is going to far greater expense to furnish a more varied and attractive program to repay the disappointment to its patrons.

Waite's Comedy Company.

This excellent organization, which created so favorable an impression last season, is now rehearsing at the opera house and will open the present season here next Saturday night; presenting the new Irish Comedy "The Shamrock," with the brillant young comedian, Edwin Hanford in the star role. The play is pure and mirth prevailing, sparkling with sweet Irish melodies written expressly for Mr. Hanford; who, though not an imitation of either Scanlan or Emmet, has been pronounced by competent critics to be their equal in his own particular style. It is scarcely necessary to speak in laudatory terms of that versatile and accomplished actress Miss Cora Neilson or of Mr. Waite himself, as the high character of their work is familiar to our people. Suffice is it to say that Miss Neilson is as bewitching as ever and Mr. Waite as powerful and impressive as of yore. The support we are assured has been selected with great care and is composed strictly of ladies and gentlemen well known in the dramatic world. The band and orchestra will be up to the usual high standard of this company—in fact, Mr. Waite will have nothing but the best, and his experience of over 12 years is a sufficient guarantee of his judgement. His route this season embraces many return engagements and the time for the full season is already filled. The company will play in Oswego next week and then go east, and south. Reserved seats are now on sale at Watson's Drug Store. Secure them early and avoid the discomfort which attends late comers.

However satisfactory our examination of the planets has been with regard to their revolution around the sun, we are compelled to state that when we wish to inquire into their rotation on their axes and physical constitutions, the knowledge as yet acquired by means of the telescope is far from complete. G. J. Emeny was at the Farmers' National Picnic at Williams Grove, Pa. last week and thousands of enthusiastic people witnessed the fine workings of his Ensilage and Fodder Cutter. This is not all, wealthy parties of Jackson, Mich. seeing the large field that the machine was destined to fill, endeavored and are still using their influence to have Mr. Emeny manufacture it in their city. They have made him a bona fide offer of land and buildings worth $10,000 free if he will make the cutters there. If he desires to form a stock company they announce their willingness to take any amount of stock that he is willing to sell them.

Mr. Emeny's interests are all in Fulton and he would dislike to leave The above enticing offer makes him waver however.

The people of Fulton should endeavor to retain this industry which has every appearance of being the nucleus of a large and profitable business to the community where it is permantly located.

Is the Matter Settled?

It is rumored on the streets that the long litigation relating to the pole at the corner of First and Oneida streets has come to an end. Mr. Belknap represting the Thomson-Houston Electric Co. against whom the suit was brought was in town a few days since. He and Mr. Johnson were seen in conversation and it is said that it was agreed between them that the law suit should be stopped, that the telephone and electric light wires should be put on the large pole and the two other poles removed. The Thomson-Houston company to pay all the costs of the suit.

Since so many of the small poles have been taken out the appearance of the streets are vastly improved. If there is any truth in the rumor, Mr. Johnson doubtless has decided to further the good work and the concession on his part will be pleasing to citizens in general as nearly everyone is disgusted with the suit.

On general principles people here did not rend their hair and tear their clothes to celebrate the new holiday.

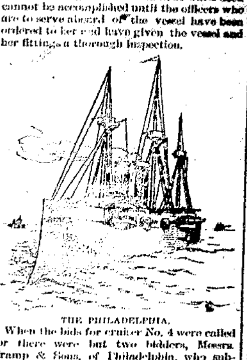
[illegible] PHILADELPHIA.

SHE IS SHORTLY TO TAKE HER PLACE IN THE UNITED STATES NAVY.

Careful Description of One of the Modern War Ships Uncle Sam Is Now Getting Ready to Place Upon the Seas of the World.

The Philadelphia will take her place as a vessel in the United States navy as soon as her steaming trials have demonstrated her ability to comply with the specifications of the contract under which she was built. The launching of the vessels by no means is to be taken as an indication of their being finished and ready to turn over to the navy. In fact, the many things to be attended to in the way of securing handiness and a ship shape arrangement of things about a man-of-war's deck cannot be accomplished until the officers who are to serve aboard of the vessel have been ordered to her and have given the vessel and her fittings a thorough inspection.



THE PHILADELPHIA.

When the bids for cruiser No. 4 were called for there were but two bidders, Messrs. Cramp & Sons, of Philadelphia, who submitted four propositions, embracing the idea of constructing her on their own plan for engine and hull; on the navy department's hull and their engine; on their hull and the navy department's engine, or on the department's plans for both hull and engine, the price varying from $1,410,000 to $1,325,000.

The Union iron works were the other bidder, and their price for building under the department's plans for hull and machinery was $1,428,000. The contract was awarded Messrs. Cramp & Sons, the hull and machinery to be constructed according to bidder's plans and specifications for $1,350,000. The contract for her construction was executed in October, 1887, and she is, according to its terms, to be completed in October of this year.

The Philadelphia and Baltimore have very much the same dimensions, the former being about 100 tons the smaller. Her length is 315 feet, beam 48½ feet, draught 19½ feet and displacement 4,321 tons.

In the battery arrangements a radical departure has been made from the installation of the armament aboard the Baltimore, twelve 6 inch rifles taking the place of the four 8 inch and 6 inch guns aboard the latter vessel. It has been quite satisfactorily demonstrated that the battery of all 6 inch guns is sufficiently heavy for vessels of this class, and that their range, penetration and weight of metal thrown from her broadside is as powerful as vessels of her class carry in other navies. In fact, the tendency of the present day is to have guns of still smaller caliber, and also to introduce loading and firing mechanism that admits of a much greater rapidity of fire than has heretofore been considered possible. The secondary battery, as the aggregation of smaller caliber machine guns is called, is composed of two Gatlings, four 6 pounder Hotchkiss, two 3 pounder Hotchkiss, one 1 pounder Hotchkiss, four 37 mm. rapid fire revolving cannon.

On her mean draught of 19 feet 2½ inches the speed of the vessel is guaranteed at nineteen knots for four consecutive hours' trial. This, when the contract was drawn, was considered such a high rate of speed and so greatly in excess of anything that had formerly been attempted in our naval vessels, that it was looked upon as extremely doubtful if its provisions could be carried out. Since that contract, however, others calling for a twenty knot speed have been drawn, and the builders of the Philadelphia, having had their own way as far as the designs of the machinery are concerned, are quite confident of attaining the nineteen knots speed together with a little margin in their interest. The engines are of the twin screw, horizontal, triple expansion type, and are to weigh 900 tons. Should they succeed in making a speed of over nineteen knots, a bonus of $50,000 will be paid for every quarter of a knot in excess of that speed. A similar forfeit is to be exacted for each quarter of a knot below the standard.

The Philadelphia is a protected cruiser, having a long forecastle and poop deck, a strong ram bow and rounded stern covering and protecting the rudder, which is placed well below the water line. She has what is called a high freeboard—that is, her rail is high up above the water line. There are two smoke stacks and three masts to carry fore and aft sail only.

These masts have military tops or platforms made of steel and carrying protective shields for covering the men stationed to work the machine cannon, which in action are sent up in the tops in order to pour a stream of projectiles on an enemy's decks and pick off the exposed men.

Vessels of this type have a steel protective deck, four inches in thickness, running fore and aft the vessel and protecting her below water portion from shot and shell. In addition to this the coal is so distributed around engines and boilers as to afford a very efficient protection and make an excellent supplementary protection to that offered by the steel deck. The coal supply under ordinary circumstances is 400 tons, but the bunker capacity is sufficient to hold 900 tons, with which supply at a ten knot speed per hour she can cover 12,000 miles.

All the conveniences of steam steerers, windlasses, side coaling chutes, etc., will be fitted, and in addition there will be a complete duplicate electric plant, lighting the holds, store rooms, magazines and quarters, besides which there will be search lights of about 25,000 candle power. This vessel is intended for a flag ship, and the arrangements and conveniences of quarters are thought to be very much in excess of anything that has before flown the broad blue flag of an American rear admiral. The minute division into watertight compartments, each of which is provided with independent pumping and drainage systems, insures the vessel remaining afloat should she come in collision or be pierced by projectiles. The ventilation of the quarters embraces the latest improvements and is such as to secure the health and comfort of both officers and crew. The fleet of the four Roach cruisers and the Yorktown, already in commission; the Petrel, Charleston, Baltimore and Vesuvius, in different stages of completion, added to the Philadelphia, Newark, Concord and Bennington, will upon another year give a fleet of speedy and powerful vessels that will more than replace the larger number of wooden ships, now fast disappearing.

Bright's Disease.
A Ten-Year-Old Child Saved After the Failure of Four Physicians.
My little girl, ten years of age, was taken sick in March, 1888, with scarlet fever. When recovering she took a severe cold, which developed Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. Her ankles, feet and eyes were terribly swollen; she had a burning fever, and all the symptoms of an aggravated case of Bright's Disease. Four of our best physicians attended her, but without success, and
Her Life was Despaired of.
But a mother's love and prayers surmount all difficulties, and I determined to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y. This was a last resort, and I hoped, although my little daughter's case was a very severe one, that the Favorite Remedy would do for her what it had done for others whose condition had not been, seemingly, so hopeless. How happy I am that I determined upon this course—for an improvement was at once perceptible. The fever left her—her appetite improved—she gained six pounds in a short time, and one by one the well known and dreaded symptoms of the disease left her. Words fail to express my gratitude, and I cannot too earnestly recommend the Favorite Remedy. It was

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.
The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. Read proof below.
KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.
SPRINGFIELD, MASS., Feb. 18, 1889.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.
Gentlemen:—I have used your Kendall's Spavin Cure for Corns and Scratches and I can say I never saw its equal. I have cured some of the worst cases of Corns that a horse could be subject to. I have been having such good success with your liniment that I would almost as soon a horse would have Corns as not. I have recommended it to several with like success. I had a large Pacer with a white hoof forward and had Corns in both quarters as large as fifty-cent pieces. I cured him in three weeks, so when I sold him to an expert horseman he never knew the horse ever had a Corn. I will give $1000 for the worst case of Corns that I can't cure with your Kendall's Spavin Cure.
Respectfully yours, PETER MALONEY.

The Wonderous Elixir.

The years of her life numbered four-score and ten.
Her memory long ago failed her.
Her health was so feeble that medical men
Could not guess what the thing was that ailed her.
She was blind as a bat, as deaf as a post,
And everything seemed to confuse her;
We daily expected she'd give up the ghost,
And yet we all dreaded to lose her.

A short time ago, as a dernier ressort
In hopes that it somehow might fix her,
We gave in moderate doses a quart,
Of Dr. Brown-Sequard's elixir.
It acted like magic, much younger she grew,
Her hair showed no silvery shade in,
And then in the course of a fortnight or two
She changed to a charming young maiden.

Yet still the elixir continued to act,
To childhood we saw her returning,
And fiction was not half so wonderous as fact,
For dolls she was found to be yearning!
She shortly became her great-grandchildren's pride,
With playthings and innocent prattle,
Until as a baby of ninety she died,
Choked to death, having swallowed her rattle.

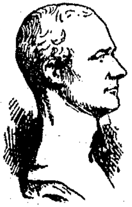
THE HAMILTON FAMILY.

IT HAS BEEN A FAMOUS ONE IN AMERICAN ANNALS.

Sketch of Its Leading Members, from Alexander Hamilton Down to Robert Ray Hamilton, Whose Wife Lately Knifed Mary Donnelly at Atlantic City.

Another of those livid flashes which have lighted the way of the Hamiltons for more than a century has come in the tragedy so closely connected with Robert Ray Hamilton, whose wife stabbed a nurse, Mary Donnelly, at Atlantic City the other day, inflicting a wound at first thought to be mortal. There are those who hold that a man is only a bundle of inheritances whose career is determined by circumstances. Here philosophers could scarcely find a better example in support of their peculiar faith than in the Hamilton family. Alexander Hamilton, the great grandfather of Robert Ray, could never, or did never, explain satisfactorily a mystery that overhung his birth.

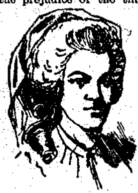


ALEXANDER HAMILTON.

One account makes him the son of John Hamilton, a Scottish merchant, and his wife a French lady who had been divorced. Another says that his mother was a Miss Lytton, who came to America, where she was supported by Hamilton and his wife. He was thrown on the world by the bankruptcy of his father when he was a mere lad, and entered a counting house in the West Indies, which was his birthplace. He was so bright that distant relatives and friends sent him to New York to be educated. He entered King's college (now Columbia) and while he was there the colonies were wrangling with the mother country preparatory to the revolution.

One day—it was the 6th of July, 1774—a mass meeting was held in the fields, not far from the college, to discuss the questions at issue and bring in the lagging forces of New York. While the meeting was in progress a stripling of 17 was seen elbowing his way to the platform. Mounting the steps, the crowd cried out, "A collegian! A collegian!" Whereupon the youth began to harangue them in eloquent and burning words in behalf of American rights. This was the beginning of the political career of one who has been called the greatest of American statesmen—Alexander Hamilton.

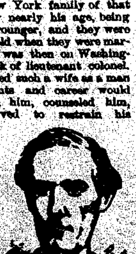
Then follows a series of historical pictures in this eventful life. They are all brilliant, but they are all to be seen through one lurid flash—that which lighted the great statesman to his grave when he fell at Weehawken pierced by Aaron Burr's bullet. Strange to say, it had been repeated less than three years before in the case of his son Philip—the great uncle of Robert Ray—who fell on the same spot killed in a duel which came out of a political quarrel. After his son's death Alexander Hamilton conceived a horror of dueling, and before going out with Burr wrote a paper against it. But so great was the prejudice of the times among certain people against a man who would not accept a challenge, that Hamilton, who aspired even to the head of the government, feared that if he refused to fight it would injure his chances. The spot at the foot of the hill at Weehawken, by the margin of the Hudson river, has been the scene of two of those tragedies so common in the family. There father and son met death in accordance with a code which their countrymen were already beginning to denounce, and which today they hold in horror as well as contempt.



ELIZABETH HAMILTON.

At 19 Alexander Hamilton was fighting with the revolutionists as captain of an artillery company; at 20 he was aid-de-camp on Washington's staff; at 32 he was secretary of the treasury. "He touched the corpse of the public credit and it stood upon its feet." He was a brilliant writer, a brilliant speaker, a wonderful political manager, an extraordinary financier. Indeed, there was nothing that he touched that he did not handle as if he had been born to that especial purpose. No American has been so versatile, so great in his various fields, as America's first secretary of the treasury, appointed in this very month just one hundred years ago.

While in the revolutionary army Alexander Hamilton was sent to Albany on a mission to Gen. Gates. In that old Dutch town he met, wooed and won Elizabeth Schuyler, of the powerful New York family of that name. She was very nearly his age, being about six months younger, and they were both about 23 years old when they were married. Her husband was then on Washington's staff, with rank of lieutenant colonel. Mrs. Hamilton proved such a wife as a man of Hamilton's talents and career would need. She assisted him, counseled him, and doubtless served to restrain his impetuous nature, and prevent many of those mistakes which brilliant and impulsive men are apt to make. She kept his papers in order—an excellent assistance to such men, for they are seldom methodical. [illegible]

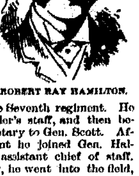


SCHUYLER HAMILTON.

[illegible]

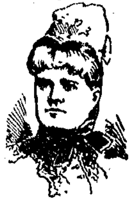
Church, after being graduated at Columbia, studied law. Away back in 1814 he was commissioned a lieutenant in the army, and served for awhile as an aid-de-camp to "Old Tippecanoe," the progenitor of President Harrison. John Church spent a great many years in preparing a memoir of his father. He lived to be 90 years old, dying only seven years ago.

On perusing the history of this family, the head of which in Revolutionary times was a soldier, one would naturally look for some representative in the civil war. Such a one is to be found in the person of Gen. Schuyler Hamilton, the grandson of Alexander, who still lives.



ROBERT RAY HAMILTON.

Gen. Hamilton was educated at West Point. He was graduated in 1841, having been there two years with U. S. Grant, who was in the class of 1843. Hamilton served in the Mexican war, and true to the tradition of his ancestors, became an aide-de-camp, serving on the staff of Gen. Scott. When the civil war came on Schuyler Hamilton was living in New York. He went to the front as a private in the Seventh regiment. He first served on Butler's staff, and then became military secretary to Gen. Scott. After Scott's retirement he joined Gen. Halleck at St. Louis as assistant chief of staff. Soon after, however, he went into the field, and after serving a year on the Mississippi had reached the rank of major general of volunteers. But his health gave out, and he was obliged to resign in the midst of the struggle, in 1863. Gen. Hamilton is now 67 years old.



MRS. ROBERT R. HAMILTON.

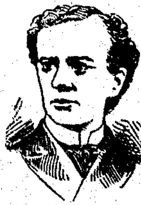
Such is the lineage for three generations of Robert Ray Hamilton, whose connection with the recent onslaught upon a nurse has produced such a sensation. He is in middle life, being about 37 years old. He has served eight years as a member of the New York legislature, but has rather been given to clubs and a rambling life than to work. It is said that he has aged greatly since the very uncomfortable affair in which he is so deeply interested. And well may he suffer. There is, perhaps, nothing so calculated to fill one with shame at unworthy deeds or connections as to become notoriously involved, having an honorable and distinguished ancestry at which every one points to bring contempt by contrast on the transgressor.

This takes one back to the parentage of Alexander Hamilton—that unrecorded event wherein a child was brought into the world, if not out of wedlock at least with a shadow resting upon its birth. There is a connection for the student of heredity as well as for one who remembers the text: "The sins of the father shall be visited on the children," between the first Hamilton and the innocent babe whose nurse was stabbed. The first of the name begets a child and passes away. That child is a wonder, but of a tempestuous nature. After a brilliant career he falls in a duel. His son, too, falls by the same means and exactly on the same spot. In the next generation there is a lull in that violence which has preceded. Still another generation lives, and the specter which haunts the family seems to have forgotten it. The next is the fifth from the first—the generation of Robert Ray. A Hamilton is now married to a woman who, first an adventuress, becomes almost a murderess.

CANADA'S LIBERAL LEADER.

Facts of Interest Regarding Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, M. P.

Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, M. P., the Canadian Liberal leader, is a resident of Arthabaskaville, the chief town of the county of Arthabaska and Drummond, near Arthabaska station, which lies 100 miles to the east of Montreal on the Grand Trunk railway. Here he lives in a two-story red brick house, boasting little external ornamentation—not at all the apparent home of wealth, but rather of substantial, home like comfort. The house stands in the midst of well kept grounds, eight acres in extent, and is filled with books and flowers. Flowers are plentiful at this season, too, outside, and though Mr. and Mrs. Laurier are childless, everywhere are heard the happy voices of children. For at most times the home of the Liberal leader is filled with visiting little ones, to whom the host and hostess devote themselves assiduously.



WILFRID LAURIER.

The library is naturally the favorite room with Mr. Laurier, and he has gathered a choice collection of English and French books. He is familiar with the literature of both languages, and is a student of philosophical works. Burns he places first in the ranks of English poets, and Shakespeare, Macaulay and the speeches of John Bright and the few remaining speeches and writings of Abraham Lincoln are held in high esteem. Twenty years ago Mr. Laurier came to Athabaskaville a poor barrister, broken in health, without powerful friends and seemingly little to encourage him. But step by step he rose by dint of perseverance, and after a time he came to be recognized as a power in the courts.

In 1871 he entered politics, becoming a candidate for the legislature from Drummond and Arthabaska, and winning after an exciting contest. Three years later he stood for the commons, and was again successful. Since then he has suffered but one defeat. He now sits in the commons for Quebec East, while Mr. Lavergne, one of his law partners, sits for Drummond and Arthabaska.

Mr. Laurier is of French extraction, as his name indicates. His party expects much from him in the future.

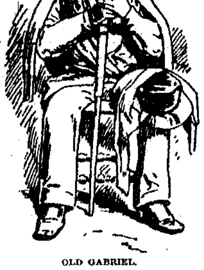
The Permeability of Cements and Mortars.

The question of permeability of cements and mortars has been treated of by the board of experts appointed to report on the Washington aqueduct tunnel. From their report it appears that even if the brick lining of the tunnel were carefully made and bedded, still leakage could not be prevented, as bricks are themselves pervious under somewhat moderate heads. In some experiments made by Mr. Francis last year about 12.2 gallons of water per square foot of surface passed through a thickness of nearly 16 inches cement in twenty-four hours, under a pressure of 77 pounds per square inch. Mr. [illegible], another engineer, constructed a bulkhead of brick work in cement in the Dorchester Bay tunnel, which measures 10 feet by 12 feet. Under a pressure of 32 pounds per square inch water percolated through at the rate of 30,000 gallons per day. [illegible]

HAS HE LIVED 150 YEARS?

"Old Gabriel," It Is Claimed, Has Seen a Century and a Half Roll On.

In the Monterey county (Cal.) hospital is an Indian known to the inhabitants for miles around as "Old Gabriel." He may well be called "old," for it is claimed there is abundant proof that he was born at least one hundred and fifty years ago. What the day, month or year when he was born was no one knows, but the place was somewhere in what is now Tulare county of the state where he still lives. He removed when he was still a child to Monterey. In 1770 Father Junipero Serra went there, and it is well authenticated that at the time of his arrival Gabriel was a grandfather. Indians never marry before they are 15 years old. If Gabriel married at that age, he could not have been less than 82 or 88 years old in order to have grandchildren at the time of Father Junipero Serra's arrival.



OLD GABRIEL.

Father Junipero taught Gabriel with other Indians the art of cutting and laying stone in the years of 1771 and 1772, and Gabriel took part in the construction of the chapel on the site of the present Carmelite mission, below Monterey. In 1781 he helped lay the walls of the San Antonio mission, which still stands. He was then living with his second wife. He still speaks with pride of his skill as a stone mason.

Another proof brought forward of "Old Gabriel's" age is the testimony of Father Sorrentini and Bishop Amat, who reached Monterey in 1845. He was then married to his sixth wife, and was by many years the senior of all the old inhabitants. He was then spoken of as being 110 years old.

A widely known old lady of the name of Castro, who died five years ago at the age of 95, in testifying to Old Gabriel's age said that when a child she saw Old Gabriel, and that at that time he had children several years older than she then was.

Gabriel remained at Old Capitol until a few years ago, when he removed to Salinas valley, where he has been sojourning ever since. Down to within two or three years he was a familiar figure on the streets of Salinas City, but now he is rarely seen, as his trips from the hospital to the town are becoming less frequent. He has always been fond of striking colors, and for years wore a coat made of cloth representing all the colors of the rainbow.

A JOURNAL WITH A HISTORY.

The Paris Journal Des Debats and Its Hundred Years of Life.

Here is a reduced fac-simile of the first issue of The Journal des Debats, of Paris, a newspaper that, in its hundred years of life, has had as thrilling a history as ever fell to the lot of printed sheet. Its full title is Journal des Debats, Politiques et Litteraires, though it was first called Journal des Debats et Decrets. It began as a news letter, and was first issued Aug. 29, 1789, being founded by one Gaultier de Biauzat, a member of the states general, for the purpose of supplying his constituents of the province of Auvergne with news of the session. In its long career it has numbered among its contributors many if not most of the great writers of France.

FIRST NUMBER OF THE JOURNAL DES DEBATS.

It was not long after the paper was founded that greater facilities for its production and distribution were found indispensable. So Baudoin—who did the printing—got himself made printer to the assembly by agreeing to deliver one copy of the paper free to every town and commune in Auvergne which should ask for it. His profits were to to come from sales elsewhere. The body of the paper was simply a summarized report of the proceedings. Its character did not change till 1800, when the brothers Bertin secured the paper. They gave it the tone it has maintained, with rare lapses, ever since.

It was under them, as it is today, the organ of those well educated Frenchmen who have for their political ideal a government which shall be liberal, parliamentary, capable, stable. They were the true descendants of the politiques, the men who wrote the "Satyre Menippee," who are prepared to support any government which seems likely to give them what they want, who are forever defeated in French politics, and yet are as a party destined not to die.

Napoleon robbed the Bertins of their property, but after Waterloo they regained possession and it resumed its old tone. Of its 700 known contributors, 123, or a little less than one-fifth, have belonged to the institute or scientific bodies. Forty-eight have been members of Academie Francaise. M. Georges Patinot is the present conductor.

THE BIG LONDON STRIKE.

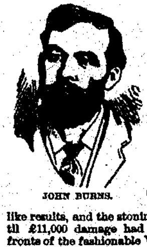
POINTS ABOUT JOHN BURNS, "THE MAN WITH THE RED FLAG."

He Is the Leader of the Present Movement, and He Has a Record as an Agitator That Is Well Worth Thoughtful Consideration.

John Burns, leader of the great London dockmen's strike, is a Scotchman by birth, and is only 33 years of age. He is a machinist engineer by trade, and was employed by one of the dock companies prior to the beginning of the strike. Burns is a large and well proportioned man and has a remarkably strong voice, especially adapted to out door speaking. He has for years been identified with the labor movement in England as an active member of the trade union of his craft, and during the past four years as a leader and orator in the Democratic Federation, the formidable Socialistic organization of Great Britain, of which William Morris, the poet; H. M. Hyndman, writer on economics, and Dr. Edward Aveling are prominent members.

In the elections of November, 1885, Burns stood as parliamentary candidate for the western division of Nottingham, but was defeated. He was not generally known, however, and recognized as a public character by the press of London prior to the Trafalgar square and Hyde park meetings of unemployed workingmen which took place early in 1886. He was chairman of the meeting held in Trafalgar square on Feb. 8 of that year. Over 40,000 persons were present, and addresses were made by H. H. Champion, H. M. Hyndman, John E. Williams, Burns and others, of the Democratic federation. A large force of policemen, under charge of Superintendent Dunlap, were in attendance, but the crowd was orderly and the meeting was not interfered with.

Near the close of the speaking a gang of roughs attempted to create a disturbance, and Burns, after consulting with Superintendent Dunlap, adjourned the meeting to Hyde park, he and Champion marching at the head of the monster procession that headed for that place. Everything went smoothly until the procession was passing the Carlton club in the West End. The windows of the club house were filled with men, who very foolishly laughed and jeered at the throng, which they called "the great unwashed." In answer to these taunts stones were hurled against the club house until every window was completely demolished, as were the windows of many adjacent buildings. As the crowd passed the Thatched House club the same provocation was offered with like results, and the stoning did not cease until £11,000 damage had been done to the fronts of the fashionable West End.



JOHN BURNS.

Burns, Williams, Champion and Hyndman were arrested on the following day, charged with seditious conspiracy. The trial did not take place until in April, 5th-10th, when it was heard at the central criminal sessions in the Old Bailey, before Mr. Justice Cave. Strong speeches were made at the trial by Burns and Hyndman, in which they arraigned the social system of Great Britain, and charged that the then demoralized condition of affairs was due to the indifference and recklessness of the aristocratic government. The defense consisted of testimony, the chief witness being Superintendent Dunlap, showing that the accused had used every effort to check riotous demonstration on Feb. 8, and then had it not been for the influence of the defendants the damage would have been much greater and probably arson and murder have been the result. The accused were all discharged.

It will be remembered that Sir Edmund Henderson was forced to resign from the head of the London police department shortly after the Trafalgar Square meeting of Feb. 8. It was shown in the official inquiry that followed the troubles of that day that the rioting was due to the fact that there were no police to restrain the mob between Trafalgar square and Hyde park. Burns did not seem to be frightened by his arrest, for he continued to agitate in England and Scotland as an apostle of the Democratic Federation, and was not again interfered with by the authorities.

From the tone of the dispatches and the English journals it appears that the people of London look upon him as an agitator along peaceable or legislative lines, as he claimed in his trial in 1886 and still claims he is. [illegible]

John Burns, "the man with the red flag," is certainly a remarkable character.

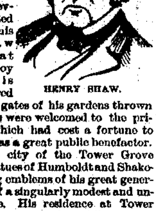
THE LATE HENRY SHAW.

He Was the Founder of the Shaw Botanical Gardens in St. Louis.

St. Louis has lost the best friend she ever had by the recent death of Henry Shaw. Mr. Shaw was born in Manchester, England. At the age of 19 he sailed for America, and finally settled down in St. Louis on May 4, 1819. He started a handsome business on his own account in a small building on the river front, and for a time was proprietor, clerk and porter. Owing to his close attention to business, economy and natural shrewdness the young merchant prospered. After twenty years of active commercial life he had amassed a fortune that enabled him to retire from business when but 40 years of age. Mr. Shaw's record as a business man was of the highest. During the busiest part of his life he had found time for study, and when he retired was well fitted to appreciate and profit by the years of travel in which he next indulged. He was away from the United States about ten years, visiting nearly every quarter of the globe.

On his return he commenced the study of plants and flowers and eventually established the world famous botanical gardens, one of the most complete in existence. For many years Mr. Shaw made a standing offer of $1,000 for any new specimen for the garden. He was several times called upon to pay this sum. Mr. Shaw determined that others should enjoy the pleasures his wealth had secured for him, had the gates of his gardens thrown open and visitors were welcomed to the private grounds which had cost a fortune to beautify. He was a great public benefactor. His gift to the city of the Tower Grove park, and the statues of Humboldt and Shakespeare are fitting emblems of his great generosity. He was of a singularly modest and unassuming nature. His residence at Tower Grove was always open to the public.



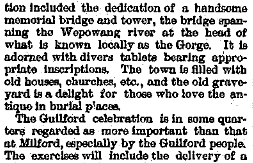
HENRY SHAW.

On the 4th of May, 1869, the fiftieth anniversary of his arrival in St. Louis, a brilliant company of St. Louisians gathered at his residence to do honor to the city's benefactor. Mr. Shaw delivered an address relating the incidents of his first arrival in the city and other reminiscences, and was answered by an address from Governor B. Gratz Brown. Mr. Shaw lived at Tower Grove for years. He was very hospitable, was always glad to welcome visitors, and nearly every afternoon a number of callers were to be seen at his beautiful homestead. He was a member of the Episcopalian church, the charitable institutions of which will be particularly favored in his will. Mr. Shaw never new what sickness was until 1873, when he suffered from a severe attack of double pneumonia, from the effects of which he never entirely recovered. His estate is estimated to be worth $2,500,000, and the greater part of his fortune will be left to the city of St. Louis in various bequests.

MILFORD AND GUILFORD.

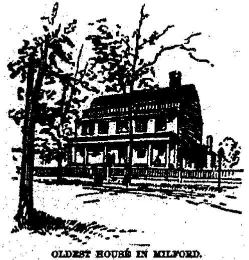
One Has Celebrated and the Other Is About to Celebrate a 250th Birthday.

Milford, Conn., has just celebrated the 250th anniversary of its founding, and Guilford, of the same state, is about to follow suit, her quarter millennial date falling Sept. 8 and continuing three days. The Milford celebration included the dedication of a handsome memorial bridge and tower, the bridge spanning the Wepowang river at the head of what is known locally as the Gorge. It is adorned with divers tablets bearing appropriate inscriptions. The town is filled with old houses, churches, etc., and the old graveyard is a delight for those who love the antique in burial places.



OLDEST HOUSE IN GUILFORD.

The Guilford celebration is in some quarters regarded as more important than that at Milford, especially by the Guilford people. The exercises will include the delivery of a poem by Charles Lute, of Guilford; historical address by Professor Samuel Harpe, of Trinity college; a paper by Professor Johnson, of the same institution; addresses by Col. T. W. Higginson, Professor W. R. Dudley, of Cornell university, and John Todd, of New Haven, etc., etc. Among the proudest relics of the past in Guilford is the "old stone house," of which a cut is given, built in 1639 by Mr. Whitfield, one of the original settlers. It is the oldest house in Guilford, and by some is held to be the oldest in all New England.



OLDEST HOUSE IN MILFORD.

A cut is also given of the oldest house in Milford.

Insensibility to Odors.

A Californian, writing in Garden and Forest with regard to the sense of taste, cites the case of a prominent Chicago physician, who declared that he could detect no difference between the taste of castor oil and of olive oil. To test the question his wife dressed a salad with ol. ricin., which he partook of with great gusto, but not without enjoying afterward all the remedial benefits of the drug. The editor of The Journal, commenting on the foregoing, says: Perhaps this is only another example of inability to detect certain odors. The peculiar "flavor" of castor oil is conveyed through the olfactory nerves. Children are directed not to breathe through the nose while taking this medicine, and in this way they escape its disagreeable "taste." The subject has interested many readers. One writes: "It seems like an affectation to say that mignonette has any odor. It has no more to me than a clean china plate." Another writes that the members of his family frequently praise the delightful fragrance of the flowers of a large vine of Clematis crispa, now in full bloom, while he has never yet been able to detect the slightest odor in these flowers.

An Important Element

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by anyone who desires to test the matter. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists.

THERE has been much speculation as to the truth of the statement that Graham went over the Niagara Falls in a barrel some ten days since. There is about an equal division of opinion concerning the truth and falsity of the assertion. Now the papers are full of articles containing accounts of a trip made over the falls by Steve Brodie in a rubber suit. The same doubtfull circumstances surround the case as attended Graham's alleged trip. Brodie has succeeded in becoming bruised and mangled but it is not probable that he made the trip.

We were disappointed at W. M. Armstrong of the National grange not being present, who was expected to address the people, but the deficency was well filled by home talent.

The [illegible] and the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Companies have arranged the fourth annual grand excursion to New York.

The great success of previous excursions of this kind has made the annual New York excursion the leading event of the year, in its line and it is now regarded as the annual outing, or holiday, for the residence of Northern New York. More than 6,000 people patronized the last three annual excursions to New York, and every one was pleased and satisfied. The best people patronize these excursions, and the fact that the same ones go each year attests to its popularity. In announcing the arrangements for this excursion, the railroad companies take pleasure in saying that the same perfect arrangements which have made the past excursions such splendid successes, will be observed this year, with increased facilities and new attractions, which will make the excursion of 1889 superior to its predecessors.

The excursion will leave the line of the R. W. & O. R R. on Tuesday, October 1st, 1889. The tickets are good going on that day only; but are good for return passage on any regular train from New York, until October 11th, inclusive. The fare for the round trip from any place on the R, W. & O. R. R., at which these excursion tickets are on sale, is only ($7.00) to New York and return. Special solid trains will run through from stations on the R. W. & O. on special scedule time to the Grand Central depot, New York. Sixty-five elegant passenger coaches, twenty Wagner sleeping cars and twenty Wagner drawing-room cars have been reserved to be used for this grand excursion. The passenger coaches are first-class in every respect, being the best owned by the two companies. Passengers are sure of a quick and comfortable journey to New York.

Sleeping cars will run on night trains and drawing-room cars on day trains. The price for sleeping car berths from any station to New York is $2.00; sections, $4.00; state-room $7.00; drawing-room car chairs; $1.50 each. Tickets for sleeping or drawing-room cars must be purchased on or before September 28th, and at the station on the R. W. & O. at which the train will be taken for New York.

Special trains leaving the line of the R. W. & O. R. R. in the morning, arrive at Grand Central Depot, New York, at 9:20 o'clock the next morning.

This will be a grand opportunity for a visit to New York, and the time selected is the very best season of the years to visit the metropolis.

A trip to New York the commercial metropolis of the United States and the largest city of the Western Hemisphere, is always popular, and it is expected that a very large number of people will take advantage of the low rates and splendid first-class facilities offered by this excursion. Tickets and information can be obtained of all R. W. & O. R. R. Ticket agents.

Something New.

The first number of what promises to be the handsomest and most interesting illustrated weekly journal in the United States will soon be issued at Portland, Oregon.

When we think that in all that polous region between the Alleghany mountains and the Missouri river there is not a single illustrated weekly, it seems somewhat strange to hear that such a paper is to be published in what we have been accustomed to consider "far-off" Oregon. But Oregon is far off no longer, and in no respect is she behind her older sisters of the east; indeed it would seem from this announcement that she is a step in advance of them.

We certainly look for something of great interest when the weekly West Shore, the name of the new journal, makes its appearance, for where can be found subjects for graphic pictorial art grander than the scenery of the Pacific coast, or more full of interest than the varying incidents and phases of western life? The weekly will be profusely illustrated, and, in addition to its large pictures, will contain articles on topics of current interest, accompanied by engravings; also fiction, poetry and humorous sketches. One department of the paper will render it of special value to those seeking information of that region, for several pages of each issue will be devoted to a review of new enterprises and to the imparting of general information of great value to those who have an interest in the north-west and its progress. The subscription price will be $4.00 a year, and single copies will be furnished at news stands for ten cents each, or by sending that amount to the publisher, L. Samuel, Portland, Oregon. The West Shore does not come "to fill a long-felt want," but to do a new work in a new field and to give a new pleasure to thousands of people in every portion of our own broad and prosperous land. Be sure to invest ten cents in a copy and see something new.

Doll Baby in Otsego.

Mrs. John Pooler, of Otsego, N. Y., has given birth to a baby whose weight is less than two pounds. It measures about ten inches in length and less than three inches across the shoulders. The child is so small that doll's cloths are required to dress it, and it takes the air in an ordinary doll's carriage. Both parents are good-sized persons.

The simplest and best regulator of the Disordered Liver in the world are Carter's Little Liver Pills. They give prompt relief in Sick Headache, Dizziness, Nausea, &c.; prevent and cure Constipation and Piles; remove Sallowness and Pimples from the Complexion, and are mild and gentle in their operation on the bowels. Carter's Little Liver Pills are small and as easy to take as sugar. One pill a dose. Price 25 cents.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve

The best Salve in the world for Cuts, [illegible]

Treasurer Huston [illegible] change in form of the national debt statement, issued monthly, a change that is doubtless for political reasons and may or may not aid the Republican party before the people. Mr. Huston says that on the entrance of the Democratic administration, Secretary Manning and Treasurer Jordan altered the form of statement that had been in use for decades, for political purposes. During the terms of Senators Chase, McCulloch, Boutwell, Richardson, Sherman, Windom and Folger, every Treasurer had counted among the available assets the one hundred millions set aside for the redemption of the United States notes and the twenty-five millions of fractional silver. At present these one hundred and twenty-five millions do not appear as available assets.

The Republicans claim that Secretary Manning withdrew these from the statement, as he was opposed to the purchase of bonds and well knew on the other hand, that the people demanded a reduction of the excessive surplus, and that this alarm at the surplus must be quieted. The new statement will show the surplus, as about one hundred and twenty-five million dollars.

Speaking of the surplus, the return of the famous surplus reducer Corporal Tanner has started new rumors of his resignation. The rabid utterances of the Corporal on his recent junketing tour have left his best friends without defense for him. It is feared that should he be retained, his utterances regarding Senator Sherman and other leading lights of his own party will block his administration after Congress meets. The trouble seems to be to find a place for him. The position he now occupies is second in importance only to a cabinet position. It would not do to give him a much inferior position, though he is hardly competent to be a chief of division. He might be given a consulate but he cannot be induced to go abroad. Thus Sinbad, the sailor, in the person of President Harrison, is bound to carry this doughty old man of the sea about on his shoulders, until the old man's grip gives out. The failure of Corporal Tanner to convince the Grand Army at Milwaukee that an investigation of his personal conduct of the Pension Bureau is a direct blow at the Grand Army was, however, his Waterloo.

The English syndicates that are buying American breweries have perchance forgotten that the larger beer drinker is not an Anglomaniac. He is apt to be quite the opposite. Apropos of this is the case of one of the leading breweries of Washington which has, after long negotiation, fallen into the hands of the British, the former proprietor being retained as manager and receiving a large part of the stock for his plant. The purpose of organizing a company is to extend operations by increasing capital. But a local mining paper, acting no doubt at the fiendish suggestion of an opposite brewer, publishes glowing accounts of the meeting of the London stock-holders and the cake is dough. For the greater number of the saloon keepers who have patronized the recently purchased brewery are Irish or Irish sympathizers, and the beer is dropped by scores of them. Within the week the trade has fallen off wonderfully, and the English owners will wear crape at their next meeting.

The records of the War department show the steady increase of desertions from the army—a record that is but poorly accounted for by the statement of officers to the effect that better times encourage the deserter to look for easy work and big wages in civil life. The men outside of a few favorites of the officers, tell only one story. They say that every year the food grows worse and the treatment harsher. During the year ending June 1, out of an army of 22,000 men, there were nearly 3,000 desertions, in other words during the twelve months a man deserted from every guard of seven. The sutler is just as much of a nuisance as he ever was and his prices are exhorbitant. The soldier of to-day is only an ally fed and over disciplined laborer. The recent revelations at Jefferson barracks exhibit only a condition that has been well known as existing for years there and elsewhere on the western posts. The story is no new one. The officers have no sympathy for the men who are daily becoming more degraded, and the relationship is that of slave and slave driver.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

He was master mate on the gunboats Elk and Naiad, serving on the Mississippi and Red river flotillas, and taking part in many battles and engagements. BUFFALO'S BOOMING FAIR

TO CLOSE ON FRIDAY IN A BLAZE OF GLORY.

Our Correspondent Visits Overhears a Conversation in a Street Car Which Gives Us a Number of Useful Pointers on the Success of the Exposition—An Astounding Aerial Performance Arranged for the Last Day of the Fair.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

BUFFALO, Sept. 10.—The great Fair is a week old to-day and at sundown but three days will remain for its enjoyment.

I flatter myself that, after the many preliminary articles I have written concerning this event, the readers of my weekly chats will be glad to know how it has thus far turned out. I can fancy myself the centre of a multitude of eager interrogators who are firing off a thousand questions at once.

One at a time please. Yes, the attendance has been very large. Not quite so large on the first four days as it was on those dates last year, but still enormous. Saturday of course saw the biggest crowd, for that was Citizens' Day, and the majority of the manufactories and business houses of Buffalo closed their doors in order that all employes might have an opportunity to enjoy the Fair. The turnstiles showed an attendance of over 70,000, and did not of course register multitudes of people who entered the grounds in carriages.

Is it as fine a show as last year? Unquestionably finer in every department. Of course there are people who have gone away disappointed, but those are the people who if they owned the whole world would sit down in a bog and pine for the moon and stars. I overheard an interesting conversation between one of these discontents and another visitor whose liver seemed in better order, coming in from the Fair grounds the other evening. The first speaker was the sort of a man who, should his wife present him with a long wished for son and heir, would grumble because the child hadn't come with a gold watch and chain stuck in its silken sash and a fifty dollar bill in its chubby fist. He ventured the remark in a tone audible throughout the entire car that he'd seen plenty of county fairs as good as this one. A gentleman sitting in the seat ahead turned around and asked politely, "Did you visit the Horse Show?"

"Oh! I looked in," said the other grumblingly, "but what's great in a lot of horses?"

"Did you go into the Art Gallery?" said the gentleman in front.

"Naw," replied the grumbler, "I wasn't going to pay no 25 cents to see a few pictures."

"Did you see the Cattle and Sheep shows?"

"Nothing great in them," was the reply.

"Did you study the machinery?"

"Pshaw, I don't care for engines," said the grumbler.

"Didn't see the Poultry show, I suppose?" continued the gentleman in the first seat, "or the trotting races, or the Palace of Illusion, or the Horticultural department, or the collection of patents, or the tobacco exhibits, or the Iron Art gallery, and didn't hear Cappa's concert? Why you must have spent your time eating peanuts."

This called forth a roar of laughter from the other passengers, and when it had subsided the last speaker continued: "I'll tell you what I'll do, I'll bet you $100 to $10 that the Horse show at the Fair is the largest and best ever held in America; that it's twice the size of any one ever held in the Madison Square Garden in New York city, for which 50 cents admission is always charged. I'll bet you another $100 to $10 that if the Cattle show alone were opened in St. Louis, Chicago, New York or any other city, it would be crowded for a month at 50 cents a head. Vice President Morton's Guernsey cattle alone are worth a quarter to see. I'll bet you another $100 to $10 that you never saw at any County or State Fair you ever attended, two Corliss engines in motion at once running shoe factories, ice-making machines and a hundred things of that sort. I'll bet you anything you want, at any odds, that there are two pictures alone in the Art Gallery, either one of which would crowd any hall in any city with visitors at twenty-five cents apiece. Perhaps that you don't know that the Russian Wedding Feast has for the past two years been visited in New York by people from all over the United States and Europe who have gladly paid a quarter to see it. I'll tell you what I think about you, I think your liver is out of order and that you need medicine."

It really is aggravating to see the smart, we-know-it-all, [illegible] good-enough-for-us air assumed by visitors who can scarcely keep their jaws from dropping off in amazement at the sights they are beholding. There are people who really seem ashamed to be seen enjoying themselves.

I trust the readers of this letter who come to the Fair this week will use their eyes to better advantage than our discontented friend in the horse car. The Art Gallery is certainly worth a visit, and the price of admission to it in almost any city will be 25 cents. [illegible]

Either Thursday or Friday will be a good day to attend. On Thursday the [illegible]

Cheese Market Report.

(From the Utica Herald.)

AT UTICA.

UTICA, Sept. 9.

The advance of a ½c. in the cheese market today will be welcome news to dairymen, who had begun to fear that prices could not get out of the rut they had been following all summer. Of course the improvement in New York set the example, but some of the buyers are a little doubtful about the policy of paying the prices paid here to-day. They fear that shippers will not take the stock so as to let the buyers out whole. On the other hand some dealers look for still further advance, and we trust they may be right.

Inquiry among salesmen develops the fact that the make of cheese is off from one-quarter to one-third, and that cows are now shrinking very rapidly. In several instances the yield is off fully 40 per cent. It is attributed partly to dry weather, but more especially to flies, which are extremely bothersome at the present time.

Sales of the day were as follows:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
83	6,444	9c
4	330	8¾
29	2,606	8¾
12	1,071	8½
37	3,522	8¾
2	300	8⅝
3	165	p.t.
170	14,703
	1,348	Com.
Total	16,056

Ruling price 9c. Transactions one year ago 14,636 boxes, ruling price 8¾c. Two years ago 18,236 boxes; ruling price 10⅜c. The cause of excess to-day was that a number of salesmen disposed of the cheese they have been holding back the last two weeks.

There were sales of 53 packages creamery butter at 19½ @ 20c. Bulk went at 19½c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Sept. 9.

Cheese—The market to-day has shown a more healthy tone and prices are advanced in the ruling day. There has been no boom, but a steady advance, but with a feeling in some quarters tonight that prices have been put up quite as much as the circumstances will warrant. The figures indicate that there has been no crowding forward of stock, for no more than one week's make has been shipped. Some apprehension is felt lest the city market should fail to respond to the advance in the country, and prices suffer next week in consequence. There is an increased home trade demand, and this feature is looked to to help out and keep the market steady and prevent prices from sagging back.

Following is our usual table:

Lots	Boxes	Price.
82	4,580	8¾
12	2,221	8½
16	850	Com.
121	7,780
Farm dairy	1,080
Total	8,850

Farm Dairies—The sales of farm dairy cheese amount to 1,080 boxes and the prices range from 8 to 9c., with the ruling of 8½c., and but one small lot, which is sometimes classed at factory, at the top price.

Butter—The only sales of butter represented are 9 packages of creamery at 18 cents.

AT FULTON.

The usual number of factories were represented at this market Monday evening and as there was an advance of fully one-half of a cent all of the 3,565 boxes are reported to have been sold at from 8 to 8½ cents. This is the lowest price at this season of the year in ten years.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" show at the opera house Friday evening last did not draw the crowd that it usually does here. It looked probable that Fultonians would never tire of it but the best of chestnuts sometimes become rotten.

It looks as though Supervisor W. H. Selleck of Williamstown might receive the nomination for Assembly in the second district of Oswego county, in place of D. E. Ainsworth who has had a mortgage on it for several years.

The Fire Department through the chiefs desire to extend thanks to the citizens for the liberal manner in which they gave money to make Review Day successful. H. C. Giesler, the Cayuga street druggist, met with a severe accident on Thursday last which was at first feared would result in permanent disability. While opening a barrel with a hatchet it slipped and struck with the sharp edge on the knee pan, cutting it severely. J. J. Stephens of Washington returned last week from his trip to the Pacific slope and will remain in Fulton for several weeks. He speaks with enthusiasm of the far west—its cities, resources and wonderful scenery. A striking incident of the trip was the fact that he was at Lathrop when Judge Terry while assaulting Justice Field was shot by detective Nagle. His party was on the same train that carried the principals in the tragedy and he was an eye witness to the scene.

We made mention last week, of a rumor to the effect that a settlement had been reached between Mr. Johnson and the Thomson-Houston Electric Co. in regard to the suit concerning the famous pole at the corner of Oneida and First street.

It seems in the article that we gave Mr. Johnson credit for a larger amount of common sense and philanthropic spirit than he possesses as he now announces his intention to fight the matter out on his usual principle.

As THE TIMES understands it the Electric Light Co. offered to pay all costs of the suit, to remove the two scrub poles that are a disgrace to the street as they stand in contrast to the large poles on all sides of them. They further offered, we are informed, to enter into a written agreement—if they were allowed to string their wires on the large pole during the pendency of the suit and remove the scrub ones—to take no advantage of the privilege but abide by the final decision rendered by the courts. If it went against the Company all three poles would then be removed. But, no, Mr. Johnson will do nothing of the kind. The pole must be removed. No arbitration for him. So the lawyers grow flush with lucre from his fat wallet and citizens are compelled to witness at the busiest point in the village a meshwork of wires stretched on two scraggy poles while the rest are stretched on majestic poles many feet higher. And through this display of idiotic cussedness, the same will probably exist for several years to come—as however it is decided in the Supreme court it will probably be carried to the Court of Appeals. Verily, as a philantropist, as a man who cares for the good appearance of the village or the village interests, the respondent in this case which now goes before the Supreme court should be put upon the shelf and allowed to go through the process of ossification.

Young Men's Christian Association.

The General Secretary is beginning to feel at home because so many members and friends of the association have called upon him with words of welcome and hearty hand shaking giving assurance of their friendliness and support. There are still very many who have not been met, now don't be backward, drop in, or if on the street, introduce yourself. He wants to get acquainted with all and as soon as possible. It may be necessary for you to introduce yourself two or three times because there are eight or nine hundred young men residing here, and so it will be hard for him to remember your face. Rally together, get acquainted and ready for work.

Classes will be organized in the different branches of the work as soon as opportunity is offered.

Every young man is invited to the meeting next Sunday at 4 o'clock p. m. Topic "Look." Leader, Harry L. Platt. Whosoever will, let him come.

The Fair Next Week.

The Oswego Falls Fair has always been a success, and is bound to be this season. The managers have made a special effort to have this the best fair ever held by the society. They have engaged more special attractions than ever before. They have at a large expense engaged Prof. M. A. Allen on Dansville, N. Y., who will jump from his balloon at the height of a mile on the second and third days of the Fair. There will also be a Children's Department, showing the wonderful display of the work of the pupils of the Fulton Union School, embracing every variety of handiwork by their hands and genius, consisting of about one thousand articles. Persons who saw this exhibition last winter say that it was worth the full admission that it costs to attend the fair. Do not miss the best fair ever held by the society. Also many special premiums from citizens on exhibits in addition to regular premiums.

Ex-Minister Bloom Eloquent.

Joseph Bloom formerly preacher of the now defunct Free Baptist church of Oswego Falls, who has been confined in the county jail since his arrest on charge of horse-stealing last winter had his trial at Pulaski last week. He conducted his own defense and summed it up in a most eloquent manner, so eloquent in fact that while the evidence led every-one to believe that he would be convicted, the jury disagreed, standing six for acquittal and six for conviction. New evidence is said to have been secured against Bloom and he will be tried again this week.

To Owners of Horses.

Dr. A. J. Hiram Lodge No. 144 F. & A. M. will confer the third degree on two candidates next Monday evening and it is desired that there be a full attendance as matters of importance may come before the lodge. By request of the W. M.

We have received excellent samples of Crawford peaches raised at John Stevenson's in Oswego Falls and Foster peaches raised in Hale Curtis' garden. If samples received during the past week are any criterion Fulton and vicinity is quite a peach country.

Mr. Chauncey Belknap the represencative of the Thomson-Houston Electric Co. who has been in Fulton many times recently, will be married to-morrow. He leaves in a few days for San Francisco, thence on a six months' trip to Australia in the interest of his company.

Charles H. Eggleston, son of C. S. Eggleston and city editor of the Syracuse Standard has severed his connection with that paper and goes to Anaconda, Mon., to fill a position on a paper there which is to be started under the management of Prof. J. H. Durston also formerly of the Standard.

A new steam yacht the property of A. J. Tooley was launched last week and adds another excellent craft to the number that already sail on the river Oswego. It was built by Mr. Root of this village and will carry about 12 persons. The trial trip to Three Rivers proved it to be satisfactory in every particular.

The Rupublican town caucus will be held next Saturday afternoon at 2 p. m. at the opera house hall to elect delegates to the district and county conventions. N. N. Stranahan will be allowed to select the Assembly delegates and the knowing ones say that candidates will be chosen as district delegates that favor the re-nomination of Surrogate David and "Ed" Cole for Coroner

Much of the success of the Oswego Co. Fair now being held in Oswego is due to the able manner in which the advertising has been done. This branch of the business has been under the charge of S. G. Merriam of Oswego, who believes that printers' ink and lots of it is one of the essentials to an undertaking of this kind. He has conducted the advertising with judgment and skill.

The semi-annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. church was held yesterday afternoon in the church parlors. After the business meeting a literary program was carried out and the "mite boxes" opened. Supper was served in the early evening and then an interesting address on "The Women of Italy" was given by Dr. Vernon of Syracuse, who has been a missionary in Italy for seventeen years.

Waite's Comedy Company opened their season at the opera house Saturday evening, in "The Major's Daughter" before a fair sized audience. The company is strengthened by the addition of the comedian, Edward Hanford and his wife both of whom are excellent but did not have much chance to show their talent in the play selected for the opening night. Miss Neilson and Mr. Waite maintained the reputation they established here last year, while the reorganized Premium band will soon be up to the high standard of last season.

The Annual Review.

The Fulton Fire Department held its annual review on Thursday last under charge of Chief Bradley, 1st Assistant Williams and 2d Assistant Crahan. Waite's Comedy Co. band played a few selections in front of the engine house and then the village fathers looked over the boys after they had arranged themselves in a line. The members of Steamer Co. No. 1 appeared in new coats which President Wilson pronounced sufficiently neat to go courting in. After the review timekeepers Kellogg and Nichols took a position on the Hook and Ladder truck and ex-chief Darrow hastened up First street with the stars and stripes to start the hose races. Assistant Chief Crahan was also at the starting point to see that no one but members of the companies ran.

The races were 200 yards attaching hose to the hydrant at the corner of Rochester and First street and then laying 100 feet of hose and putting on nozzle. At the end of the races the judges announced the following as the time made: Sharp Hose, 57 4-5 seconds; Hook and Ladder, 59 seconds; No. 1, 62 seconds; No. 2, 61 seconds. The prizes were $20, $15, $11 and $9.

After the races a test of the steamers occurred on Wall street and the "Hooks" gave an excellent exhibition of the work they were capable of doing, at Gage's mill.

Chief Wossup and fire commissioner Norton of Oswego were here to witness the review and were entertained by the chiefs of the department.

Phœnix Fair—Sept. 24th, 25th and 26th 1889—3,000 in Premiums.

The Phœnix Fair is situated in a rich farming country, and excels in the display of Live Stock, Fruits, Gram, Vegetables, Dairy Products and Domestic Manufactures. Especially is the locality noted for producing some of the finest horses and cattle of the Empire State, the exhibition of which has given Phœnix Fair a widespread and growing popularity.

Among the special attractions for '89 will be the manufacture of 4,000 pounds of milk into cheese upon the grounds.

Also the practical demonstration of how cream is separated from milk, by the use of the patent separators; and the ripening process produced, after which the cream will be made into butter by an expert. In the matter of racing the Phœnix Fair is without a rival, and the public is assured that it will be better than ever before. Do not fail to see the "Milch Cow Test."

A good band, and other special attractions each day.

Reduced fare on the R. W. & O. Railroad. Send for premium list. Everybody will attend the Phœnix Fair.

A Bad "Header."

Andrew Gilmour will not return to Phillip's academy as he intended today for the reason that he is in bed and will have to remain there for several weeks to come. He was riding rapidly through the park yesterday forenoon on his bicycle and when near the bandstand he endeavored to execute one of the tricks on the wheel—that of riding it in a side saddle fashion—when his hand by some chance touched the brake and he was thrown headlong, striking some six feet distant on his head and shoulders. He went home and physicians were called who upon examination discovered that his collar bone was broken. "Andy" is an excellent bicycle rider but he drives it too hard sometimes for safety. Although the injury is severe and painful enough it is fortunate that it was not more serious.

Rural School Interests at The Fair.

Great Sale of Damaged Goods.

$3,000 worth of Drugs, Medicines, Dye Stuffs, &c., more or less damaged in the recent fire to be disposed of without regard to cost or present value. WORTH KNOWING

If your cows are not paying for their board, turn them off.

The senate investigation committee claims that irrigation by artesian wells is practicable in Dakota.

The New York apple crop is poor in quality, the fruit being wormy, scabby and scarce.

The season just past was the wettest ever known in New York State. The result has been considerable injury to grain and grass.

In hot weather the churning should be done about the time some buttermakers set the cream away to sour.

The Virginia tobacco crop is reported as having been considerably injured by excessive moisture.

Denmark annually exports 111,000,000 eggs mostly to England,

Reports make it appear that the Eastern potato crop is considerably damaged, while the Western crop, as a rule, is an average one.

If you intend to build up a dairy herd it will pay you to feed your young heifers something besides corn—give them some oats. You will reap the good of it in their progress as well as in churn.

It is very poor economy to throw soft feed into the dirt. Place boards in front of the coop to feed the young chicks on. Place troughs in the hen-house in such position that the hens cannot get their feet in them.

The Rural New Yorker has never seen any chickens grow faster than the grade Dorkings. It also pronounces sheep handy animals for the market gardener to have. They eat the vines of Lima beans and peas and substances other stock will refuse.

If you carry milk to a factory or ship to market it will pay you to cool it at once as soon as drawn from the cows. It don't make a man feel very well to have his milk rejected because "it is off" after he has spent time cooling it. But he did not do it soon enough.

A rule suggested by Southern Cultivator as a good one for sowing fall oats is to sow as long before the 1st of January as the main crop of corn is planted after the same date. For instance, if February be the month for planting the main crop of corn, then oats may be sown in November; if corn be planted in March, then sow oats in October; if April be the month for planting corn, then oats should be sown in September.

THE PROPER THING

A new color this season in leather goods is pearl gray.

Mohair is being extensively used for the foundation skirts of heavy wool dresses.

Some of the new silk underskirts are lined with flannel, and thus one skirt is equal to two.

Full sleeves, with a pointed velvet puff at the top, down the outside, are seen on some dressy Autumn toilets of silk and velvet.

Double-breasted velvet vests under jacket fronts are effective on wool gowns, the opening of the jacket at the top being heartshaped.

Many of the dressed women are wearing very plain underclothing. This is to make their dresses fit perfectly.

The directoire effect is produced on little girls' dresses by adding two wide lappels, a full vest and a sash of silk.

The turquoise and garnet have long been looked upon as the most desirable stones for setting in children's jewelry. Blue enamel also figures largely in infantile jewelry.

A unique vase destined to attract attention comes in what is called the pineapple pattern, and simulates both the fruit and the foliage.

Persons with flat feet may have the instep raised with a cork pad. For those who desire to increase their stature, cork elevators are provided to be worn outside the shoe.

One sees nowadays a great deal of flexible jewelry, bracelets that cling to the arm, necklaces that readjust themselves to curves and undulations of the throat and neck, and corsage pieces that may be fitted to the requirements of the bodice.

Time for Sowing Wheat.

There have doubtless been instances where a few days difference in the time for sowing wheat has had a large and exceptional influence on the success of the crop. This may have resulted from other causes than the exact time. Series of experiments have been made to determine the best time, by sowing at regular stated intervals, resulting in a gradual diminution in the crop from the latter part of September till early in November, the latter proving small and poor. The fertility and condition of the soil has a large controlling influence and if finely pulverized, it will give much greater returns than in badly prepared land. Artificial fertilizers, and especially superphosphates, produce a great improvement on some soils, and on others they have produced too little benefit to pay cost. There is less difference in the time of ripening from the fact that the weather at the period of ripening hastens the process very rapidly, producing but little difference in most cases, says Country Gentleman.

COMPARISON SOLICITED.—A wise discrimination should be exercised by all who take medicine. The proprietors of Hood's Sarsaparilla solicit a careful comparison of this medicine with other blood purifiers and medicines, being confident that the peculiar merits of Hood's Sarsaparilla are so apparent that the people will unhesitatingly prefer it to any other preparation. Hood's Sarsaparilla is not a mixture of molasses and a few inert roots and herbs, but is a peculiar concentrated extract of the best alterative and blood-purifying remedies of the vegetable kingdom. SAYRE—HAMMOND.

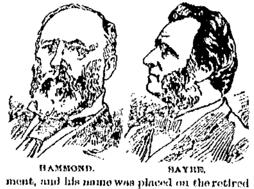
Sketch of the Men Who Have Been Quarreling About the Elixir.

W. A. Hammond, M. D., of Washington, and L. A. Sayre, M. D., of New York, who have been airing one another's professional record because of a disagreement as to the advisability of making experiments with Brown-Sequard's alleged elixir, are both old enough to know better than to make such an exhibition as they have of themselves.

Dr. Hammond was born at Annapolis, Md., Aug. 28, 1828; is 6 feet 2 in. height, and still carries himself erect. He was graduated from the medical department of the University of New York, and entered the United States army in 1849 as assistant surgeon, with the rank of first lieutenant. In October, 1860, he resigned, to become professor of anatomy and physiology in the University of Maryland, but when the civil war broke out he again entered the army and rose, step by step, to be surgeon general in April, 1862. He instituted radical changes, but suffered from charges of irregularity in awarding certain liquor contracts. Then came trouble, and his dismissal as surgeon general, after a court martial, by Secretary Stanton. This was in 1864, and the young surgeon had but about $500 in the world. He determined to leave Washington and settle in New York, and when he did so made a vow that he would return to the capital in twenty-five years reinstated and cleared of all suspicion.

His reinstatement took place in 1879, but he was not yet ready to return to Washington, and in fact did not go back till 1888, when he established himself at Washington at the head of a large private institution for the treatment of the disorders he had made a specialty. He had by that time accumulated a very comfortable competence, and had won a name second to none in the ranks of his profession. During the early days of his residence in New York he was often in straits financially, but he struggled manfully with adversity, making nervous diseases his specialty and eking out his slender income with his ready pen. Quite early in his New York career he was made lecturer on nervous diseases at the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons. In 1878 he set about the vindication of his character, a bill being introduced in congress authorizing the president to review the court martial by which he was displaced. The result was reinstatement, and his name was placed on the retired list of the army as surgeon general and brigadier general, with the original date of April 25, 1862.



HAMMOND. SAYRE.

He has been an indefatigable worker in his profession as a medical and surgical writer and in the journalistic and literary fields. Some of his novels have reached several editions. His son, Braeme Hammond, is a New York surgeon, and his daughter Clara married the Marquis Manfredi Lanza di Mercato Bianco, an Italian. The experiments made upon himself by Dr. Hammond with the Brown-Sequard elixir are only in the line of what has been his usual practice. While he was in New York he experimented on himself with cocaine, the newspapers publishing accounts thereof under the head of "On a Spree for Science." The information gained was very valuable.

Dr. Sayre is a native of Bottle Hill, now Madison, N. J., where he was born Feb. 29, 1820. He was graduated from Transylvania university, Ky., in 1838, and the College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1842. He was shortly given the office of prosecutor to Dr. Willard Parker, professor of surgery in that institution, which he held for ten years. In 1853 he was made surgeon to Bellevue hospital, New York, and since that time has held several similar offices in other institutions in and about New York city. In 1873 he became consulting surgeon at Bellevue. Dr. Sayre was one of the first to advocate clinical practice in medical colleges and was among those who helped along the establishment of the Bellevue Hospital Medical college in 1861. When its faculty was formed he became professor of orthopedic surgery and fractures and luxations, and later of clinical surgery, which chair he still holds.

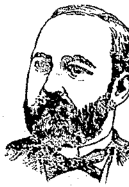
From 1860 to 1866 he was resident physician of the city of New York, in 1876 he was a delegate to the International Medical congress that convened in Philadelphia, and in 1877 was a delegate from the American Medical association to the British Medical association. He has served in a similar capacity at several succeeding meetings of the same sort, in many cases being called upon to demonstrate before those present difficult treatment of different sorts. His surgical inventions are many and useful. In 1873 he was made a Knight of the Order of Wasa by Charles XIV, king of Sweden and Norway, and is member of many medical bodies in America and elsewhere.

He is a voluminous writer, but his works have been confined to surgery. In the recent discussion of the Brown-Sequard elixir, in which he held Dr. Hammond up to ridicule for his experiments, he proved himself an extremely vigorous if not an elegant and temperate master of English.

Named in South Dakota.

Arthur C. Mellette, who was recently nominated for governor by the Republicans of South Dakota, was born in Henry county, Indiana, in 1842. For a while he attended school in an old log house, and then was a school teacher for one term.

In 1864 he graduated from the regular course of the state university at Bloomington. At the close of his course he served one year in the war with Company A, Ninth Infantry regiment. After the war he began to read law and graduated from the State University Law school. Mr. Mellette then took up the practice of law at Muncie, where he was made district attorney in 1868. In 1873 he was a member of the Indiana legislature and helped to return Oliver P. Morton to the United States senate.



ARTHUR C. MELLETTE.

Mr. Mellette was the proprietor of The Muncie Times for seven years. He then went to Watertown, D. T., where he was afterwards appointed register of the Watertown land office. For four years he remained in this position, and was succeeded by C. G. Williams. He was a member of the first Sioux Falls constitutional convention, in 1883, and displayed great skill in the management of territorial affairs. In 1885 Mr. Mellette was elected governor of South Dakota by a large majority, and since his term expired he has been practicing law at Watertown.

Bright's Disease.

A Ten-Year-Old Child Saved After the Failure of Four Physicians.

My little girl, ten years of age, was taken sick in March, 1888, with scarlet fever. When recovering she took a severe cold, which developed Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. Her ankles, feet and eyes were terribly swollen; she had a burning fever, and all the symptoms of an aggravated case of Bright's Disease. Four of our best physicians attended her, but without success, and

Her Life was Despaired of.

But a mother's love and prayers surmount all difficulties, and I determined to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y. This was a last resort, and I hoped, although my little daughter's case was a very severe one, that the Favorite Remedy would do for her what it had done for others whose condition had not been, seemingly, so hopeless. How happy I am that I determined upon this course—for an improvement was at once perceptible. The fever left her—her appetite improved—she gained six pounds in a short time, and one by one the well known and dreaded symptoms of the disease left her. Words fail to express my gratitude, and I cannot too earnestly recommend the Favorite Remedy. It was

The TORTURES OF DESPAIR

Can be no worse than the agony of a man or woman troubled with Sick Headache. The terrible pain; the nausea; the lack of all interest in life; the disgust with everything and everybody; the world can afford no pleasure to any one when suffering from Sick Headache.

Why have Doctors never been able to cure this fearful trouble?

Because they have never discovered the right thing!

Have they tried?

Yes, for hundreds of years.

But a Chemist of Troy, N. Y., discovered the remedy; and the remedy that will cure in EVERY CASE arising from a deranged stomach.

Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders

Go right to the Seat of the trouble—the Stomach. They are purely vegetable, and contain no narcotics. They act with wonderful promptness and never leave any bad after-effect.

Phillip Phillips, the "Singing Pilgrim," says of them:—"I cannot tell you how glad I am to get something that relieves my wife of her headaches."

Rev. George F. Pentecost, D. D., says:—"I have received many benedictions from those to whom I have given these powders."

The late Rev. C. P. Sheldon, says:—"They are a wonderful remedy, and all they claim to be."

A SAMPLE

of these wonderful Powders will be sent FREE to any sufferer from this terrible affliction, or they can be procured of all reputable druggists at 25 cents a box.

Will deliver free of charge, show cards and samples to any druggist who will keep the card in his window and give the samples to the most desperate cases.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gentlemen:—I have used your Kendall's Spavin Cure for Corns and Scratches and I can say I never saw its equal. I have cured some of the worst cases of Corns that a horse could be subject to. I have been having such good success with your liniment that I would almost as soon a horse would have Corns as not. I have recommended it to several with like success. I had a large Pacer with a white hoof forward and had Corns in both quarters as large as fifty-cent pieces. I cured him in three weeks, so when I sold him to an expert horseman he never knew the horse ever had a Corn. I will give $100.00 for the worst case of Corns that I can't cure with your Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Respectfully yours, PETER MALONEY.

'Tis said that Riley's face would wax into broad-

A WOMAN WITH A HISTORY

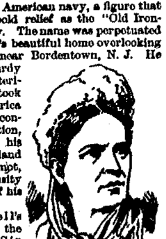
THE MOTHER OF CHARLES STEWART PARNELL.

Her Health Is Said to Be Failing—Brief Sketch of Her Career—The Daughter of "Old Ironsides," as the American Commodore Stewart Was Called.

Among the many women of prominence for whom America has formed a home, few are better known to the people of both hemispheres than Mrs. Delia Tudor Stewart Parnell. For many years she was a power in the Irish National League movement in the United States, and she became as well known on the platform as any of the male speakers for that cause.

She early in life showed that she had great force of character, and exquisite culture and tact. During her residence in Ireland and subsequent visits she gained a thorough knowledge of the complicated mechanism of British politics, which she used to great advantage in her efforts as a Nationalist.

Her father was the famous Commodore Stewart, of the American navy, a figure that stands out in bold relief as the "Old Ironsides" of history. The name was perpetuated in Mrs. Parnell's beautiful home overlooking the Delaware near Bordentown, N. J. He came of that sturdy Ulster Presbyterian stock that took refuge in America from what was considered persecution, and, whether his hatred of England was justified or not, it grew in intensity until the time of his death.



DELIA STEWART PARNELL.

Mrs. Parnell's husband was the grandson of Sir John Parnell, and was a "rabid Liberal." They met during a visit of young Parnell to America, at a ball in Washington and were married in 1843. After the ceremony young Parnell returned with his bride to Ireland and settled down at Avondale, County Wicklow, a spot which has been immortalized by Thomas Moore—the "Sweet Vale of Avoca."

She immediately found a place in the hearts of the peasantry in and about Wicklow. She passed many of her leisure hours in the cottages and devoted herself, so far as she was able, to bettering the condition of the poor. The awful famine of 1847 affected her powerfully, and even now the tourist in the "sunny glens of Wicklow" is sure to hear tales of her noble conduct during that trying ordeal.

She played an important though quiet part in the Fenian troubles of 1865-67, in many instances proving herself a friend who could be trusted to the unfortunate veterans of the Union army who went to Ireland to join in the proposed "rising."

Her residence in Ireland continued for some time after her husband's death and until her children were educated. Her return to America was caused by a clause in her father's will. The damp climate of Ireland, too, as she advanced in years, had an unfavorable effect upon her health.

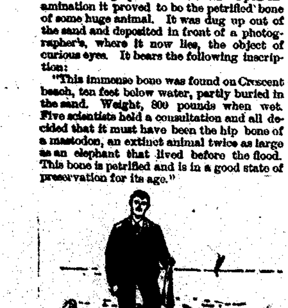
The Parnell family is of Anglo-Norman origin and originally located in Cheshire. They settled in Ireland in the time of Cromwell, but their estate at Avondale was acquired by purchase, not by confiscation. The old property in Cheshire is still in the possession of one of the family, a second cousin of Charles Steward Parnell, Lord Congleton. The famous poet Parnell, of the days of Pope and Dryden, was also a member of the family.

WHAT IS IT?

A Big Bone That Is Puzzling the Folks at Block Island.

A man walking along the beach of Block Island not many days ago saw something white sticking up out of the sand. Upon examination it proved to be the petrified bone of some huge animal. It was dug up out of the sand and deposited in front of a photographer's, where it now lies, the object of curious eyes. It bears the following inscription:

"This immense bone was found on Crescent beach, ten feet below water, partly buried in the sand. Weight, 800 pounds when wet. Five scientists held a consultation and all decided that it must have been the hip bone of a mastodon, an extinct animal twice as large as an elephant that lived before the flood. This bone is petrified and is in a good state of preservation for its age."



THE BIG BONE.

The five scientists proved upon inquiry to be mythical, one of them being a hotel clerk. There can be, however, no doubt that the bone is genuine and that in some former age it was part of some huge animal. It measures in length just six feet and eight inches.

JAMES FENIMORE COOPER.

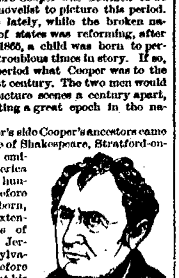
CENTENNIAL OF THE BIRTH OF THE GREAT AMERICAN NOVELIST.

His Works Were Full of Power and Have Had Many Unworthy Imitators—His Latter Days Were Not Altogether Pleasant. "Cooper's Indians" Are Proverbial.

One hundred years ago, on Sept. 15, 1789, and a few months after the inauguration of the first president of the United States, a child came into the world whose work it was to be to perpetuate in fiction the characteristics of those who then composed the new nation.

The Indian population at that time furnished a field for stories of adventure, and by the time the child came to middle life the Revolutionary war had come to be sufficiently distant for the extraction of its romance. James Fenimore Cooper was destined to be the historical novelist to picture this period. Perhaps more lately, while the broken national circle of states was reforming, after the spring of 1865, a child was born to perpetuate those troublous times in story. If so, he is to this period what Cooper was to the close of the last century. The two men would be born and picture scenes a century apart, each constituting a great epoch in the nation's history.

On his father's side Cooper's ancestors came from the home of Shakespeare, Stratford-on-Avon. They emigrated to America more than a hundred years before Cooper was born, and made extensive purchases of land in New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Just before Cooper's advent his father came into possession of several thousand acres of land in New York state lying along the headwaters of the Susquehanna river. On this tract, in 1788, he laid out the site of Cooperstown, on the shore of Otsego lake.

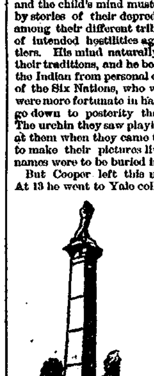


JAS. FENIMORE COOPER.

This spot, so beautiful today, must have possessed a singular fascination when the surrounding hills and mountains looked not even on a village. In sunlight, in moonlight and in storm they kept the same impassive silence. Now the summer tourist may ramble through the valleys or skim over the lake unmindful of danger. Then at any moment the frontiersman might be startled by a painted savage face staring at him from behind the bushes. But around him were beautiful undulations, sloping gradually; blue outlines of mountains against the sky; the bosom of the lake; and all was wild and silent and uncultivated.

In 1790 the family removed from New Jersey to this wilderness, and for six years lived in a log house, but when Cooper was 7 years of age his father built a manor house which he called Otsego Hall, for many years the most imposing in Central New York. Yet when it was built it stood on the frontiers. Pioneers had only begun to push out through the Mohawk valley, then the only available route to the further west. In Cooper's boyhood he was used to looking upon Indians when they came in for barter. Their proximity doubtless caused occasional anxiety, and the child's mind must have been excited by stories of their depredations, or warfare among their different tribes, or even reports of intended hostilities against the white settlers. His mind naturally was charged with their traditions, and he became familiar with the Indian from personal contact. The chiefs of the Six Nations, who were still powerful, were more fortunate in having their portraits go down to posterity than they suspected. The urchin they saw playing about, or staring at them when they came to Otsego Hall, was to make their pictures live long after their names were to be buried in oblivion.

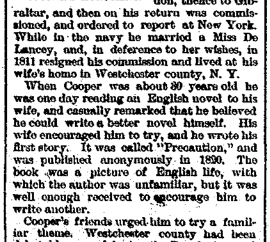
But Cooper left this natural state early. At 13 he went to Yale college. He had been tutored by an English rector, and found after preparing for recitations plenty of time for mischief. The result was that after three years at college he was expelled, though his father took sides with him against the faculty, and waged a war of words in his son's behalf. Then the youngster became a midshipman in the navy. But before he could aspire to this dignity he was obliged to make a voyage. He shipped before the mast, sailed to London, thence to Gibraltar, and then on his return was commissioned, and ordered to report at New York. While in the navy he married a Miss De Lancey, and, in deference to her wishes, in 1811 resigned his commission and lived at his wife's home in Westchester county, N. Y.



COOPER'S MONUMENT.

When Cooper was about 30 years old he was one day reading an English novel to his wife, and casually remarked that he believed he could write a better novel himself. His wife encouraged him to try, and he wrote his first story. It was called "Precaution," and was published anonymously in 1820. The book was a picture of English life, with which the author was unfamiliar, but it was well enough received to encourage him to write another.

Cooper's friends urged him to try a familiar theme. Westchester county had been debatable ground during the Revolution, and the De Lanceys—a Tory family—had been identified with stirring scenes there. The novelist laid the scene of this next novel in this region and called it "The Spy." When it was written and appeared the author was living in New York. It at once attracted attention, and Cooper found himself a literary lion.



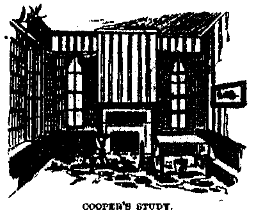
COOPER'S HOME.

The next ten years of Cooper's life were the years of his greatest literary success. During this time the famous "Leather Stocking Tales" appeared, and at once became very popular. They have since usually been read by boys from twelve to sixteen years of age. His books were as much sought in England as in America. His first sea novel, "The Pilot," was suggested by Scott's "Pirate," which appeared about that time. Cooper, who had been a sailor, pronounced it a landsman's work and undertook to produce a novel that would bear evidence of having been written by a seaman. He was successful in "The Pilot," as well as in his other sea stories.

To the present generation the fact that Cooper, from being among the most popular of novelists [illegible] was in many respects a democrat; in others a pronounced aristocrat. He had a grand idea of the future of the young republic, and became its champion abroad; but by his outspoken strictures at home on the crudeness of his countrymen he failed to gain credit for his encomiums elsewhere. He was attacked in the newspapers with such virulence that it drove him to Cooperstown, where he had not lived for sixteen years. There he intended to seek quiescence. But in a few years he was thrown into a wrangle with his fellow townsmen. A part of the Cooper estate had been permitted to be used by the public for so many years that those using it came to regard it as open property. Cooper endeavored to correct this impression. The result was a mass meeting and inflammatory resolutions, but the resolutions were not law, which was on Cooper's side, and the townspeople were eventually obliged to abandon the claim.

This affair made a wide breach between Cooper and those about him, and his old enemies of the press redoubled their attacks. Cooper wrote a story called "Home as Found," founded on this experience with his neighbors. It was not a success in literature and was an unfortunate evidence to be left behind him of the author's state of mind, though fortunately for his fame few now ever read it. Two of its characters were ascribed to Cooper himself, and when he denied that they represented him he was not believed. He was never forgiven by his contemporaries for writing the book, and the newspaper attacks were so violent that the pugnacious author began libel suits against a number of editors. Thurlow Weed, James Watson Webb and Horace Greeley were among the number. The editors laughed at the suits, but Cooper won them, and the damages soon became quite a respectable amount. One by one they gave in and ceased these attacks. Thurlow Weed was the most pertinacious, but after repeated verdicts and costs even he weakened, and in 1842 published a retraction of all he had ever published derogatory to Cooper's character.

Cooper died in 1851, and Otsego Hall was burned a few years later. After that the estate was broken up and passed out of the hands of the family. The novelist was buried in the Episcopal churchyard, near Otsego hall, where he died. There a monument has been erected, which is surmounted by a statue of old "Leatherstocking," so dear to the imagination of the American youth. Six months after Cooper's death a meeting was held in New York in honor of his memory.



COOPER'S STUDY.

It was presided over by Daniel Webster, and addressed by him and by William Cullen Bryant and others. Since then the disputes by which the famous novelist's last days were embittered have gradually died out of the remembrance of his countrymen, and his pictures of what the present civilized portion of America was at the end of the last century only remain.

Suggestions to Jelly Makers.

The most tart fruits will make the firmest jelly, although fruits of all kinds can be used. But in the case of peaches, quinces, apples and crab apples, a little water must be added to them for the first cooking. They are not sufficiently juicy, and would burn before any juice could be obtained. A more laborious method, however, which will avoid adding the water, is to improvise a double boiler by setting the kettle of fruit into a large pan of water, and cook the fruit in this way. It will need stirring frequently, and to be cooked longer than by the first method.

Quinces require a quarter of a pound less sugar to a pint of juice than other fruits, while green grapes, which make a most delicious, spicy jelly to eat with poultry and game, need one and one-half pounds of sugar for the same quantity of juice. Barberries require that their juice and the sugar be boiled together ten minutes before pouring into the glasses.

Bags to strain the juice through are often made of flannel, and are good, but those of coarse yet firm crash are better. In either case two loops of tape should be sewed on each side of the bag, so that a piece of broom, or a mop handle, or the time honored family yard stick, can be run through them and the bag suspended.

A porcelain or granite ware kettle, a wooden spoon, tumblers ready to roll in hot water just before filling, and towels to wipe them quickly, all being at hand, jelly making can begin without delay.—Good Housekeeping.

The New Mail Box.

The new street mail box, which has been adopted by the postmaster general, and which will soon be placed in position in the cities, is as simple as it is effective. Just under the right side of the roof (as shown in the accompanying cut) is a pivoted plate. When mail is to be introduced the handle (i) is pressed down and the plate (c) swings past the flange (k). The curved segment (j) swings out, leaving an opening between its end and the roof through which letters or newspapers can be introduced. The mail then rests on the plate, but when the handle is released, drops into the body of the box. There is a door in the bottom of the box for the postman to unlock when he makes his collecting rounds, and by an ingenious arrangement the large disk shows at what time the collection is made. A glance at the diagram will show that the box affords ample protection against thieves and weather.

One of the pleasantest stories about Rogers is Campbell's defense of his friend. Some one said that Rogers was always speaking evil of his acquaintances. "Is he?" said Campbell. "Borrow five hundred pounds of him, and he will never say anything unkind of you till you try to pay it back." That is good—as good almost as the very different story that the late Mrs. Procter said to Rogers: "Mr. Rogers, I hear you have been attacking me." "Attacking you, my dear lady! Why, I pass my life in defending you."

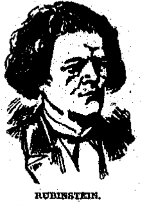
ANTON RUBINSTEIN.

The Famous Pianist Whose Jubilee Year Is Approaching.

Anton Rubinstein's friends are about to celebrate his jubilee—the fiftieth anniversary of his first great success as a pianist. He had appeared before the public occasionally for a year or more before, but his jubilee dates from his success at Paris at the age of 10, and Czar Alexander has lately congratulated him by telegram as the greatest of Russian musicians.

Rubinstein was born Nov. 30, 1830, in an obscure village on the southern border of Russia. He is of pure Israelitish stock, but was reared as a Christian, and at a very early age evinced his wonderful talents. He was first taught the piano by Alexis Villoing at Moscow, and made his first public appearance at the age of 8. He next moved to Paris and received instruction and cordial encouragement from the Abbe Liszt. He afterwards made tours in England, Sweden and Germany, taught in Berlin and became famous as a composer, after which he took up his residence in Russia. In 1869 he resumed his travels, and in 1878 visited the United States.

Rubinstein has at various times produced compositions of almost every class, but is chiefly known by his great operas and oratorios. Among these the most noted are "Dimitri Donskoi," "Lalla Rookh," "Nero," "Paradise Lost," and the sacred drama, "The Maccabees." He is still engaged on what is expected to be his crowning work, the opera of "Ivan Kaldehorikoff." The first production of his "Nero" in the United States, in March, 1887, was a noted event in American musical annals; there was a regular Rubinstein furore and Rubinstein clubs were projected in several cities, some of which have attained considerable fame.



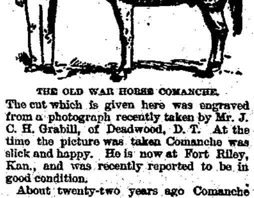
RUBINSTEIN.

The Rubinstein club, of New York city, is composed entirely of ladies, but was organized chiefly by Mr. William R. Chapman. Modern Slavonic composers have produced many pieces suited for female voices exclusively, and so the club appropriately took the name of the greatest of Slavonic composers. At its first public rendition sixty-six ladies took part, the audience, at Chickering hall, being composed only of invited friends of the singers. The opera of "Nero," as rendered by the National Opera company, was more purely professional and excited an enthusiasm which led Americans to consider Rubinstein the greatest of composers in that line and "Nero" as the greatest of his works.

A BRAVE WAR HORSE.

Comanche, a Pensioner, and Sole Survivor of the Custer Massacre.

Probably there is no beast in the United States that leads a life of more perfect bliss than Comanche, the brave war horse and sole survivor of the Custer massacre. He is a pensioner and is fed on the choicest of hay and oats. Lumps of sugar are frequently given him to sweeten his declining years.



THE OLD WAR HORSE COMANCHE.

The cut which is given here was engraved from a photograph recently taken by Mr. J. C. H. Grabill, of Deadwood, D. T. At the time the picture was taken Comanche was slick and happy. He is now at Fort Riley, Kan., and was recently reported to be in good condition.

About twenty-two years ago Comanche entered the government service and was a cavalry horse in Kansas. He was engaged in several bloody fights between the government troops and the Indians, and in one of them he was painfully but not seriously wounded. He went to Nebraska from Kansas, and thence to Dakota.

In the Custer campaign Comanche honorably distinguished himself and carried his master, Capt. Keogh, one of Custer's officers, through many a desperate brush with the Indians. Keogh, who was riding Comanche in the battle of the Little Big Horn, was shot early in the fight and fell from his saddle. A complete ring of savages made it impossible for any of the soldiers or even their horses to escape, but when the former left the field they supposed that horses and men were all dead.

This was true of all but Comanche, who, wounded by many bullets and bleeding profusely, had succeeded in reaching a brook, where he was found some time after by Maj. Reno's men. He was standing in the water, mournfully gazing at the battle ground. His legs were swollen to an enormous size, and his sufferings were so great that, to end his misery, he was ordered to be shot. The orders were recalled, however, and everything was done to save him. He was very kindly treated and his wounds slowly healed.

After his return to Dakota Col. Sturgis, of the Seventh United States cavalry, issued an order that the horse known as Comanche should be a matter of special pride and solicitude on the part of every member of the Seventh cavalry, in order to prolong his life to the utmost limit. Also, that on all occasions of ceremony, Comanche, saddled, bridled, draped in mourning and led by a mounted trooper of Company I, would be paraded with the regiment.

Comanche has many scars on his body, but he does not seem to be suffering. He is very faithfully cared for, and no one is allowed to [illegible]

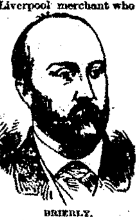
THREE NOTORIOUS MEN.

BRIERLY, FRIEND OF MRS. MAYBRICK, "BLACK BART" AND "JOSH" MANN.

Brierly Is Broken Hearted, and "Black Bart" Holzhay Will Probably Have to Swing; Mann Is the Most Hopeful and Much the Lowest of the Lot.

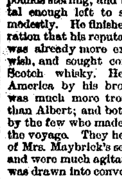
Popular interest in America now centers on three curious fellows, two criminal, the third unfortunate at least, and all unhappy. Albert Brierly, the Liverpool merchant who gained a most unenviable notoriety by his intimacy with Mrs. Maybrick, the alleged murderess, has found it necessary to leave England, and landed a few days ago in Boston. The persistent reporter tackled him before he got off the ship and secured his version of the story. He is described as a fine looking gentleman, ruddy and stalwart, with a most pleasing address; and it is generally conceded that, though immoral, he was not criminal. He expended a large part of his fortune in defense of the wretched woman, and his business was ruined by the notoriety; he therefore comes to America to begin life anew.



BRIERLY.

In his first interview with a journalist Mr. Brierly declared that he paid the costs of Mrs. Maybrick's defense, amounting to 6,500 pounds sterling, and that he had barely capital enough left to start in business very modestly. He finished by an emphatic declaration that his reputation in the newspapers was already more extensive than he could wish, and sought consolation in a glass of Scotch whisky. He was accompanied to America by his brother, F. J. Brierly, who was much more troubled by the notoriety than Albert; and both men were much liked by the few who made their acquaintance on the voyage. They heard of the commutation of Mrs. Maybrick's sentence at Queenstown, and were much agitated by it. Soon after he was drawn into conversation by an American acquaintance and said of the case:

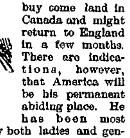
"It was most unfortunate, and the papers have painfully misrepresented me. My relations with Mrs. Maybrick were not nearly so intimate as they make out, and only coninued for a few weeks. I had no great influence with her." He added that he would buy some land in Canada and might return to England in a few months. There are indications, however, that America will be his permanent abiding place. He has been most courteously treated by both ladies and gentlemen, and may rest assured that by a proper demeanor he can start with a clean page to make a new record in the new world.



JOSH MANN.

From the bland, refined and gentlemanly Brierly the reader is asked to turn to a criminal whose manner and appearance so clearly indicate his natural vileness that one can only wonder how any one could be deceived in him. He is the "bad Mann" of the combination lately formed to plunder, perhaps to murder, the Hon. Ray Hamilton, but his exact relation to the other parties is not fully known. If he had not been an abandoned drunkard, unable to keep sober when whisky was within his reach, the plot might have been a success despite the woman's folly. It would seem that they planned to have Hamilton make a will in favor of his supposed wife and child and then murder him.

"Black Bart," whose true name is Reimund or Reinhold Holzhay, is a young German who in six or seven months in the wilds of northern Wisconsin and Michigan has gained a highwayman's fame almost equal to that of Claude Duval. Single-handed he robbed coaches and trains loaded with passengers, "held up" lonely travelers in the woods, fought desperately when attacked and killed when he thought it was necessary. But he was captured at last, and in his own room were found, they say, a hundred or more dime novels. His future is fixed—solitary confinement for life in the Michigan penitentiary, unless the men of the wild region cut his existence short by lynch law.



"BLACK BART" HOLZHAY.

As often happens in such cases there is a dispute as to the inciting causes to his career of crime; but the popular verdict puts them in two words, "dime novels." About a hundred of these extraordinary productions were found in his quarters, and the statistical crank may amuse himself with the reflection that it needed but $10 worth of romance to turn an innocent lad into a villain. The man of any literary taste, however, will insist that such a dose of such stuff would disgust rather than attract, and the philosopher will maintain that unless one is a criminal at heart all the "penny dreadfuls" in the world would not make him a criminal in fact.

More than one expert in crime, from Inspector Byrnes, of New York, to a rural justice of the peace, will tell you that men do not become criminals by reading of criminals; they seek and enjoy such reading because they are already criminal in feeling. If, therefore, you find a boy or a trusted employe unduly fond of "pirate stories" and the "Claude Duval series," watch him!

One encouraging fact must be noted. The "lone highwayman" and the "daring robbers" of the far west are rapidly disappearing. Joaquin Murietta and "Dad Smith," the "James gang" and the Younger brothers have no successors that will at all compare with them. The western robber is now a very prosaic being, and his criminal career is generally short.

Dudes Not Wanted in China.

News from the Celestial kingdom makes it known that a governor of one of the Chinese provinces has forbidden the young men in his province to wear gorgeously colored and embroidered garments, a practice which, he says, is foolish and unmanly, and he gives the warning to fathers, elder brothers and teachers that they will be held responsible for any display of remarkable clothing on the part of would be dudes.—Boston Herald.

When petroleum was first discovered in the United States it was bottled and sold for medicinal purposes under the name of rock oil. Its medicinal properties were lost sight of until they were reintroduced in a semi-solid form as vaseline.

HOW REPULSIVE

Is bad breath, and yet how many otherwise attractive, polite, and particular people afflict their friends with the foul odor of their breath. If there was no remedy for this, it might excite our sympathy, but as there is no need of having a foul breath, it is an unpardonable breach of good manners to obtrude such an offence on good society.

Foul breath arises from disordered digestion which can be corrected by using Sulphur Bitters, and the result will be a pure, sweet breath.

THE great strike in London is ended through the intercession of Cardinal Manning and the Lord Mayor of London. The workingmen resumed work on Monday.

THE question concerning the site for the contemplated great World's Fair, to be held in 1892, is still actively discussed. It will probably be held in the vicinity of New York city, in spite of the great inducements offered elsewhere.

ANOTHER person has gone through the rapids at Niagara. The latest is Walter G. Campbell, a young man from Youngstown, N. Y., who made the trip Sunday. Trips and alleged trips through these rapids are getting to be a weekly occurrence.

THE whereabouts of Gideon P. Brown of the failed wool firm of Brown, Steele & Clark, and treasurer of the Riverside mill, are known perhaps to no one but his counsel and his wife. It is said he will return November 6, when the second meeting of creditors will be held in the insolvency court at Dedham, and that all matters will be adjusted amicably.

THE forced resignation of Pension Commissioner Tanner is not a great surprise to the people. His loose management of the Pension bureau has been such as to warrant his removal. The change in the management of this important office which distributes annually over eighty millions of dollars will be beneficial to the administration and to the nation. Tanner proved that he was not a fit man for the office.

LONDON presents two phenomena; One is the unchecked career of "Jack the Ripper" who has murdered twelve women in the most frightful manner. Does any one believe that the monster could duplicate this unprecedented series of crimes in any American city? The other is the admirable order which the 150,000 strikers have kept. This is an instance of self-restraint amid exasperating circumstances worthy of the attention of the political economist and sociologist.

THE terrible danger connected with Electric light wires was illustrated again in New York last week when an Italian fruit vender met his death by grasping a live wire. He was removing mud from an awning when he slipped and to prevent falling caught hold of a wire. The hand which clutched the wire was burned to the bone and parts of the body that came in contact with the net work of live wires presented a sickening appearance. Death was almost instantaneous.

The following is the crop bulletin for Oswego county from the U. S. Signal Service office at Cornell University: "Corn has matured rapidly during the week, but the crop will be light. On high ground fodder corn is being secured. The potato crop will be small. Tobacco is being secured in good condition. The yield of hops will be light. Buckwheat will yield about three-fourths of a crop. Pastures suffer for want of rain."

Traffic arrangements have been completed between the N. Y. O. & W. R. R. and the Central New England & W. R. R., (the Poughkeepsie Bridge Line), via Campbell Hall. The new territory opened covers all points between Campbell Hall and Hartford, Conn., such as Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Norfolk, Conn., Winsted, Simsbury, and all points formerly reached by the H. & C. W. R. R. The tariff rates between the two companies having been arranged at a very low figure, shippers of lumber, flagging stone, flour, feed, grain, etc., will find it to their advantage to use the new lines to this territory.

Phœnix Fair—Sept. 24th, 25th and 26th 1889.—3,000 in Premiums.

Notwithstanding that the Society were compelled to postpone their Fair for 1888, owning to the continued bad weather, the stockholders of the Phœnix Union Agricultural Society have lost none of their old-time energy, but are making preparations for the largest and best exhibition know to the history of the Society. The success attending the efforts of the stockholders of the Society, generously assisted by the people, for the last two or three years, has placed the Society upon a sound financial basis, and made it a permanent institution. The exhibitions are to be conducted in the future as in the past, in the interest of the people, and in a manner that will best promote the welfare, and raise the standard of Horticulture, Agriculture and the Mechanical Arts. The buildings are large and commodious, and the special attraction of cheese and butter making, cannot but prove novel and interesting. All recognize the fact that the matter of racing, the Phœnix Fair is without a rival, and we assure the public that it will be better than ever before.

Reduced fare on all the railroads. Do not fail to visit the Phœnix Fair.

Saturday was the day and it was reported that there would be a fight over the district delegates as two of our prominent citizens wanted to become the state delegate. Everything went along as smoothly as though it had been greased and it doubtless had. H. E. Nichols called the meeting to order. C. H. David was made chairman and C. R. Nichols and A. Rice, secretaries. On motion of N. N. Stranahan, Ed. Cole was allowed the privilege of naming the county delegates. They are:

POLICE COURT NEWS.

A man named Bert Sheldon was arrested here yesterday forenoon on a receipt of a dispatch from Chief of Police Doyle of Oswego charging him with stealing $45. He had hired a livery horse and driver in Oswego. He had shipped from Montreal for New York and on reaching Oswego stole the money from the captain's pocket and skipped. The money was found on his person. He pleaded guilty when taken back to Oswego and on default of $600 bail was held to await the action of the grand jury.

Officer Alonzo Clark arrested William Brown the other day for being drunk and using abusive language to his wife. He was lodged in jail, and on appearing before the police justice he was represented by Alonzo Edick as a friend and Attorney Geo. S. Dada as counsel. The prisoner, however, contrary to advice of counsel and friend, pleaded guilty to intoxication and was fined $6, which he paid.

A Mrs. Cole living in Scriba came into the village one day last week and sought the advice of Police Justice Sharp in securing her son about 18 years of age who had left home with the horse, buggy and blankets belonging to the farm. An officer was sent to Syracuse to find the boy. He was found there where he had tried to sell horse, buggy and all, and brought back a penitent youth. No warrant was issued so the boy went scot free. Unless the lad's way of business changes, however, he will wind up in state's prison.

Literary Notes from The Century Co.

Prof. George P. Fisher of Yale University, will contribute to The Century during the coming year a series of papers on the Nature and Method of Revelation, in which he will touch upon a number of questions of living interest at the present time, in connection with Christianity and the Bible.

The publishers of the St. Nicholas announce that that popular children's magazine is to be enlarged, beginning with the new volume, which opens with November, 1889, and that a new and clearer type will be adopted. Four important serial stories by four well-known American authors will be given during the coming year.

Mr. Frank R. Stockton has written a new and characteristic story called "The Merry Chanter." It will begin in the November Century and run through four numbers. The story takes its name from a vessel which started from a Massachusetts port on a peculiar cruise. The owners, a young married couple, are on board, and the vessel is commanded and manned by four village captains of unusual experience. Mr. Dana Gibson will illustrate it. The November Century is also to contain a new story by Mark Twain.

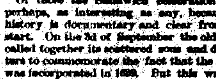
[illegible]

Yearly [illegible] only [illegible] generally celebrated the inauguration of the [illegible] government, and [illegible] celebrated various events in their history, but towns and churches have commemorated anniversaries anywhere from 100 to 250 years from their foundation. In short, Americans of all ranks are powerfully reminded this year that their country is no longer in its youth. In Massachusetts alone three places have just celebrated the 250th anniversary of their beginnings.

Of these the Sandwich celebration was, perhaps, as interesting as any, because its history is documentary and clear from the start. On the 3d of September the old town called together its scattered sons and daughters to commemorate the fact that the place was incorporated in 1639. But this was not the beginning, for the records tell that some time before that "ten men of Saugus sat themselves down in Shawmut" to found homes for themselves and their children, and on the 3d of April, 1637, a grant was made to various parties of lands there, said grant recognizing the fact that there was a "station" there already. So we may say that Sandwich, as a settlement, dates back from 1637 at least, but its foundation as an incorporated place was in 1639. From that day to the present, through all the vicissitudes of French and Indian, Indian, Revolutionary, later British and civil wars, Sandwich has preserved the reputation of a thoroughly patriotic Massachusetts town. Its celebration on the 3d was therefore a truly enthusiastic and American affair.



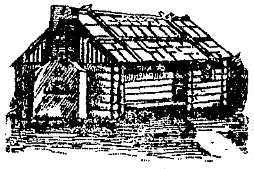
THE OLDEST HOUSE IN SANDWICH.

In the same year, 1639, a grant to Anthony Thacher, John Crowe and Thomas Howes laid the foundation of the present towns of Yarmouth and Dennis. No place in the state or nation, and few if any places in the world, can outrank Yarmouth, Mass., in richness of historic incident. Capt. John Smith visited the coast in 1614, Capt. Hunt kidnaped some of the natives a little later and laid the foundation for much trouble, Miles Standish was "frozen in" there in 1623, Giles Hopkins started a cattle farm there in 1638, and from that date even to the present the place has contributed much to the national wealth of character. The Thacher homestead, erected in 1680, is still standing; but Yarmouth generally is quite modern and one of the prettiest towns in Cape Cod. Bourne celebrated in connection with Sandwich, of which it was once a part. Sudbury and Wayland also celebrated together on the 4th.

The religious centennials, bi-centennials, quarter-millennials and other celebrations during September are very numerous. On the 5th the Congregational church of Stratford, Conn., celebrated its 250th anniversary, and on the 3d of October the town will repeat the commemoration, having been founded at the time the church was established and officially organized but a month later. On the same day a soldiers and sailors' monument will be dedicated there.

But of all the celebrations of the month the one that attracted most attention was that of the noted "Log College of Neshaminy," what is now Hartsville, Bucks county, Pa. It was not only interesting in itself as the anniversary of an important event, but the occasion was honored by the attendance of Elder Benjamin Harrison, Elder John Wanamaker and Elder James A. Beaver, somewhat known as president, postmaster general and governor of Pennsylvania. All these are ruling elders in the Presbyterian denomination and all took some part in the celebration, as did many other eminent men.

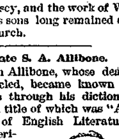
The Presbyterians of Pennsylvania and New Jersey look to the "Log College" as the beginning of their branch of the church. It was built by William Tennent, Sr., in 1735, on what is still called the "Tennent Farm," the building being a mere log hut but eighteen feet wide and twenty feet long. Yet the school set up there turned out many eminent men and formed a powerful center of Presbyterianism. Whitfield was there in 1739, and preached in the open air to 3,000 people. The school there remained in active and influential operation till the establishment of Princeton college, New Jersey, and the work of William Tennent and his sons long remained a noted power in the church.



THE LOG COLLEGE.

The Late S. A. Allibone.

Samuel Austin Allibone, whose death was recently chronicled, became known to the world of letters through his dictionary of authors, the full title of which was "A Critical Dictionary of English Literature and British and American Authors." He was well known in New York city through his connection with the Lenox library, which extended through quite a term of years, beginning in 1879. He was born in Philadelphia April 17, 1816, and in early life followed mercantile pursuits. His business, however, could not prevent him from following his literary bent and he brought out the first volume of his dictionary in 1854, the second and third following in 1871. He also wrote voluminously upon other topics, chiefly biblical. He was a close student of Shakespeare. His knowledge of authors was something incomprehensible.



S. A. ALLIBONE.

"Why, he knows everything about every book, and every edition, and every author, dead or living," exclaimed a lady to whom he had opened the fountains of his knowledge. Dr. Allibone's talk was ripe, rich and racy when turned upon Shakespeariana. He totally repudiated the "cipher" of Ignis-Fatuus Donnelly.

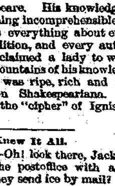
He Knew It All.

Miss Countricoz—Oh! look there, Jack! A man going into the postoffice with a big lump of ice. Do they send ice by mail?

Jack—No, little girl. They use ice to preserve the dead letters. The weather is warm, you know.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

The New Interstate Commissioner.

The appointment of Judge Wheelock G. Veazey to the interstate commissionership is very acceptable to the Republicans of Vermont. A curious fact in regard to this appointment is the circumstance that he has for many years practiced law against Col. Aldace F. Walker, whom he succeeds, and who was appointed by President Cleveland at the instigation of Senator Edmunds. Since then Judge Veazey's abilities have been developed by a service of ten years on the supreme court bench. He is a fine lawyer, a man of excellent executive ability and unlimited capacity for hard work. Judge Veazey was graduated at Dartmouth, served through the war, rising to the rank of colonel, and has since been active in Republican politics and in the Grand Army. Before his appointment to the bench he was for twenty years reporter of the supreme court, and has been prominently mentioned for governor and for the United States senate.



WHEELOCK G. VEAZEY.

A Gents' Hand Sewed [illegible] at Goodjon's for $3.00. [illegible]

The [illegible] not will be accepted. It is believed that a successorship will be offered, as it is said that President Harrison will not countenance his appointment to such an important office as that which Gen. Rosecrans now holds in the Treasury, and which was spoken of as at[illegible] Tanner's refusal should he resign the commissionership of pensions. The candidates for the vacancy that the resignation will make, includes Ex-Pension Agent Poole of New York, Ex-Congressman Brown of Ohio, and of course, Ex-Congressman Thomas of Illinois, who has been a candidate for more offices than any ten other men since March 4. Senator Hiscock was closeted with the President last night urging Poole's appointment.

Telegrams are pouring in to day urging the President not to accept Mr. Tanner's resignation. Scores of these telegrams are from personal friends of Commissioner Tanner among the most influential class of citizens, and the pressure is very great. Still it is believed that the President is so overjoyed to secure the resignation so easily that he will not hesitate or delay accepting it.

The occasion of the resignation was the action of Secretary Noble in summarily ordering Commissioner Tanner's suspension during the investigation of the charges against him. Secretary Noble first requested this on Monday, and on the Corporal's refusal ordered Deputy Commissioner Smith to take charge of the office. Nothing remained for the Commissioner to do but to conquer the Secretary or submit to him. There could be no compromise.

It was given on the word of President Harrison that the resignation was not asked for by him. It is also known that the Tanner's troubles was a subject of a cabinet discussion on Wednesday, and only the strong objection of Secretary Tracy, who fought hard for his friend, prevented action asking the resignation.

The removal of Corporal Tanner was a foregone conclusion two months ago, and as I predicted in these columns at the time, it was only delayed to see what the Grand Army would do in the encampment. In short the tents were hardly folded and the failure of the encampment to pass resolutions endorsing the Corporal to the end telegraphed to Washington, when the resignation was asked for and the President returned in the middle of his vacation to accept it.

Under the circumstances, the acceptance of the resignation will call for some public announcements of the President's reasons. This will be demanded by the Commissioner's thousands of friends among ex-soldiers. The charges against the Corporal are based entirely upon his manifest indiscretion. No reflection upon his personal integrity is whispered. According to his lights, he has sought to do right. The trouble has been that he has a poverty of common sense and a wealth of self-esteem. The re-rating of pensioners employed in the Pension Bureau was endorsed by him without a suspicion of wrong. In many cases his construction of law was erroneous, and he ran his office to a considerable extent without regard for any law, other than that of sentiment.

For a man in trouble, Commissioner Tanner is very unfortunate in not having the friendship of members of Congress. Commissioner Tanner had a long struggle to secure his appointment. The New York delegation was against him, and only a few Congressmen could be induced to go to the White House for him. Strangely enough, when his appointment was made, he entirely forgot these friends and paid no heed to their advice. He thought hard times would never come again. He had one daughter appointed his private secretary and another a clerk in his office, and into the neat little house in Georgetown went three neat salaries every month. He rather enjoyed rows. He told Congressman Flood, "I turned old John Sherman down and I won't stop at turning you down." He thought everything secure. Now in his trouble to whom can he go? Surely not to the men he "turned down." The story of every successful politician is the story of friendship of those above him. He must be indeed a master who succeeds without powerful friends.

The death of "Sunset" Cox is of the nature of a personal bereavement to thousands of people not only here but every where his kindly, genial nature exhibited either by his sunny personality or in his charming books has been felt.

More Gas at Sandy Creek.

The following dispatch from Sandy Creek appeared in the daily papers of Saturday:

"Another big pocket of natural gas has been struck at well No. 2. A plug driven into the pipe was blown hundreds of feet in the air. It is believed that the well will develop into a great gusher. Preparations are being made to light and heat this place and Lacona with the gas."

Cheese Market Report.

(From the Utica Herald.)

AT UTICA.

UTICA, Sept. 16.

While the advance in cheese to-day was only ¼c., the market was firm and dairymen were in no great hurry to dispose of their stock. A year ago sales of cheese were a week later than the year before that, but we are no earlier this year, and it will take another week to market the August make. On an average cheese is now sold off to August 24, with some salesmen just beginning on their Augusts and a few just selling the last of the month. If there had been no advance to-day a good many factorymen would have held back a part of their offerings. Everybody complains of the shrinkage in milk, although it is acknowledged the shrinkage in cheese does not quite correspond therewith, on account of the greater richness of the milk. No further decline in cheese is expected until the September stock is marketed, but a gradual improvement is looked for.

Following is the list of Sales:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
4	400	8c
63	5,600	8¼
1	52	8½
81	2,560	8½
17	1,555	8⅝
21	1,907	8¾
2	125	8⅝
7	700	p. t.
151	12,200
	1,744	Com.
Total.	14,644

Ruling price 8¼c. Transactions one year ago 11,692 boxes, ruling price 8¼c. Two years ago 17,276 boxes.

There were sales of 74 packages creamery butter at 21 @ 22c. Bulk went at 21¼c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Sept. 16.

Cheese.—The market to-day has been fairly active, and prices show an advance nearly one-half cent, although the ruling is but one-fourth cent higher than last week. Salesmen came to the market expecting a handsome advance from last week's rates, and held off until the last minute finally going home quite well satisfied. The shipment is of about the usual quantity, and the feeling is quite general that the market is in a healthy condition, although some apprehension is felt over the fact that a considerable portion of last week's receipts is still held in the city. The home trade is an important factor, and in one or two instances it is reported to have paid 9¼c, on the afternoon market for cheese made especially for it. Following is our usual table:

Lots	Boxes	Price.
53	3,952	8½
43	2,113	8¾
17	1,577	9c
11	720	Com.
129	8,362
Farm dairy	1,551
Total	9,913

Farm Dairies—The sales of farm dairy cheese were at 8 to 9¼c., and a few were sent on commission. The bulk sold at 9 cents. The shipment amounts to 1,551 boxes.

Butter—Thirty packages of farm dairy butter sold at 17 to 18c., and 19 packages of creamery butter at 19 to 20 cents.

AT FULTON.

Twenty-one factories were represented at this market last Monday evening with 5,076 boxes of cheese. All of these sold according to the Secretary's report at 8¼ to 8½ cents.

HOW REPULSIVE

Is bad breath, and yet how many otherwise attractive, polite, and particular people afflict their friends with the foul odor of their breath. If there was no remedy for this, it might excite our sympathy, but as there is no need of having a foul breath, it is an unpardonable breach of good manners to obtrude such an offence on good society.

Foul breath arises from disordered digestion which can be corrected by using Sulphur Bitters, and the result will be a pure, sweet breath.

From the earliest period to the present time.
BY HUBERT HOWE BANCROFT.

One of the most remarkable volumes of History ever written. Of thrilling interest and replete with startling episodes. The true inwardness of Mormonism now for the first time presented.

It is safe to say that now for the first time, by the graphic pen of Mr. Bancroft, the story of Mormonism is fully told. It is every word true, and it is a story beside which the tales of romance become tame. Hitherto the one-half has not been told. Many have asked, but never before has the question been answered. What is Mormonism? Not since the days of Christ or Mahomet have there been such strange developments.

About 1 o'clock Sunday morning a serious stabbing affray occurred at the Boyd house in the village of Mexico, Oswego county. A man named L. Hayes of Little Falls, a guest of the house while playing billiards with the proprietor of the hotel, Capt. Boyd was arrested yesterday, but let out on $1,000 bail.

Ready for Visitors.

We called at D. A. Waterman's new green house yesterday and found that it was stocked with plants and flowers. Of course, it is not completely stocked yet, but Mr. Waterman announced that he will be pleased to have visitors call and see what his preparations are. He has a large assortment of plants, however, at the present time which he can supply to those desiring, and all kinds of flowers will be furnished in their season. Call and look over his new green house at the corner of Fifth and Academy streets. It will be well worth your while.

OUR GREAT FAIR.

Sunshine Takes The Place of Rain—To-day the Opening Day—A Grand and Successful Exhibition in Every Department.

The extremely unpropitious weather yesterday necessitated a postponment of the opening day of the fair until to-day. Many looked glum last night and feared that rain would continue during the whole week, but this morning specks of blue sky indicated that it would clear up and there is now every prospect of fair weather for the week.

THIS MORNING.

THE TIMES representative went over to the grounds this morning and was at once convinced that never before in the history of the association were the prospects better for a most successful exhibition in every department.

THE MAIN BUILDING.

Every available space in the main building is occupied. Carpenters and trimmers were busily engaged all day yesterday and the finishing touch was being given this morning by those in charge of the elegant displays.

Follow us through the main building commencing at the entrance on the east and on the right is C. E. Chappell & Co. with his fine display of Dry Goods and Millinery. Around the corner to the north, M. V. Connell, Boots and Shoes; then the Boston Bazaar in their old stand displaying nearly everything from a tooth pick to an organ. Opposite is the new firm across the river Dixon & Ferris, Clothing and Dry Goods, then comes E. S. Billings, successor to Collins & Billing, Oswego Falls, Boots and Shoes. M. M. Williams, druggist, occupies the prominent corner space next and beyond is the fine line of pianos and organs of A. Bristol while the northwest corner trimmed complete with national emblems is occupied by the Singer Machine Co., C. H. Gardner Agt. Opposite is J. R. Blanchard, the Baldwinsville monument man, followed by Vroman & Baumer, a boot and shoe firm of Syracuse and then comes K. F. Salmon of this village in the same line of business as those next to him. The "Bee Hive" is next occupying the excellent space allotted to Dey Bros. last year. Then comes H. C. Giesler the hustling Cayuga street druggist, opposite him is B. C. Brown, the man that has his store in THE TIMES block and carries the largest line of furniture that was ever carried in Fulton. Then comes Peebles & Co. with a fine line of clothing and furnishing goods fresh from their new double stores on Cayuga street. We than reach Draper at his old stand and we have made the circuit of the lower floor. Every available space is filled you see and do you observe that all are local merchants with two exceptions.

Up stairs we now go and find that the scholars of the Fulton School have about one-third of the whole space filled with about everything that human ingenuity could think of. Then comes the Domestic department filled as it never was before with fancy work of every description. The largest contributors this year are Mrs. Fred McIntyre, Mrs. A. Emerick, Mrs. L. B. Babcock and Miss Emma Connell. This department occupies another third of the space up stairs, and the remaining third is occupied by School Commissioner Baldwin, A. D. Perry, Seedman, Syracuse, the premium seeking pies, cakes, etc. the school children's display of cooking, Samuel Green's confectionery stand and C. P. Pickard with the Perfection Dyes. Lots in the main building isn't there?

POULTRY BUILDING.

Down stairs is George Johnston with his assistants, the man that probably sells more stoves than any one in the county, and opposite to him the new firm of Loomis & Wilson, who are in the same line of business.

Up stairs is an unusual large display and a fine one too of poultry. Tom O'Brien has the largest collection.

FLORAL HALL.

The space is nearly all taken in Floral Hall, but of course all the vegetables and fruit were not in this morning. V. V. Vant, L. B. Babcock and J. C. Hill have the largest displays and occupy all the west half of the hall.

LIVE STOCK.

Hourly additions are being made to the live stock exhibit, and it promises to be enexcelled by the fine exhibits of previous years.

ON THE GROUNDS.

The grounds are covered with tents where nearly everything can be purchased and seen. Bristol has a large tent, but not large enough to hold his immense display of wagons, buggies, carriages, and Collins carts. Sautelle's large tent is pitched, a large merry-go-round, Osborne of Auburn, with farmer's implements, John Gardenier's tent filled with fine blooded cattle, small tents and article exhibits without number.

BALLOON ASCENSIONS.

There will be two ascensions and and parachute jumps—one this afternoon at 2:30. Prof. Allen is here with his balloon and everything is in readiness.

THE PUBLIC MARRIAGE.

The arrangements for this event are complete and it will occur on Friday, at 2:30 in the presence of the assembled multitude.

THE RACES.

These important events will occur on Thursday and Friday. Some very fast horses have entered.

Politics and politicians are very lively just now.

Rev. Mr. Candee of Hamilton again occupied the pulpit at the Congregational church, Sunday last. Rev. Ward T. Sutherland, formerly of Wisconsin, is announced to preach there next Sunday.

Several day hands on the race of the new pulp mill at Lower Oswego Falls struck for 25 cents more a day last Thursday. The amount demanded has been given but a new set of men are at work there.

Extensive advertising is one of the essentials that made the Oswego fair such a success. Beautiful weather was another great advantage. Able management was another. It certainly was a good fair and a successful one in every department.

Street Commisioner Wolever has had no small amount of trouble this summer from owners of cows who have allowed the animals to wander about the streets which is strictly against village ordinances. Friday he found two cows in the park and put them in the pound. He says that he now has his Ebenezer up and will take every cow he finds loose on the streets and the owners will have to pay to get them.

Extract copied from a letter received by Collins & Billings, Sept. 13 dated Santa Barbara Cal.

"The shoes I bought of you when home have been a great satisfaction to me and I want to ask you to send me another pair just like them. The Taylor Adjustable Shoe, I think they are called number, 4 width D. I have a troublesome joint which is very particular and fussy. It usually takes a long time to break a pair of shoes but these I put on and tramped all about San Francisco with ease.

Running races with local competitors is getting to be quite the thing here. There have been a number and more are in prospect. William O'Hare, an employe of Jas Wilcox, and William Seaver, a porter in the Lewis House, as we understand it, have had two races and each has won one. Fred Bache of Brown's furniture store, and Fred Trask, member of Sharp Hose Company, ran over the course made by the hose companies on Review Day and Trask won easily. It is now reported that Trask or some member of Sharp Hose Company is soon to run with "Tip" Clark, Jr. It will be some time before disputes are settled, and it is decided who is the best 100, 200 and 300 yards local sprinter.

History of Utah.

On the 12th of next October will be given to the world what all the world has long been waiting for—not a new religion, nor a new prophet, but what Hurbert Howe Bancroft, in his forthcoming History of Utah, has to say of the many wived religion, and the prophets Joseph Smith, Brigham Young and, their successors. It is in many respects the most thrilling episode in the evolution of the American nation. Among the unlearned and superstitious of New York arises a so-called prophet and seer, who soon counts his followers, by thousands, the multitude not long afterward being obliged, from the enmity of their neighbors, to flee first to Ohio, then to Missouri and Illinois, and finally to the sandy wilds of Utah, where they gather fresh females from Europe, whom they marry early and often, and multiply prodigiously.

A great commonwealth blossoms in the wilderness; a political trinity appears, founded on the combined principles of theocracy, hierarchy, and patriarchy. All goes well until California gold opens a stream of adventurers through their sacred gardens, to the serious disturnance of practical husbands and spiritual wives. The railroad inflicts another stab, while the gentiles swear that this thing shall not be.

We await with deep interest in common with thousands of others, the appearance of this volume.

Young Men's Christian Association.

Our platform, "The Young Men's Christian Associations seek to unite those young men, who, regarding Jesus Christ as their God and Savior, according to the Holy Scriptures, desire to be His disciples in their doctrines and in their life, and to associate their efforts for the extension of His kingdom among men." The general objects of the work are:

1. Prevention. To guard young men morally by keeping them away from places of evil resort through counter attractions; surrounding them with wholesome associations, and bringing them under positive religious influences.

2. Rescue. To extend a helping hand to the fallen, to lead unsaved young men to Christ and into a life of christian activity.

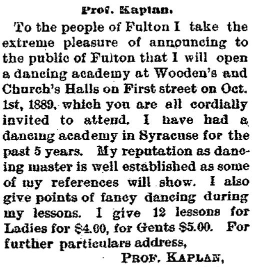
3. Education. To accomplish the culture and building up of young men, spiritually, intellectually, socially and physically. We feel that our field is a large and very important one and that only under the power of God and with the prayers and hearty support of christian friends, can we hope for a measure of success. Many have been the assurances of help already given, and still we plead that all who love our Lord will unitedly strengthen our hearts and hands, and come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty.

Our meeting last Sunday was addressed by Rev. J. C. Breaker, who very earnestly and pointedly enforced upon the young men present the necessity of looking to Jesus Christ. Many afterwards took part which made the meeting very interesting and profitable to all.

We wish to return thanks to the kind friend who furnished those beautiful flowers for the meeting. Many of the young men spoke flatteringly of the taste displayed in arranging and choosing them, and we hope that her garden may long continue to bring forth such lovely flowers. We like to be remembered thusly.

Young men's meeting as usual next Sunday. Come and bring a friend.

If there is a young man sick in town will some friend please inform us that we may visit any such afflicted. ⁂



Charles Bowser's New "Check"

Manager W. C. Stephens has secured one of Gustave Frohman's best comedy attractions in well known popular comedian, Mr. Charles Bowser who comes to the opera house, Wednesday evening, September 25th in Fred Marsden's rollicking, laughing comedy success "Cheek." The play is brim full of fun and frolic. Special scenery is used. A strong company supports Mr. Bowser and a highly pleasing entertainment is assured. The New York Dramatic News speaking of Mr. Bowser and "Cheek" says:

"Charles Bowser in "Cheek" has been the attraction all this week at Sans Souci Garden, and a very cheerful attraction he has been for Manager White, as the dusty sign "standing room only" has been displayed in front of the theatre on several occasions. The reconstructed "Cheek" is an undoubted success, and Mr. Bowser has made the hit of his life. His rendering of Richard Smythe is as breezy as a fresh gale from an open sea. It is one of the very best pieces of eccentric character acting that has been seen in Providence in many seasons. It is a distinct character in its way as was Raymond's "Sellers" or Florence's "Bardwell Slote," bright, breezy witty, humorous and cheeky. Manager Calder is to be congratulated on having secured so promising a star.—New York Dramatic News.

THE FULTON TIMES
Wednesday Sept. 18, 1889.

WORTH KNOWING.

Progressive farmers are generally agreed on the superiority of drilling in grain seeds over sowing broadcast.

This year's wheat crop in Minneso will be the largest ever produced. It may reach 50,000,000 bu.

Advices from the rice fields agree in saying that the harvest this year will be immense, and the grain the finest made in years.

The question as to early or late sowing of grain has never been settled, although the majority of farmers sow early.

Last season Liverpool bought 700,000 barrels of American apples and London took 350,000 barrels. They will not have a like opportunity this year.

For the first time since 1859, Georgia has made corn enough this season to supply her own wants, and she will have besides a surplus of a million bushels for sale.

The National Horse Breeder asserts that corn is the bane of the farm horse, as it is also of the horse doing any other sort of work, not because of not being sufficiently nutritious, but because it makes too much fat and not enough muscle.

Young hogs will do no damage in the orchard, and will pick up all the wormy apples and keep the clover from killing out and the weeds from taking possession of the orchard.

Mr. Pearson is reported as stating that bagging grapes for market does not pay him. The bags will preserve the grapes, but they render the skin so tender that they will hardly bear handling. They are adapted to family use only.

Continuous Winter stabling for cows is now advocated by some of our most successful dairymen. John Gould, of Ohio, says, in the American Agriculturist: "To me it is far nearer an ideal way of wintering cows than to turn them out into stormy or zero weather to make them hardy. It does not pay to attempt to warm barnyards with cows or to use hay and grain to warm ice water inside of a cow's hide."

Rotation of Crops.

The principles of rotation have been laid down as follows.

1. Every plant exhausts the soil, when carried off from it.

2. But all plants do not exhaust the soil equally, nor do different plants exhaust the soil in the same manner.

3. Even when fed out on the farm, all plants do not restore the soil the same quantity nor the same quality of manure.

4. All crops are not equally favorable to the growth of weeds, the nourishment of fungi or insects or to the health of the land.

A study of these practical rules makes plain the fact that rotation is not needed under some circumstances, while in others it is a necessity for profitable cultivation. In some cases, as with asparagus, onions, carrots, &c., farmers will find it to their interest cultivate these on the same land year after year, manuring the soil, of course, freely with such plant food as best suits the crop. Again, in very rich land, there is often little or no need of rotation.

On the other hand many plants succeed best on new land, and are liable to degenerate if continously cultivated on the same soil. Strawberries are a well-know instance of this. Then again different plants differ widely as to their power of drawing food from one and the same soil. Rye and buckwheat, for instance, can be grown with fair profit when other crops would starve.

And yet again by long continued cultivation of any one crop, comes about a peculiar condition of the soil, of which "clover-silk" land is an illustgation. In deciding upon a rotation of crops, therefore, it behooves the farmer to consider well, not only the the chemical constituents of his soil and the manures to be employed, but the peculiarities and habits of growth of the various crops to be grown.

The Curfew Tolls in Albany.

There is a custom in Albany which has been maintain for 200 years, which, I presume, isn't known in any other city of its size in the Union. The curfew tolls promptly, and to the eighth of a second, at 9 each night. The city hall tower has a deep sounding bell, connected by electric wire with Dudley observatory, and it strikes a stroke at 9 o'clock, night and morning. All the private clocks and watches are set by it, and it is a curious notion to the theatrical companies that visit there to see nearly everybody in the audience pull out his or her watch at apparently a preconcerted moment and look at it. The effect is novel. It nearly upset John McCullough and Mary Anderson when they played here together some years ago. McCullough had just seen the air drawn dagger, and he thought the audience were all going to ring the chestnut bells on him. —New York Star.

OF INTEREST TO CHEESE MAKERS.

Rules Laid Down by Professor Robertson for Guidance.

Thorough distribution of the rennet in the milk must be effected by diluting the rennet extract and by vigorous stirring. Sufficient rennet to coagulate the curd into a state fit for cutting in from thirty to forty minutes at from 86 to 90 degs. should be used. When an extra quantity of rennet is used, a corresponding increase in the weight of salt should be added to the curd.

The contents of the vat should be perfectly still when coagulation commences. Vibration of the floor and of the vat during the thickening of the milk causes waste. The horizontal knife should be used first in the cutting, and active stirring should not commence until the cubes of curd become slightly healed. The temperature should be raised gradually to 96 or 98 degs. Fahr. The stirring should be continued until the curd particles are so well "cooked" or "dried" that when a handful has been pressed for a few moments they will fall apart again as the result of any slight disturbance.

As soon as the presence of acid is discernable by the hot iron test the whey should be removed. In the case of gassy curds, a further development of acid before the drawing of the whey will be beneficial.

Hand stirring will be of advantage until the curd is firm.

The temperature should be maintained at or above 94 degs.

The curd should be allowed to mat into one mass.

It should be turned so frequently that whey will not collect or stand in small pools in or on it.

If it becomes gassy it should be aired (if need be by grinding and stirring) and afterwards kept at a temperature above 94 degrs.

Aeration should be effected by stirring before the addition of salt. Usually fifteen minutes of such treatment will suffice. Salt should be added at the rate of from two and a half to two and three-quarters pounds per 1,000 pounds of milk, according to the dry or wet condition of the curd. A judicious variation in the quantity of salt should be made, in proportion to the moist or dry state of each curd.

The "hooping" of the curd should begin when the harsh surface produced on each piece of curd by the salt commences to give place to a slippery, mellow quality.

Shoulders or projecting edges on cheese are unsightly evidences of careless workmanship, and lessen their value. Careful pressing and bandaging and the turning of the cheese in the hoops in the morning will prevent their formation. The pressure should be continued for at least twenty hours. In that way the cheese can be finished, having an attractive, neat, symmetrical and stylish appearance.

Bright's Disease.
A Ten-Year-Old Child Saved After the Failure of Four Physicians.
My little girl, ten years of age, was taken sick in March, 1886, with scarlet fever. When recovering she took a severe cold, which developed Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. Her ankles, feet and eyes were terribly swollen; she had a burning fever, and all the symptoms of an aggravated case of Bright's Disease. Four of our best physicians attended her, but without success, and
Her Life was Despaired of.
But a mother's love and prayers surmount all difficulties, and I determined to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y. This was a last resort, and I hoped, although my little daughter's case was a very severe one, that the Favorite Remedy would do for her what it had done for others whose condition had not been, seemingly, as hopeless. How happy I am that I determined upon this course—for an improvement was at once perceptible. The fever left her—her appetite improved—she gained six pounds in a short time, and one by one the well known and dreaded symptoms of the disease left her. Words fail to express my gratitude, and I cannot too earnestly recommend the Favorite Remedy. It was A MARVELOUS RECOVERY,
and is due entirely to the Favorite Remedy, which was the only medicine taken after her case was abandoned by the physicians.
Mrs. Laura A. Kempton, West Rutland, Vermont.
The diseases that follow Scarlet Fever, Measles, Diphtheria and various other complaints often leave behind them sequelae of the most dangerous character. To expel all traces of such disorders, tone up the various organs, and fill the veins with pure and nutritious blood, use Dr. David Kennedy's

The Way Burdette Put It.

Just now all the enemies of prohibition are crying out that "prohibition is a failure." But you never heard a Prohibitionist say that. It's the fellows that want it to fail who raise that cry. Go slow about joining that cry my boy.

Believe in success; it is a better watchword, has a clear ring to it, and a man looks and feels and is prouder and nobler, fighting for success, than when he is struggling in the name of failure. Don't defend; attack. Don't stop to explain and apologize for the faults of your cause; maintain and enforce its virtues.

"You haven't taught me any of the barries," said an old soldier to an old Prussian fencing master. "Don't need 'em," growled the old mustache; "you cut; let the other fellow barry." That man didn't believe in failure."—Robert J. Burdette.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., Feb. 18, 1888.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.
Gentlemen:—I have used your Kendall's Spavin Cure for Corns and Scratches and I can say I never saw its equal. I have cured some of the worst cases of Corns that a horse could be subject to. I have been having such good success with your liniment that I would almost as soon a horse would have Corns as not. I have recommended it to several with like success. I had a large Pacer with a white hoof forward and had Corns in both quarters as large as fifty-cent pieces. I cured him in three weeks, so when I sold him to an expert horseman he never knew the horse ever had a Corn. I will give $100.00 for the worst case of Corns that I can't cure with your Kendall's Spavin Cure.
Respectfully yours, PETER MALONEY.

He Never Knowed.

Old Billy B. was a pious man,
And heaven was his goal;
For being a very saving man,
Of course he'd save his soul
But even in this he used to say:
"One can't too careful be,"
And he sang with a fervor unassumed,
"I am glad salvation's free.

But the "means of grace," he had to own.
Required good hard, gold;
And he took ten pews as well became
The richest of the fold
"He's a noble man" the preacher cried,
Our Christian Brother B."
And Billy smiled as he sublet nine,
And got his own pew free!

In class-meeting next old Billy told
How heaven had gracious been,
Yes, even back in the dark days when
He was a man of sin.
"I's building a barn on my river farm—
All I then had" he said;
"I'd run out of boards, and was feedin' hands
On nothing but corn bread.

"I tell ye brethin, that I felt blue,
Short of timber and cash,
And thought I'd die when the banks then bust,
And flooded all my mash.
But the Lord was merciful to me,
And sent right through the rift,
The tide had made in the river banks
A lumber raft adrift.

"Plenty of boards was there for the barn,
And on top was a cheese,
And a barrel of pork as sound and sweet
As anyone ever sees
Then I had bread and meat for the men,
And they worked with a will,
While I thanked God who'd been good to me
And I'm a-doin' it still."

A shrill-voiced sister cried "Bless the Lord!"
The whole class cried "Amen!"
But a keeneyed man looked at Billy B
In thoughtful way, and then
Asked Brother B., did you ever hear
Who lost that raft and load?"
And Billy wiped his eyes and said:
"Brethren, I never knowed!"

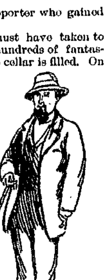
A PENNSYLVANIA PAGAN.

He Lives in Reading and Has a Cellar Full of Idols.

The only known maker and worshiper of idols in the United States lives at Reading, Pa. His name is William Christopher Clemmer and he is a bricklayer by trade. Ten years ago he became a contractor long enough to lose more than he possessed, and his reverses affected his mind. After a year or two he apparently recovered, but developed such strong heretical tendencies that he was dropped by the Catholic church. He is an object of curiosity and almost awe to many of his townspeople from the fact that he is known to have a cellar full of clay idols, which he made himself and which he devoutly worships.

A New York World reporter who gained access to this cellar says:

Months and months it must have taken to model and decorate the hundreds of fantastic images with which the cellar is filled. On the floor, on shelves, swinging from the joists and hanging to the walls are burnt clay objects of all sizes and shapes. From the ceiling swings a gigantic arm and hand, stained flesh color. Rude images of hands and feet are scattered all about, and what is most remarkable is that every rude human image, whether complete or representing detached members, bears the strongest likeness to the earliest specimens of Egyptian plaster art. Look at the large idol in the cut. Might he not have been taken out of the ruins of some ancient city of the Nile? And it is the same with the hands and feet.



W. C. CLEMMER.

Even the clay implements, natural size, hanging against the wall are a mixture of Egyptian, Aztec and Mound Builder. The only evidence the sanctuary affords that the idol maker is not wholly a pagan is the presence of a number of rosaries of different sized balls of clay and spools strung on a wire. Builders who have recently employed Clemmer say that he has to be closely watched at his work to prevent outer courses of red pressed brick being alternated with rows of tin cans, old shoes, bottles and the like.

The idol maker and worshiper was induced with some difficulty to make some explanation. He refused to admit that any of the deities had special attributes or that he prayed to them.

"But what are they for?"

"They are holy people."

"Who is this?"—apparently a squabby image of Queen Victoria.

"That is the Virgin Mary."

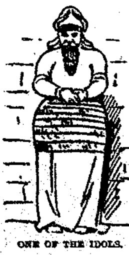
"And this?"

"My good friend, Joe Stickler."

"And this big one?"

"Oh, he is just a holy one."

The hands and feet, he explained, were those of his friends. The irregular objects were materializations of his wildest schemes for making money. One was something that would enable engineers to run their trains safely, and another, with a piece of Dutch china baked into one side of it, was used for telegraphing. Then the man drifted into a string of complaints that the railroad company and the county had not paid him for his discoveries. He must have money to build his temple on the mountain top. "A temple for these idols where people can go and worship them?" This question seemed to strike the keynote of the man's desires. His face lighted up with enthusiasm and he broke into a rhapsody over his coming temple on the mount.



ONE OF THE IDOLS.

"The mountain is hollow. These holy people will sit in the temple and say what is in the mountain—silver, gold, diamonds—and everybody be happy. Up by the Crystal cave I make my temple. But there is no money—no money."

Crystal cave is a cavern in the mountain a few miles distant, brilliant with calcareous incrustations. Near this the pagan would build his temple.

"How many images have you here?"

"More than six horses could haul in a wagon."

"How long did it take you to make them?"

"More than three years."

"Will you sell one of them?"

"No, not not so much as even these." And he took two pieces of burnt clay from his inner vest pocket. They were colored blue, with one end of each dipped in red.

"What are they?"

The answer was in a half whisper:

"This the finger and this the toe of my friend."

A plain gold ring was found by a Washington (N. C.) man imbedded in a large block of ice.

A West Virginian trained a tiny stream of water to fall drop by drop on a rock, and in five years it has worn a hole seven inches deep in solid stone.

SAMUEL SULLIVAN COX.

AN EXTREMELY VARIED AND FAIRLY SUCCESSFUL CAREER.

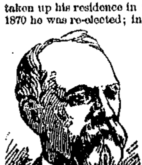
He Was Only Incidentally a Humorist, but Always a Practical and Hard Working Legislator—A Quarter of a Century in Congress—1857 to 1889.

Now that Congressman Samuel Sullivan Cox has passed to his eternal rest, the American public fully realizes the good work he did. He was a humorist, it is true; but he was far more. He was virtually the creator of the life saving service on the coasts, and secured the enactment of the desired laws by congress; he devised and systematized the best practicable system of taking the census; he drafted and had passed several laws of great value to New York city, and during the civil war he was conspicuous among the very few men who opposed the general policy of the administration, and yet was never for one moment misunderstood or accused of faltering in devotion to the Union and constitution. His own statement of his position in those exciting times has been accepted by men of all parties. It was given in his "Eight Years in Congress," in 1865, and ran as follows:

"I represented you truly when I warned and worked from 1856 to 1860 against the passionate zealotry of north and south. I supported every measure which was constitutional to suppress the rebellion. At the same time I have fully challenged the conduct of the administration in the use of the means committed to it by a devoted people. Believing that a proper use of such means would bring peace and union, and believing in no peace as permanent unless it were wedded to the Union in love and contentment, I have omitted no opportunity to forward these objects. This I have done in spite of threats and violence. For doing it your confidence has not been diminished, but increased."

It may be added that though many believe he erred in many of his votes, all concede his honesty and patriotism. He was, indeed, of patriotic ancestry on both sides. His paternal grandfather entered Washington's army as a captain and rose to the rank of brigadier general, and his father was one of the pioneer settlers and statesmen of Ohio, while his mother was of the Sullivan family of Revolutionary times. Of Irish descent, Samuel Sullivan Cox was born at Zanesville, O., Sept. 30, 1824. He graduated at Brown university in 1846, worked long and earnestly as editor and contributor to a local paper, spent a year in Peru as secretary of legation, traveled in Europe, wrote "The Buckeye Abroad," and did many other good things before reaching the age of 33, at which age, in 1856, he was elected to congress.

Three times re-elected, he served continuously eight years; then, having missed two terms, he re-entered congress, this time from the Ninth district of New York. He had taken up his residence in the city in 1866. In 1870 he was re-elected; in 1872 he was beaten for congressman at large. The next election he came in again, and was re-elected again and again till his years of service lacked but little of a quarter of a century. Of his return to congress Hon. James G. Blaine in his history says:



SAMUEL SULLIVAN COX.

"It was not possible for Mr. Cox to keep out of the political field. His talent for the stump, his ready wit, and above all his good nature and good sense, commended him to the New York Democrats. He has been a model of industry. In all the pressure of congressional life, to the duties of which he has given assiduous attention, he has devoted much time to literature and has published several original and entertaining books."

The first of these books, "The Buckeye Abroad," has often returned to plague the author. In its pages he expressed without reserve and with all the fervor of youth his immature ideas on Catholicism, Ireland, foreign trade and many other subjects, on which, it is scarcely necessary to add, his opinion was changed by longer observation. Nevertheless these were his expressions in type, and they have many times been quoted, both in congress and the campaign press.

The work which Mr. Cox did in congress was of the most practical nature. He was always the friend of the letter carriers, and he not only secured them better pay, introduced a bill which gave them vacations, but he worked hard and long to lessen their hours of labor, in which effort he was successful. His law for the inspection of foreign vessels has done much to lessen the dangers of the sea, and the bill he introduced for the protection of immigrants put an end to many scandalous abuses.

A number of resolutions about the protection and release of American citizens abroad, including the vindication of German, Irish and Hebrew citizenship and religious toleration, fill his honorable record. Mr. Cox tried twice to pass a bill for the protection of commercial travelers, which was both times defeated in the senate. For many years he was regent of the Smithsonian institution. He moved to take the Thurman bill forfeiting lands given to the Pacific railroads from the table and passed it in the house after one day's debate. He made the only speech against the back pay bill and returned the money paid to him.

Mr. Cox served as a member of the committee of foreign affairs, for which he was eminently qualified by his experience in diplomacy, his extensive travels in foreign lands and his close study and research. His mind was retentive and vigorous. When in 1883 he was a candidate for speaker of the house of representatives it was asserted that no other man was better adapted for the position than Mr. Cox, because of his perfect familiarity with the rules and practice of the house. As speaker pro tem. he proved himself an excellent parliamentarian, bearing himself with dignity and a measure of force little to be expected from so slight a form.

Every Congressman regretted that Mr. Cox was to leave Washington for Constantinople. He had been so long in the house that they could not bear the idea of parting with him. He was appointed in March, 1885, and soon after he took his departure from New York for the scene of his new labors in the East. The sultan gave him a most cordial reception, and it is certain that he made a most favorable impression upon the Turkish court. He cleared up many diplomatic tangles, and the relations of the United States and Turkey were never more friendly. At length Mr. Cox wearied of the Orient, resigned, came home and easily resumed his place in congress. "I yearned for the society of you gentlemen," he said in one of his speeches after his return, and the good natured laugh which followed showed that the yearning was mutual. His greatest success was to come. Almost alone he extracted his party from an absurd position in regard to the admission of the new states, and won so many friends that his tour through Montana, Washington and the Dakotas was a continued ovation.

From December, 1857, to March, 1889, save about six years, he was continuously in congress, and only Judge Kelley and Sam Randall, of Pennsylvania, outranked him in continuous service. His nickname of "Sunset Cox" may have been given in consequence of his initials, "S. S.," but its first application was soon after the publication in his paper, The Statesman, of Columbus, O., May 19, 1853, of a sophomorical description of a sunset, beginning as follows:

A GREAT OLD SUNSET.

What a [illegible] sunset was that of last night! How [illegible] the clouds, and how splendid the setting of the sun! We do not remember ever to have seen the like on our round globe. The scene opened in the west, with a whole horizon full of a golden interpenetrating luster, which colored the foliage and brightened every object in its own rich dyes. The colors grew deeper and richer, until the golden luster was transformed into a storm cloud, full of finest lightning, which leaped in dazzling zigzags all round and over the city. The wind arose with fury, the slender shrubs and giant trees made obeisance to its majesty. Some even snapped before its force. The strawberry beds and grass plots "turned up their whites" to see Zephyrus march by.

As the rain came, and the pools formed, and the gutters hurried away, thunder roared grandly, and the fire bells caught the excitement and rung with hearty chorus. The south and east received the copious showers, and the west all at once brightened up in a long, polished belt of azure, worthy of a Sicilian sky. Presently a cloud appeared in the azure belt, in the form of a castellated city. It became more vivid, revealing strange forms of peerless fanes and alabaster temples, and glories rare and grand in this mundane sphere. It reminds us of Wordsworth's splendid verse in his "Excursion:"

> The appearance instantaneously disclosed
> Was of a mighty city, boldly say
> A wilderness of buildings, sinking far
> And self withdrawn into a wondrous depth,
> Far sinking into splendor without end!

Mr. Cox's first speech in congress attracted much attention, and his address late in 1869, when he described a brother congressman as flying from the field of Bull Run hanging to the tail of a stampeded steer, "like Anchises borne from burning Troy on the shoulders of Æneas," made a nation laugh in spite of its sorrow. In this same speech he summed up the Missouri controversy of the time in such an admirable and humorous style that it was at once accepted as correct by the public. This was the speech in which he told how Fremont's greatness "was blasted by the consuming torrent of 'Blair's Rhetoric'"—that being the title of a popular school book of the time. One of his last speeches was on the fisheries and fish commission, in which he said:

> Mr. Speaker, there never was an interest in this country so cared for by the government as this of fish. Our first efforts, at least in New England, began with fish. When our ancestors—I refer to New England, where I was educated—when our ancestors went to King James for a charter to go across the seas and colonize Massachusetts, the king asked the Puritans:
> "What is your object? What do you intend?"
> Their answer was: "To worship God and catch fish!" [Laughter.]
> Then the king rejoined: "I give you the charter. Fore God! It is the apostles' own calling!" [Renewed laughter.]
> Why, sir, even in the early churches of New England the early and pious Puritans used to sing:
> Ye monsters of the bubbling deep,
> Your Maker's name upraise;
> Up from the sands, ye codlings, peep,
> And wag your tails always.
> [Laughter and applause.]
> So that in early New England the cure and care of fish was concomitant with commerce, liberty and sanctity. In later times New England has obtained congressional enactments giving free salt for her fish, while the miserable man in Chicago cannot get free salt for his pork. [Laughter.] Congress has always had a kindly word for the fishermen. For many decades it gave bounties at so much per cod. These fishermen have not become less tenacious of their rights since the bounty ceased. They are a power in numbers and influence. They number a million or more of men constantly engaged in their hardy and hazardous occupation. Their calling is associated at the present time with some curious wriggling in diplomacy. [Laughter.] But wherever they are, and wherever they adventure, they should be cared for by the fostering arm of the government.
> The main object of this bill, sir, is not to assist the fishermen so much as the consumers of fish. It would send out the seed broadcast that food harvests may grow in all the waters of this land. I trust there will be nothing done here to impair the usefulness of this bureau. I trust, as this bill takes no money out of the treasury, that no further objection will be made to its passage; that the president may be able to select a good, practical man of science and energy, whether he be a Democrat or not, to occupy and honor the position. I am not sure but that there may be found some good, scientific Democrat in this country to administer this office. [Laughter.] All the sciences cannot be monopolized by the Republican party. There may be a Democrat discovered with the qualities of a good, scientific fisherman. The president will find him. The president himself is somewhat of an expert in that line. [Laughter.]

The last letter written by Mr. Cox referred to an engagement to lecture on the Yellowstone country before the Steckler association of New York city; it was to Julius Harburger, president of the association, and ran thus:

> NEW YORK, Sept. 6, 1889.
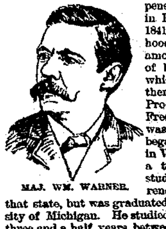
> DEAR FRIEND—After your work is done to-night come around to my house and see me. I am down sick with a malarial fever, and have been since we fixed our lecture. I have tried and medicated, etc., in hope to be well for the 10th inst. Perhaps I may fail. Come and let me talk it over. It will be a great disappointment to me if I can't get up in time. Yours, S. S. COX.

Four evenings later, at 8:30 p. m., the very time he should have been before the club, he breathed his last. The immediate cause of his death was peritonitis. His wife, who survives him, was Miss Beecher, of Muskingum, O., an heiress and a very intellectual woman. They had no children.

Maj. William Warner.

William Warner, who is spoken of as successor to Corporal Tanner, commissioner of pensions, was born in Kansas City in 1841. His childhood was not spent among the scenes of border warfare which took place there between the Pro-Slavery and Free Soil parties. He was brought up and began his education in Wisconsin. For a time he was a student in the Lawrence university of that state, but was graduated at the University of Michigan. He studied law, but spent three and a half years between '61 and '65 in the Union army as a soldier in the Thirty-third and Forty-fourth Wisconsin Volunteer infantry.



MAJ. WM. WARNER.

After serving with sufficient distinction to come out of the war a major, in the spring of 1867 he was elected city attorney of Kansas City, and four years later was chosen mayor of that place, and presidential elector on the Grant ticket in 1872. Seven years ago he was appointed state attorney for the western district of Missouri. Maj. Warner went to the Forty-ninth congress from Missouri as a Republican. He was re-elected. In the fall of 1888 he was elected commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Erlemeyer says that children born of women addicted to the morphine habit are practically morphine eaters from birth.

The London Strike.

The current number of The Pall Mall Budget contains much matter and a number of cuts pertinent to the big dock laborers' strike, which has been the subject of so many dispatches and has caused great derangement to the trade of the world's metropolis. A picture of one of the processions of strikers is reproduced. The details of the movement are well known the world over.

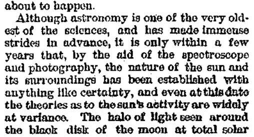
TOTAL SOLAR ECLIPSES.

TWO OBSCURATIONS OF THE SUN IN THE YEAR 1889.

Two in One Year for the First Time Since 1712 and the Last Time Before 2057—They Give Occasion to Learn the Nature of the Sun.

This year began with a total eclipse, and just before its close, on Dec. 21, there will be another similar phenomenon. Two total eclipses in one calendar year very seldom occur, as may be concluded from the fact of the last one being about twenty years before the birth of Washington, and that the one following that to which this article refers will not take place until the year 2057. Very frequently two successive total eclipses will occur within a period of twelve months, although not in the same year, so that it is hardly a matter of astronomical significance. The importance of a solar eclipse lies in the fact of its affording the only chance ever afforded to see the solar corona; and as there are only sixty or seventy of them in a century, but a limited opportunity is afforded for discovering the mysteries of the sun's surroundings. Observations on the intensity and character of the light of the corona are also valuable for the advancement of astronomical science, so that it is necessary that every possible eclipse should be observed. The results of observations during the last eclipse have caused a decided modification of former views as to the constitution of the envelopes which encircle the sun, and these new hypotheses must in their turn be subjected to the test of additional observation. It will be four years before another total eclipse occurs, which makes one more reason for taking advantage of what is about to happen.



PATH OF THE ECLIPSE OF DEC. 21.

Although astronomy is one of the very oldest of the sciences, and has made immense strides in advance, it is only within a few years that, by the aid of the spectroscope and photography, the nature of the sun and its surroundings has been established with anything like certainty, and even at this date the theories as to the sun's activity are widely at variance. The halo of light seen around the black disk of the moon at total solar eclipse was, until about twenty years ago, thought to be due either to the effect produced by our own atmosphere or by the moon's atmosphere. Now astronomers are convinced that this corona is part of the sun itself, and that to it scientists must look for the disclosing of the mysteries connected with the sun's light and heat.

Recent observations of eclipses have made it quite certain that the sun as ordinarily visible to us, bounded by the photosphere, is only a part of the sun. Just outside the photosphere is a comparatively thin layer of gas, mainly hydrogen, called the chromosphere; around this is the corona, thousands of miles thick, and around the corona there is a considerable extension of matter, about which very little has been definitely determined. The general theory that has been built up from a knowledge of these facts, and from the observations of such phenomena as sun spots and prominences, is that the chemical elements are being continuously tossed about in the enormous atmosphere of the sun, and never getting out of it. The outer layers of this atmosphere are recognized as much cooler than the inner. Cool masses of matter are produced by condensation, and, having gathered weight, come under the influence of a gravitation over twenty-five times as powerful as our own, and fall with almost incredible rapidity toward the center, and it is supposed that these terrific rains of cooled matter produce what are called sun spots.

Astronomical computers have for ages been able to determine the motions of the sun, moon, earth and stars with sufficient accuracy to not only say when the various phenomena will take place, but to give the exact location best suited for observation. In this eclipse the path of totality begins about half way between the island of Hayti and the northern coast of South America, extends in a southeasterly direction, touching the South American coast here and there, until it reaches a point in the South Atlantic ocean almost midway between the islands of Ascension and St. Helena, when it bends to the northeast, passing over the island of San Paul de Loando, and so continues across Africa, ending in 5 degs. north latitude and about 49 degs. east longitude. The eclipse is caused, as is well known, by the shadow of the moon sweeping over the earth, the sun being either wholly or partially obscured on that part of the earth where the shadow falls.

The total eclipse is visible only to a very small portion of the earth's surface, because the distance of the moon changes so little from us that the earth can never be far from the vortex of the moon's shadow as cast by the sun. As the moon moves around the earth from west to east, its shadow moves in the same direction, and the diameter of the shadow at the surface of the earth ranges from zero to 150 miles. It therefore sweeps along a belt of the earth's surface of that breadth, in the same direction in which the earth is rotating, with a velocity of 1,900 to 2,100 miles per hour. It may be inferred from this that a partial eclipse is visible over a much greater portion of the earth's surface than the total eclipse, to observe which the observer must station himself beforehand at some point of the earth's surface over which the shadow passes.

The point selected in this case as being most favorable for the necessary observations is the town of Muxima, on the Quanza river, in Africa. The scientists will land at the island of San Paul de Loando, which is between two and three hundred miles from the mouth of the Quanza, and will from there go about [illegible] miles up the [illegible].

The last session of congress appropriated $5,000 to defray the expense of an expedition of scientists to be sent under the auspices of the secretary of the navy to observe the total eclipse, and at a conference held in Washington it was decided to divide the expedition into two parties, one under the direction of Professor Todd, of Amherst, already famous for having conducted a similar expedition to Japan two years ago, the other party to be under the direction of Mr. Joseph Russell, of Washington, who is an expert in solar photography, and will be intrusted with the duty of obtaining photographs of the eclipse in its various phases.

Mr. Russell has quite an established reputation for devising instruments best adapted to suit peculiar conditions of observation and a reflecting telescope for taking frequent pictures of the corona is in process of construction under his supervision. He will also have a photometer for finding out how much the total light of the corona is equivalent to, and other more or less complicated apparatus. The two parties will take separate stations near the town of Muxima, and expect to reach the ground some time in advance of the date of the eclipse, so as to have all the instruments properly adjusted beforehand. The point selected is above the malarial belt, and as the natives are peaceable in that section of the coast, no troubles on that score are to be feared. One of the government vessels will be selected to take out the party and to bring them home.

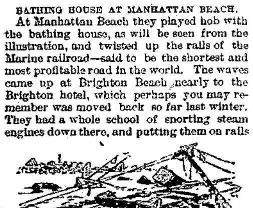
Eclipses of the sun have not the peculiar attraction to the aborigines of various countries that the moon has always been said to possess, because total ones are less frequent and are not of so long duration. The followers of Pizarro found the belief among the Peruvians that a partial eclipse meant illness of the luminary, and that a totality signified death, when it was supposed to fall to the earth and so end the world. When one occurred they would try to appease the wrath of the gods by beating upon everything that would make a noise, and chastise their pet animals in the faith that the heavenly body witnessing the sufferings of the creatures it loved would revive itself to save them. When the body emerged from the shadow, praise would be given for the mercy shown in not putting an end to human existence.

The Esquimaux acted somewhat similarly. The women bored the ears of the dogs in the faith that, if the animals cried out, the end of the world was not yet at hand; for these animals are presumed to have existed before men, and to have a better presentiment of the future. The story of the dragon that caused eclipses by devouring the sun or moon is still current among the masses in Siam and China, and it was only at the beginning of the last century that the Christian world abandoned the custom of ringing bells during storms and eclipses to counteract the workings of the bad spirits, and to repel with a priest's blessing the darkness caused, as they thought, by phantoms, and it was not until the light was fully restored that men could hope that the world would last at least through another era.

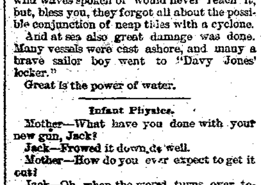
THE RECENT STORM.

How the Water Was Heaped Up All Along the Atlantic Seaboard.

Those who read the story and have seen the pictures of the great Conemaugh flood have a good idea of the great power of water, and a renewed illustration of this power is furnished by the storm which recently created so much devastation all along the Atlantic coast. When the sun and the moon pulled together and attracted the earth's water unto themselves, the water, so to speak, began to bump itself, and then the wind came along, causing a swell. Thus the waves reared themselves higher up on the shore than for many years before, and swept away board walks, bathing houses, cottages, and damaged hotels and railroads all along the New Jersey coast, and at Atlantic City in particular they wrought great havoc. At Coney Island they curled themselves up and swept over to the Brighton Beach track and flooded the course.

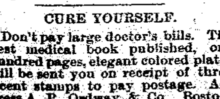


A REMNANT OF THE MARINE RAILROAD.



BATHING HOUSE AT MANHATTAN BEACH.

At Manhattan Beach they played hob with the bathing house, as will be seen from the illustration, and twisted up the rails of the Marine railroad—said to be the shortest and most profitable road in the world. The waves came up at Brighton Beach nearly to the Brighton hotel, which perhaps you may remember was moved back so far last winter. They had a whole school of snorting steam engines down there, and putting them on rails back of the hotel pulled it out of its moorings and took it back where it was thought the wild waves spoken of would never reach it, but, bless you, they forgot all about the possible conjunction of neap tides with a cyclone.



DEVASTATION AT ATLANTIC CITY.

And at sea also great damage was done. Many vessels were cast ashore, and many a brave sailor boy went to "Davy Jones' locker."

Great is the power of water.

TELEGRAMS received from England Monday announced the death of Wilkie Collins the noted English author. Few novelists had a wider fame than he and few indeed have written as many works of fiction.

W. H. SELLECK has been nominated as candidate on the Republican ticket, for Member of Assembly of the Second Oswego County District. This is extremely unfortunate for Mr. Ainsworth, from a political standpoint as his enemies will claim that it was the direct result of his prominent connection with the Assembly ceiling scandal.

THE base ball season is drawing to a close. The number of enthusiasts of this national game that have watched with interest the struggle for supremacy, is legion. The struggle in the national league between the Bostons and New Yorks has been the greatest ever seen in the history of the league. It looks now as though the New Yorks would be first. The Brooklyns lead in the American and the Detroits in the International league.

NOTWITHSTANDING the bad weather of last week the receipts at the state fair at Albany are estimated as the second largest in the last decade —about $19,000. This is the last state fair. Henceforth it becomes a local institution at Syracuse. Albany is already proposing an "eastern New York fair," and will doubtless institute one. Utica may revive the central New York agricultural and horticultural association. Buffalo has its "international," Elmira its "interstate," and Rochester its "western New York" association. Brethren, let us welcome to the circle the "Syracuse fair."—Utica Herald.

EACH delegate to the District Convention at Oswego last week arose and announced as his choice for candidate for Member of Assembly N. N. Stranahan of this village—a high compliment to the young politician who will doubtless represent this district as its next Member of Assembly. The district on an ordinary election will give about 1200 Republican majority but the friends of Mr. Stranahan claim that he will beat this easily. Although strongly identified with one of the local factions of his party we do not think any open stand will be taken against his election and predict for him a handsome majority.

THE New York committee on site and buildings of the world's fair on Friday decided that the location of the fair should be between 97th and 127th streets, Fourth avenue and the North river, including Riverside park and Morning Side park and the property contiguous thereto, the north end of Central park to be used only in case of their being an absolute necessity for it.

The vote on the site was 14 to 2. Those voting in the negative were John T. Agnew and A. H. Green. This selection is considered the best that possibly could have been made, including all the highland along the North river front. Roswell P. Flower was elected vice chairman of the committee.

The report of a sub-committee was read, which stated that 200 acres of land would be required and that the probable cost of the buildings would be as follows: Main buildings, 25 acres, $2,000,000; machinery hall, 20 acres, $2,000,000; agricultural hall, seven acres, $450,000; horticultural hall, five acres, $600,000; art hall, five acres, $600,000.

It was decided to advertise for bids for the erection of an observatory, to be 1,320 feet high and to contain an elevator and a restaurant.

Republican County Convention.

It was held at the Court House in Oswego, yesterday and was called to order by H. A. Wilcox, chairman of the county committee. S. B. Mead of this village wade chairman and John S. Parsons, of Oswego and E. S. Beecher of Orwell were made secretaries. After preliminary business and appointment of committees the convention adjourned until 2 p. m.

Upon reassembling the temporary organization was made a permanent one. After adopting a set of resolutions prepared by the committee appointed at the morning session in which thanks were tendered to Hon. N. W. Nutting and Mr. H. A. Wilcox for party services, and sympathy to the former in his severe illness. Hon. M. L. Wright was re-nominated for County Judge by acclamation, there being but one dissenting voice. A ballot for Surrogate was then taken and resulted in the selection of Francis Daivid of Phœnix who received 100; N. B. Smith of Pulaski receiving 78. Mr. David's nomination was made unanimous. Thomas Moore was unanimously nominated for County Treasurer. H. H. Walker of Albion was nominated Justice of Sessions on the third ballot. A. C. Mattoon of Oswego and D. D. Jennings of Palermo made a strong fight for the nomination. Ed. Cole of this village received the nomination for Coroner of the second district getting 101 out of the 157 votes cast. Dr. Drury of Phœnix received the remaining 56.

Dr. Nelson was nominated for Coroner for the third district.

Departed this life in Fulton, September 18th, 1889, Mrs. Luella Davis wife of A. P. Davis, aged 37 years. In the early spring inflamation of the stomach commenced its work and becoming chronic in its course finally completed its fatal work, and one naturally delicate and of a sensitive and nervous temperament yielded to its power.

Mrs. Davis, a little sabbath school scholar, but a child, sought the Lord and at the age of ten years embraced the religion of Jesus Christ. She has maintained a consistent christian course since that time.

She has been a successful laborer in the cause of her Master. Her labors both in public and private have been honored of God. During her long, severe and painful sickness she manifested the calm, serene composure of a Christian exhibiting perfect patience and trust in God continually.

Her room was filled with the presence of God and the glory cloud filled the place.

Early in the morning of her 38th birthday her spirit unfettered of the clay-house passed peacefully and triumphantly into the presence of undreaded death. On Sunday Sept. 22, the Free Methodist church was filled with friends, who gathered to hear a few words of instruction and offer their last token of respect to one they loved. After which the clay tenement was laid away in Mt. Adnah cemetery to await the resurrection of the just. L. S. KING.

He giveth his beloved sleep,
How sweet the promise given,
For it fortells a harbor safe
For those who live for Heaven.

He has kept her till the river
Rolled its waters at her feet,
He has borne her safely over
Where the loved ones she will meet.

We bore her body to Mt. Adnah
Its last resting place.
The spirit well we know has gone
To see the Savior's face.

But Oh, the sad and lonely hearts
Since that dear one is gone,
No more dear Ella's presence
Among us here is known.

But there's one more tie in Heaven
To draw us nearer Home,
And we say farewell dear Ella,
Until our work is done.

Washington, Sept. 23, 1889.

In the [illegible] Supreme Court circles it is predicted that the vacancy caused by Justice Matthew's death will be filled before the assembling of the court on the second Monday in October. From Deer Park comes the statement that the President is now only hesitating as between Judge Wood and Attorney General Miller. The principal objection to Judge Wood is based upon his partisanship which is of the most rabid order. Another objection is to his lack of prominence in the legal profession. That this objection holds good, also, against Attorney General Miller, goes without saying. Mr. Miller is essentially a man of small calibre, a so-so lawyer, a good, industrious man, with a mental and limp mentality. The inherent reverence of good men for duly constituted authority is evinced in the loyalty of the people to the Supreme Court. No other body could have passed in peace upon the Hayes' election, for instance. This court is recognized as the strongest bulwark of our liberties. To keep it free for merely partisan favor and to make its personnel a pride to Americans is the duty of every President. In so far as Mr. Harrison succeeds in casting personal prejudice behind and selecting a man whom the whole people respect in so far will he be strengthening himself.

Judge Wood is a very good, respectable man, as the world goes, and Attorney General Miller is a fair second-rate lawyer, as is President Harrison himself, but these qualifications furnish no reason for appointing either a Justice of the Supreme Court. The Republican party contains a vast number of brainy men, men from whom the vigor and fire of intelligence, a breathing and living personality, springs at all times. Why not give these men a chance? Can it be that President Harrison hath grown Cassius and can brook "none greater than himself?" Mr. Cleveland made such a mistake when he appointed Mr. Fuller Chief Justice. Mr. Fuller was a decidedly third rate Chicago lawyer and even there a man who by chance heard his name had to search the crannies of his memory to recall his occupation and condition. The people have never yet accepted the appointment with real approval. The appointment of Lamar, as much fierce objection as it raised in a Republican Senator, has been better received by the people, because they knew that Lamar has brains and experience and because, political antecedents aside, it was the honoring of a remarkably long and successful public life. President Harrison might do well to seek further than among his personal friends for his next Justice of the Supreme Court.

Ex-Congressman Warner has sensibly, after changieg his mind four or five times, concluded that he does not want to be Commissioner of Pensions, and this is believed to be his final answer to the requests of President Harrison and Secretary Noble. Two reasons are given. General Warner is a man in the full flush of life and piling up money in his law practice at the rate of $25,000 per annum. To accept the Commissionership would be to lose this income for a paltry $5,000 per annum for perhaps only four years. It would, also, lose for him his political prestige in Missouri. As it is, his strength in that State is far greater than Secretary Noble's, but should he once accept office under Secretary Noble he would be called upon to give way to his chief, which would not be agreeable.

At present General George S. Merrill, of Boston seems most likely to be selected. He represents the conservation wing of the Grand Army and is opposed to pensioning except for disabilities contracted in service and line of duty. As chairman of the pensions committee of the Grand Army, it has been largely due to his efforts that the organization has been so considerate in its official requests for favors. It is not known that he would accept.

Nothing definite has yet been done to secure Corporal Tanner a new berth, although his friends are pressing his appointment as Recorder of Deeds for the District of Columbia, a position worth twelve or fifteen thousands dollars per annum. The President is said, with some reason, to be opposed to further honoring the Corporal with offices at home, and every possible pressure is being brought to bear to induce the Corporal to go abroad in the diplomatic service where he will die out of the Republic mind. He has been invited by Gov. Foraker to stump Ohio and may accept, though it would be against the wishes of the administration and would antagonize the President. The President has a wholesome dread of Corporal Tanner's mouth, and wants no more of his indiscretion.

Cheese Market Report.

(From the Utica Herald.)

AT UTICA.

UTICA, Sept. 23.

Cheese has been a more valuable commodity to-day than at any time since last spring. Salesmen who had held back their offerings congratulated themselves on their wisdom, and so many held back again to-day that one-fourth to one-third the offering next week is likely to be August stock. It will be none the worse for that, however, as late Augusts are just as good as early Septembers. There was a snap and vim to the transactions to-day, that has been almost entirely lacking this season. Buyers wanted cheese and were bound to have it at one price or another. Considerable of the stock bought at 9⅝c. and 9¾c., could not have been obtained at 9¾c., as factory men would not have sold at that. They have a good deal of confidence in fall cheese, and will hold if they cannot get their prices.

Following is the list of Sales:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
66	5,896	8⅞
11	1,150	9c
19	1,519	9¼
33	2,800	9⅜
23	2,200	9½
151	13,565
	920	Com.
Total.	14,485

Ruling price 8⅞c. Transactions one year ago 12,952 boxes, ruling price 8c. Two years ago 13,154 boxes, ruling price, 11¼c.

There were sales of 70 packages creamery butter at 22⅞ @ 25c. Bulk went at 23⅞c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Sept. 23.

Cheese—There has been much holding back on the part of salesmen to-day, and it was only at the last minute that figures can be obtained. Early in the day some good offers were made and salesmen set their figures where buyers did no think they could go. Both sides were firm until finally 9⅝c. was paid in a number of cases, and several salesmen went home without selling any. There is a confident feeling as to the future of the market, but it is believed that prices to-day have been crowded fully as high as was safe. No difference is made between white and colored.

Following is our usual table:

48	2,963	9c
2	139	9¼
44	8,249	9⅜
1	30	9⅝
17	1,035	9¾
1	101	p. t.
15	816	Com.
122	8,332
Farm dairy	1,125
Total	9,457

Farm Dairies—The sales of farm dairy cheese were at 8¾ to 9¼c., the bulk sold at 9¼ cents.

Butter—Twelve packages of creamery butter sold at 17 to 20 cents. 25 packages of farm dairy at 18., to 19c.

AT FULTON.

Twenty factories were represented here Monday night with $1,943 of cheese which sold at 8¾ and 9¼ cents.

One price in rubber goods has been agreed upon by the Fulton and Oswego Falls boot and shoe dealers. So their is no use trying to get that class of goods cheaper than the regular price.

From the earliest period to the present time.
BY HUBERT HOWE BANCROFT.

One of the most remarkable volumes of History ever written. Of thrilling interest and replete with startling episodes. The true inwardness of Mormonism now for the first time presented.

It is safe to say that now for the first time, by the graphic pen of Mr. Bancroft, the story of Mormonism is fully told. It is every word true, and it is a story beside which the tales of romance become tame. Hitherto the one-half has not been told. Many have asked, but never before has the the question been answered. What is Mormonism? Not since the days of Christ or Mahomet have there been such strange developments.

Officer Alonzo Clark dropped into the back part of the tent next south of the Merry-go round at the Fair Grounds Friday and seized a case of bottles filled with whiskey which were being sold in violation to the rules of the Association. Innocent looking pies and peanuts were sold at the front of the tent while whiskey was sold in the rear.

The dancing party given by Steamer Co. No. 1 at Church's Hall last Wednesday evening was one of the nicest and most successful ever held by a Hose Co. in this village. Five pieces of music rendered fine music for dancing which was kept up until about 3 o'clock in the morning. Everyone announces a good time. About $50 was cleared by the company.

CONCERNING SECOND STREET.

A Tax-Payer Tells of Encroachments and Promises Unfulfilled.

Editor of The Times.

A paragraph appeared in the last number of THE TIMES regarding Second street that fails to place the responsibility for the present condition of that street where it properly belongs

The railroad company by committing unlawful acts, by failing to perform its duty, fulfill its legal obligation and by ignoring public and private rights are alone responsible for rendering that once desirable street, unhealthy and dangerous, and for making it a nuisance.

In 1868 permission was granted by the village authorities for the Midland railroad company to lay one track on that street provided that six months after notice from the authorities, the company should so grade the road bed as to obviate the necessity of running their trains at an unlawful speed through the village, and that the company should pave the gutters on both sides of the street from Erie St. to Broadway.

The company has not raised the grade and continues to run its trains at a dangerous speed; it has not paved the gutters according to its obligations, nor has it ever put the street in the reasonable repair it was in before its tracks were laid. Without premission from the authorities or from property owners the company laid a second track through the business portion of the village and operates it by what is known as a "flying switch"—a most dangerous use of a track in a populated region; it also uses the second track for the storage and unloading of its cars, a village ordinance to the contrary notwithstanding.

The company occupies the side walk in front of its depot and at street crossing for baggage and freight uses, premits vehicles to pass on the walks, making accidents possible and preventing the proper use of the walks by pedestrians. The company has not placed gates nor flagman at street crossings (except occasionally at Oneida St.,) by reason of these omissions serious accidents have occurred. It is a law of the State that upon application of the Village authorities the railroad company are oblige to place gates or a flagman at each crossing.

Some time ago Mr. George Kellogg, as Trustee, with commendable spirit, presented to the Village Board and asked for its passage an ordiance requiring the company to construct and operate gates at the crossings from Oneida street to Broadway. Up to this time the "City Fathers" have not considered our lives and property worth the effort necessary to pass such an ordinance, but have just granted the railroad company the privilege of still further obstructing Second street and Broadway, receiving therefor additional promises from the company.

The past eighteen years experience with the railroad company and a glimpse of Second street are enough to convince even a doubting Thomas that so far the promises of this railroad company to our village board have not been worth the paper on which they are made. The Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg R. R. Co. is permitted to still farther increase the dangers referred to, and arrangements have just been completed by which eastern traffic via Poughkeepsie routes will be shipped over these roads requiring more trains to disfigure our village and render the streets more unsafe.

The railroad company now are dedendants in suits brought by citizens of this village, and I am credibly informed that they have appealed from decisions against for the sole purpose of keeping all knowledge of successful suits against them from the public till other aggrieved parties may be barred from prosecuting against them by Statute of limitation.

By the unlawful acts of the company above referred to and by its other sins of omission and of commission, Second street is in such a dangerous and unhealthy condition as to endanger life and materially depreciate property on it and adjacient streets.

The remedy for this condition of affairs is largely in our own heads. It should be the duty of every man, woman and child to agitate this matter till our authorities compel the railroad company to fulfill its promises, perform such acts as they are obliged by law and ordinances to do and put Second street in a healthy, safe and tidy condition and property owners should see to it that their rights be enforced at once that the company may not claim a permanent right to continue the street in its present disgraceful condition.

BOOKS! BOOKS! BOOKS!

C. E. Chappell & Co. have just received 2000 books by the best authors and nicely bound. They are offering them at a figure that will surprise and please. Don't fail to call and see them and get a descriptive catologue. This new movement on the part of the well known firm of Chappell & Co. is one that is sure to cause a rush to their stores.

Friday evening about 10 o'clock a fire broke out in the Doctor Avery block in the Willard & Cable undertaking rooms at Phœnix. The fire was confined to the block and did not break through the roof. Doctor Avery's loss on the block is $800, and Willard and Cable's $1,800 on furniture and undertaking goods. Jas. Barnes losses on cigar-box nailers and stock $1,800. He occupied the third story. S. Hansel's meat market was slightly damaged. The walls of the block are standing.

The Maggi of course is the Maggi; but then what is the Maggi?

A. E. Keller who recently went to Michigan to purchase apples was compelled to return on account of sickness. He has been confined to the house most of the time since his return but we are glad to see him on the street again. He will go back to Michigan if his health permits.

A Double Smash Up.

Four young men came up here from Oswego Sunday with a fine livery team and carriage. They filled up with whiskey, beer and liquids. About seven o'clock in the evening while crossing the upper bridge on their way to Oswego Falls they became tangled up in the street car tracks and smashed their carriage badly. The young men were thrown out and one was badly injured. The horses were prevented from running away by some persons standing near where the accident occurred. The carriage was a bad wreck. It was taken to Oswego Falls to be repaired.

They then went to Rowlee's livery in this village and hired another carriage and started across the lower bridge for Oswego. Near J. C. Wells' house they succeeded in running into the gutter and smashing up the second carriage even worse than the did the first. One of the horses was also badly cut in the leg. We have heard that arrests may be made but no movement of that nature had been heard of up to noon today.

A Sensation at Phœnix.

Phœnix is considerably stirred up over the exposure of the fact that Carrie Williams was for some time engaged to marry two men and finally married one and jilted the other at the last minute. Daniel Beals, a miller in the employ of Pierce & Pendergast, has been paying attention to Miss Williams for some time and it was generally supposed that they were to be married.

Harry Haynes appeared as a third party in the love making. He lives on the road from New Bridge to Baldwinsville, but for a few years has been employed in Minneapolis. When his father died some time ago he returned to take charge of the farm. He was a widower, having married a young lady at New Bridge, who died soon after. Miss Williams met Haynes at New Bridge, where she was teaching school. She corresponded with him regularly and at the same time kept company with Beals.

Last Tuesday was to have been the wedding day of Beals and Miss Williams. The guests were invited, a clergyman engaged and all the other necessary arrangements made, but before the hour arrived Miss Williams had been made Mrs. Haynes.

It appears that Haynes came to Phœnix early Tuesday and taking Miss Williams in his carriage drove to Baldwinsville, where they were married.

Beals went to the house of his intended prepared for the wedding ceremony, but was told that Miss Williams had gone away and the people did not know where to. Beals took the first train out of town for Rochester.

PEEBLES & CO.

A Dismal Fair Week.

Wednesday was the only day last week that approached anywhere near respectable weather for the Oswego Falls fair. Wednesday was the opening day and of course a large crowd was not expected on that day. Thursday opened gloomy enough and although at no time during the day did it cease raining for half an hour at a time a large number attended. Friday was a repitation of Thursday only more so. Rain and mud had the mastery and the attendance was not as large as on the preceeding day The association must have run far behind as the receipts will probably not more than cover the premiums paid. The balloon ascension and parachute jump on Wednesday was a success but it did not go up on the following day as advertised.

The number that did attend however showed the hold that the fair has on the people, and while it may have been a failure from a financial standpoint everything goes to show that it will be a long time before it is a failure as a permnent institution.

Young Men's Christian Association.

From time to time we hear of men of means having bequeathed a portion of their goods to some christian institution. "The Watchman," the organ of the Young Men's Christian Associations of the United States and Canada, of last week announces that a citizen of Springfield, Mass. who died during the past summer, has bequeathed $1,000 toward an endowment fund to the training school in that city. This is the first money received by the school for such a purpose, and we trust may prove an attractive nest egg for the $299,000 more it needs in the way of endowment, to say nothing of the $125,000 which it needs for its building extensions.

We have been pleased to note the successful organization of an association in the interest of the young men of Oswego, and that suitable rooms, with slight repairs, have been secured in which to carry on the work, be welcome to our district Brother Strough, who is to be general secretary and wish him God speed in the development spiritually, intellectually, socially and physically of the young men of that city.

Mr. H. E. Nichols was to have led our young men's meeting last Sunday, but was prevented through a slight indisposition of the past week. We had special music, in the way of violins and cornet, the General Secretary took charge, and each one left satisfied with the pleasant and profitable hour spent together, many having testified to the advantages of a personal acquaintance with Jesus Christ. Again we have to thank the kind friend who supplied the beautifully arranged and lovely bouquet of flowers for the meeting. Next time please send card.

Four or five of our committees have held meetings and laid plans by which they propose to carry along to a successful issue the work of the coming winter. They need the prayers and support of every christian and the financial support of the business men.

Let every young man be free to come and visit our rooms any day or evening during the week and, especially so, to attend our meeting Sunday at 4 o'clock p. m. All are welcome. ⁂

THE FULTON TIMES

Wednesday Sept. 25, 1889.

WORTH KNOWING.

From Kansas come reports that the year, as a whole, has been a prosperous one to farmers; crops have been good and prices promise to be high.

It is estimated that over 2,500,000,000 is invested in the dairy business in this country, and that 15,000,000 cows supply the raw material.

Careful calculations on the yield of corn in Illnois this year show that it will be 204,400,000 bushels, which is just 73,000,000 bushels less than the crop of last year.

"Going it blind" seldom pays. A debit and credit account kept with the individual cows of the herd may reveal interesting if not always agreeable facts in regard to profit and loss.

Plymouth Rocks and Brown Leghorns furnish two desirable breeds to keep together, one supplementing the diseases of the other and both being popular breeds easily obtained.

It is not the number of acres that a man skims over that makes him either a large or successful farmer. It is what he makes net, above cost of production, for his own toil and interest on the capital invested.

If a few dry cows or heifers are kept in the field with sheep, according to the American Sheep Breeder, dogs will seldom molest them. The writer says he has found sheep in the morning huddled so close around and under a friendly old cow that she could not get away from them.

The American Garden favors the abolition of all fences, on the plea that they are expensive, harbor weeds, disfigure the lanscape and are, in most cases useless. Vick thinks the question is one for each landholder to decide for himself, but he should decide it in accordance with the facts and not with old usage or prejudice.

It is certain says a correspondent of the American Cultivator, if there is any truth in chemistry, that the turnip crop is a profitable one to grow to plow under for green manuring, as the figures show that 800 bushels of turnips contain all the manural value contained in twenty-three tons of fresh barnyard manure, with the addition of seventeen bushels of wood ashes.

E. S. Carman of the Rural New Yorker, says that for fifteen years he has planted all the new strawberries he could hear of, and during these years he has raised many new seedlings. "not one of which has shown that it was worthy of introduction." He names three that in the fifteen years have been some improvement over older varieties, of such as have been originated in the country at large—The Sharpless, Cumberland and Bubach.

Milk Twice a Day.

According to no less an authority in dairy matters than Col. F. D. Curtis, the old-fashioned notion to milk only in the morning after cows drop off in their yield is a mistake. If worth milking at all a cow is worth milking twice a day. She will not only give more, but the milk will be of a great deal better quality. It does not do milk any good to remain in the udder so many hours after it is secreted, and it does not do the cow any good. Just why the last milk drawn is the best is unexplained. But we know it is the richest, and if the reason is because it is the last secreted, then the twenty-four hours' rule of milking is a poor one in more than one sense—poor in quantity and quality.

Struggle of the Sexes.

In 1880 there were some 50,000,000 people in the United States, and about 882,000 more males than females. That was only because more males were born; the females live the longest. Of the centenarians 1,409 were men and 2,607 were women.

The boys start out nearly a million ahead, and are in the majority until the sixteenth year, when the girls are a little more numerous. Sweet sixteen is a numerous age, anyhow. After that, first one and then the other is in the majority, the girls gradually gaining after thirty-six, and leaving the men far behind after seventy-five. To balance this longevity of the females, in almost every State a few more boys are born; not many more, but almost always a few.

It is astonishing to see where the census gives thousands and hundreds of thousands of boys and girls under one year old, there are, with one or two exceptions, always a few hundred more boys, and only a few hundred more. In only six of the forty-nine States and Territories are more girls born, and in these States they are very slightly in excess—from eleven to eighty. These exceptions are Arizona, Delaware, Florida, Louisiana, Montana, and North Carolina.—Exchange.

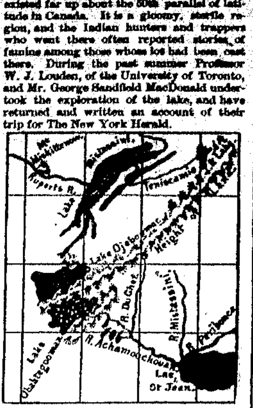
LAKE MISTASSINI.

A Hitherto Unknown Body of Water Thoroughly Explored.

For many years it has been supposed that a great inland sea, called Lake Mistassini, existed far up about the 50th parallel of latitude in Canada. It is a gloomy, sterile region, and the Indian hunters and trappers who went there often reported stories of famine among those whose lot had been cast there. During the past summer Professor W. J. Louden, of the University of Toronto, and Mr. George Sandfield MacDonald undertook the exploration of the lake, and have returned and written an account of their trip for The New York Herald.



LAKE MISTASSINI.

They left Quebec on July 13 last, and went to Robrival. Thence, after obtaining an addition to their outfit and a guide and three men, the party worked their way up the Achamouchouan river, ascending rapids and portages, securing plenty of fish, on which diet they principally subsisted. On July 30 they reached Lake Achamouchouan. Along the route they met Indians whose condition confirmed the stories that had been told of the scant food obtained by the inhabitants of this dreary region.

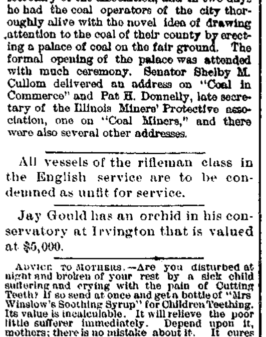
On Aug. 9 they reached the Hudson's Bay company's post on the lower end of the lake, and the next day set out to explore the body of water which had so long been a mystery. They located their position from the Pole star at night, and took the temperature of the water, which they found to be 50.5 degs. Fahrenheit. After traversing the lake from its southern to its northern extremity they entered the mouth of Toquoco river. Here they stepped ashore and congratulated each other. They had reached the limit of their intended exploration.

The next morning, after paddling up the river for two hours, they came in sight of some hills about five miles distant. Leaving their canoe they tramped across a swamp and ascended the highest of these hills. The day was clear, and from a height of 3,000 feet the whole region to the north of the lake was visible. Below, on a broad plateau, the country could be seen for a distance of seventy-five miles, and they were enabled to make some excellent drawings. After gaining all the information required to complete a map, the party started back on their journey out of the wilderness.

Records of temperature which they examined indicate that the winters are extremely cold and summers are very short. There is abundance of fish, but about the only meat to be obtained is bear meat. Furs are plenty, and securing the hides of animals with which to keep the ladies of more southern climates warm in winter is about all any one finds to do. The currency consists of brass coins gilded over, bearing the crest of the Hudson Bay company. They are known as "beavers." There are also "half beavers" and "quarter beavers." They doubtless originally took their name from the value of a beaver's skin.

A Novel Idea.

A novel attraction in the shape of a palace of black diamonds is to be seen on the Sangamon Fair association grounds at Springfield, Ills. The entire structure is in reality a palace of coal, as it is built of rough blocks of coal dug out of the Sangamon county vein.



THE COAL PALACE.

Owing to the shortness of time at the disposal of the operators who were putting up the palace it is necessarily somewhat limited in its dimensions, but it is big enough to make a very imposing appearance. Bullard & Bullard are the architects of this building, which is certainly a picturesque feature of the Sangamon fair and Springfield's exposition. The original idea was suggested by The Illinois State Journal to Col. Charles F. Mills, secretary of the association, and in two days he had the coal operators of the city thoroughly alive with the novel idea of drawing attention to the coal of their county by erecting a palace of coal on the fair ground. The formal opening of the palace was attended with much ceremony. Senator Shelby M. Cullom delivered an address on "Coal in Commerce" and Pat H. Donnelly, late secretary of the Illinois Miners' Protective association, one on "Coal Miners," and there were also several other addresses.

Bright's Disease.

A Ten-Year-Old Child Saved After the Failure of Four Physicians.

My little girl, ten years of age, was taken sick in March, 1888, with scarlet fever. When recovering she took a severe cold, which developed Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. Her ankles, feet and eyes were terribly swollen; she had a burning fever, and all the symptoms of an aggravated case of Bright's Disease. Four of our best physicians attended her, but without success, and

Her Life was Despaired of.

But a mother's love and prayers surmount all difficulties, and I determined to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y. This was a last resort, and I hoped, although my little daughter's case was a very severe one, that the Favorite Remedy would do for her what it had done for others whose condition had not been, seemingly, as hopeless. How happy I am that I determined upon this course—for an improvement was at once perceptible. The fever left her—her appetite improved—she gained six pounds in a short time, and one by one the well known and dreaded symptoms of the disease left her. Words fail to express my gratitude, and I cannot too earnestly recommend the Favorite Remedy. [illegible]

The TORTURES OF DESPAIR

Can be no worse than the agony of a man or woman troubled with Sick Headache. The terrible pain; the nausea; the lack of all interest in life; the disgust with everything and everybody; the world can afford no pleasure to any one when suffering from Sick Headache.

Why have Doctors never been able to cure this fearful trouble?

Because they have never discovered the right thing!

Have they tried?

Yes, for hundreds of years.

But a Chemist of Troy, N. Y., discovered the remedy, and the remedy that will cure in EVERY CASE arising from a deranged stomach.

Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders

Go right to the Seat of the trouble—the Stomach. They are purely vegetable, and contain NO narcotics. They act with wonderful promptness and never leave any bad after-effect.

Phillip Phillips, the "Singing Pilgrim," says of them:—"I cannot tell you how glad I am to get something that relieves my wife of her headaches."

Rev. George F. Pentecost, D. D., says:—"I have received many benedictions from those to whom I have given these powders."

The late Rev. C. P. Sheldon, says:—"They are a wonderful remedy, and all they claim to be."

A SAMPLE

of these wonderful Powders will be sent FREE to any sufferer from this terrible affliction, or they can be procured of all reputable druggists at 25 cents a box.

Will deliver free of charge, show cards and samples to any druggist who will keep the card in his window and give the samples to the most desperate cases.

HOW REPULSIVE

Is bad breath, and yet how many otherwise attractive, polite, and particular people afflict their friends with the foul odor of their breath. If there was no remedy for this, it might excite our sympathy, but as there is no need of having a foul breath, it is an unpardonable breach of good manners to obtrude such an offence on good society.

Foul breath arises from disordered digestion which can be corrected by using Sulphur Bitters, and the result will be a pure, sweet breath.

THE PROPER THING.

Flower bonnets and brims continue in high favor.

Black dresses will be worn next season more than they have been of late.

Jacket waists remain in vogue and basques are not wholly abandoned.

Stuart frills of handsome lace are worn on many bodices slightly open in the neck.

Double breasted velvet vests are very effective under jacket fronts of wool gowns.

Round waists, full sleeves and straight skirts reappear with variations in autumn toilets.

Winter cloaks represent a costume combined of two materials, such as plush or velvet with cloth.

Passementerie, braiding, fur, feathers and velvet ribbons are the trimmings for the first dark dresses.

Long cloaks for early autumn are made of soft twilled wools with black broche borders on colored grounds.

Short sleeveless jackets of velvet, faille or moire will form the bodice of many dresses of silk or of fine wool.

Short wraps for the demi-season and for wearing over handsome winter costumes are in cape and mantilla shapes.

In new autumn gowns there will be less use made of goods in combination than of handsome solid colors richly bordered.

Some of the finest patterns in furs for the coming winter are made to fit the figure even more closely than those of a year ago.

Shot velvets, both plain and figured, will be much used for parts of dresses, for wraps and for bonnets or their trimmings.

To be free from headache, biliousness, constipation, etc., use Carter's Little Liver Pills. Strictly vegetable. They gently stimulate the liver and free the stomach from bile.

When I Mean to Marry.

When do I mean to marry?—Well—
'Tis idle to dispute with fate;
But if you choose to hear me tell,
Pray listen while I fix the date:

When daughters haste with eager feet.
A mother's toil to share;
Can make the puddings which they eat,
And mend the stockings which they wear.

When maidens look upon a man
As in himself what they would marry,
And not as army soldiers scan,
A sutler or a commissary.

When gentle ladies who have got
The offer of a lover's hand,
Consent to share his "earthly lot,"
And do not mean his lot of land.

When young mechanics are allowed
To find and wed the farmer's girls,
Who don't expect to be endowed
With rubies, diamonds, pearls!

When wives, in short, shall freely give
Their hearts and hands to aid their spouses,
And live as they were wont to live,
Within their sire's one story houses.

Then madam if I'm not too old—
Rejoiced to quit this lonely life,
I'll brush my beaver, cease to scold,
And look about me for a wife.

—John G. Saxe.

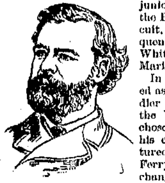
DAVID H. MOORE, D. D.

The New Editor of the Western Christian Advocate.

Among the important additions to the army of religious workers in the Ohio valley the new editor of The Western Christian Advocate, one of the leading publications of the Methodist church, Dr. David H. Moore, occupies a conspicuous place. He has now arrived from Colorado, where he lately was chancellor of the University of Denver, and, beginning with the issue of Sept. 18, The Advocate will be under his personal editorial supervision.

Dr. Moore was born at Athens, O., in September, 1838. He was the only son of Hon. E. H. Moore, one of the trustees of the Ohio university, at which institution the son was educated, and from which he was graduated in 1860, receiving his master's degree three years later. He was converted in boyhood, and began preaching before he left college. Immediately after graduation he married Miss Julia Carpenter, of Athens.

He joined the Ohio conference at its first session after graduation, and was appointed junior preacher on the Bainbridge circuit, and subsequently was sent to Whitney chapel, Marietta, O.



DAVID H. MOORE.

In 1862 he enlisted as a private soldier in the war for the Union, was chosen captain of his company, captured at Harper's Ferry, and was exchanged. He at once organized a new regiment, and served successively as major and lieutenant colonel until the fall of Atlanta.

After the war he returned to the ministry and occupied charges in Ohio, at Columbus, Zanesville, Delaware and Cincinnati. In 1875 he was elected president of Wesleyan college, Cincinnati, and made a successful and popular administration of that institution, though greatly handicapped by financial difficulties. In 1880 he identified himself with the pioneer educational work of the church, and became president of Colorado seminary and chancellor of the University of Denver.

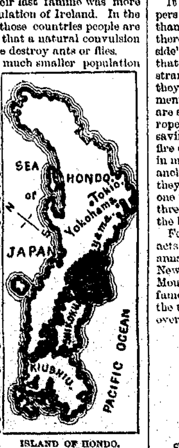
At the last meeting of the book committee he was unanimously elected editor of The Advocate, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Rev. Dr. Bayliss. This was against his personal desire, but after the choice of the committee was announced and made known to him he responded, in the language of a patriot of 1860: "If the summons is imperative, I am a soldier."

THE LATEST JAPANESE DISASTER.

Map Showing the Location of the Flooded District.

China and Japan seem fated to astonish mankind by regularly recurring calamities in which the waste of human life is so enormous as to make the Johnstown flood, the Irish famine and the American civil war appear as small things. In the great Tae-ping rebellion 7,000,000 lives were lost; at one time 30,000 prisoners were beheaded, or more than the killed in any battle of the late war. In the Chinese floods they number the dead by millions instead of hundreds as we do, and the loss by their last famine was more than twice the population of Ireland. In the fertile districts of those countries people are crowded so thickly that a natural convulsion destroys them as we destroy ants or flies.

Japan having a much smaller population than China and fewer low plains, is less subject to destructive cataclysms, but only a few months ago the country suffered a most peculiar affliction. A mountain lake broke into a volcano, the whole mountain top was blown off by the steam, and, turning completely over in the air, buried several thousand people. And now the latest steamer from Yokohama brings information of a flood, accompanied by immense land slides, and the destruction of at least 15,000 people. To the nations of the west such a calamity would be the marvel of the age, and make an epoch in history; but after the great inundation of "China's sorrow," the Yellow river, it seems like a mere episode in the Orient.



ISLAND OF HONDO.

The flood devastated the province of Kii, in southwestern Hondo, one of the Japan islands. The rains of the late summer were a great deal more abundant than ever before known and so much detritus was carried to the mouths of the main streams that they were choked. On this came a sudden and heavy rain of several days' duration; the dams were broken, the embankments of streams swept away and finally all one side of a precipitous mountain, softened by the rain, slid into the valley and covered six villages. The dispatches give many details as to the villages, but these need not be repeated.

The nature and extent of the flood's work may be judged by the fact that for ninety miles along the coast foreign steamers find it impossible to enter any harbor or even get near the land. There was such a mass of floating trees, roots and wreckage that the wheels and rudders were clogged and the vessels could not force their way through. This is the greatest disaster Japan has suffered for centuries, and the exact loss of life cannot be known for some time, as many entire districts are covered and not one person left alive to tell the tale.

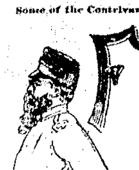
THE FIREMEN IN PARIS.

THEY HAD A WHOLE WEEK ALL TO THEMSELVES.

All the World Was Represented, "Even America," As the French Papers Announced with Some Show of Surprise. Some of the Contrivances for Saving Life.



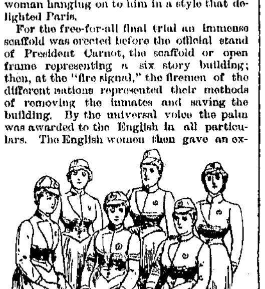
HUNGARIAN FIREMAN.

FIREMEN'S week at the Paris exposition was indeed a great week, and nearly all the civilized world was represented —"even America included," says L'Illustration, as if it were a surprise for Americans to get there. The International firemen's congress paid their first respects, of course, to President Carnot, and listened to some "able remarks," after which they gave three days to demonstrating what they could do, and closed the proceedings with the usual excursions and banquets.

The gathering of spectators was immense and the Parisians were much impressed. The visitors, on the other hand, admitted a surprise at the serious, solemn ways of the French firemen, especially at the custom of calling the names of those who "died in action." When their names are sounded at the regular roll call some one responds, "Died at the fire!"—"Mort au feu!" The various uniforms of the foreign firemen made the review a scene of great interest. There were present Portuguese, English, Luxembourgers, Hungarians, Italians, Russians, Americans and some others.

The English delegation attracted special attention because it contained a company of "firewomen" from Manchester, that is, women devoted to the life saving department of the work. They were young, agile and dressed in what would once have been called the "Bloomer" costume. They gave elaborate expositions of the best methods of rescuing women from the upper stories of burning buildings. By one method a cord is dropped from the window (all hotels are now supposed to keep them) and by it a long, stout sack—a tube of stout sacking rather—is drawn up and fastened, the lower end is held out by the firemen and the rescued woman slides gently but rapidly to the ground. This when no fireman can reach the window. In case it is accessible, however, other methods are practicable. A British fireman exhibited the plan of going down ropes with a woman hanging on to him in a style that delighted Paris.

For the free-for-all final trial an immense scaffold was erected before the official stand of President Carnot, the scaffold or open frame representing a six story building; then, at the "fire signal," the firemen of the different nations represented their methods of removing the inmates and saving the building. By the universal voice the palm was awarded to the English in all particulars. The English women then gave an exhibition of their method of descending by a rope thrown about the waist, their downward velocity regulated by a rope held in the hands. They also maneuvered the English fire engines to demonstrate their lightness and facility of movement.

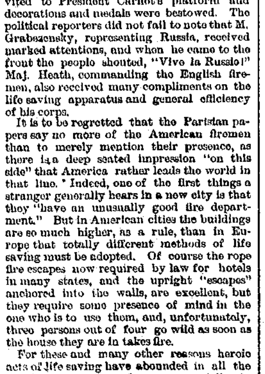


ENGLISH FIREWOMEN.

After the maneuvers the captains were invited to President Carnot's platform and decorations and medals were bestowed. The political reporters did not fail to note that M. Grabezensky, representing Russia, received marked attentions, and when he came to the front the people shouted, "Vive la Russie!" Maj. Heath, commanding the English firemen, also received many compliments on the life saving apparatus and general efficiency of his corps.

It is to be regretted that the Parisian papers say no more of the American firemen than to merely mention their presence, as there is a deep seated impression "on this side" that America rather leads the world in that line. Indeed, one of the first things a stranger generally hears in a new city is that they "have an unusually good fire department." But in American cities the buildings are so much higher, as a rule, than in Europe that totally different methods of life saving must be adopted. Of course the rope fire escapes now required by law for hotels in many states, and the upright "escapes" anchored into the walls, are excellent, but they require some presence of mind in the one who is to use them, and, unfortunately, three persons out of four go wild as soon as the house they are in takes fire.

For these and many other reasons heroic acts of life saving have abounded in all the annals of American firemen, especially in New York city. The exploit of James R. Mount, March 17, 1852, on the Bowery, was a famous subject of talk for years. He reached the third story of a paint and paper store over burning stairs and rescued two persons, leaving two men, two women and two children in one room. The stairs were nearly ready to fall in when he dashed down, and with his coat wrapped around his head (for the smoke was stifling) went up the ladder, which had been spliced. It was several feet too short. The firemen below raised that end upon a hogshead and held it there by main strength. The two men reached it and climbed down; then the children, one at a time, were placed upon his shoulders and brought down; but now the lower rungs of the ladder were ablaze and the flames from the paint store were rolling up the side of the house.



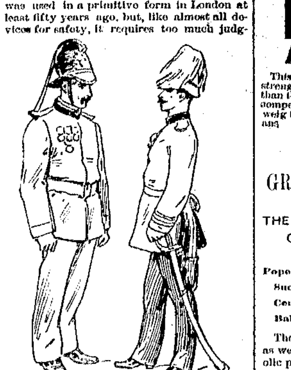
ENGLISH MANEUVERS.

One of the women climbed some distance and fell, but was not seriously hurt; the other, Mary Koepke, weighed [illegible] pounds, and was almost helpless from fright. Yet Mount succeeded in getting her over the window sill and across his shoulder. Step by step he descended—a fall to the pavement meant death to both. He got down in safety to where the rungs were on fire, then fainted; those below managed to break their fall, so that neither was seriously injured. The cheer raised by the spectators was heard high above the roar of the flames. Mount's clothes fell off in cinders and the flesh was burned from the palms of his hands; but he recovered without permanent injury.

This is given only as an instance of acts done by many hundreds of Americans, acts which inspired the stirring lines of Eliza Cook:

When the red sheet winds and whirls
In the coil of frightful death;
When the bannered smoke unfurls,
And the hot walls drink our breath;
When the far off crowd appears,
Choking in the demon glare,
And some helpless form appears
In that furnace of despair.
"Save, oh, save," the people cry;
But who plucks the human brand?
Who will do the deed or die?
'Tis a fireman of the land!
Then give them honor, give them fame,
A health to hands that fight the flame.

The method of rescue by a sack, illustrated by the Manchester "fire women" in Paris, was used in a primitive form in London at least fifty years ago, but, like almost all devices for safety, it requires too much judgment and coolness in the one who is to use it. American experts have therefore generally decided that none of the Old World methods are quite suited to the peculiar New World conditions, and many ingenious contrivances have been invented. After all, however, it is conceded that the firemen must do the work—unless there is genius and courage in the firemen, many lives will be lost, no matter how perfect the escapes provided. As it is, the ladder still remains the great reliance of those who must work outside the building.

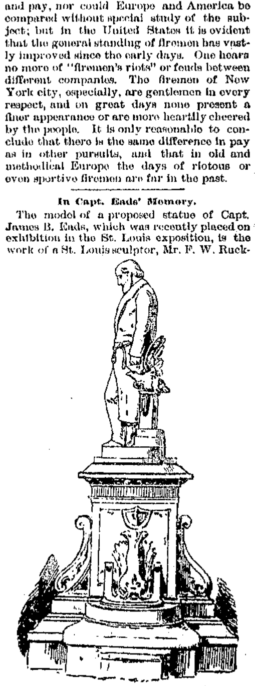


PORTUGUESE. LUXEMBOURG.

In the French reports of the late international congress nothing is said about rank and pay, nor could Europe and America be compared without special study of the subject; but in the United States it is evident that the general standing of firemen has vastly improved since the early days. One hears no more of "firemen's riots" or feuds between different companies. The firemen of New York city, especially, are gentlemen in every respect, and on great days none present a finer appearance or are more heartily cheered by the people. It is only reasonable to conclude that there is the same difference in pay as in other pursuits, and that in old and methodical Europe the days of riotous or even sportive firemen are far in the past.

In Capt. Eads' Memory.

The model of a proposed statue of Capt. James B. Eads, which was recently placed on exhibition in the St. Louis exposition, is the work of a St. Louis sculptor, Mr. F. W. Ruckstuhl. Capt. Eads was known as a bold and scientific thinker and as one of the first engineers of his time.



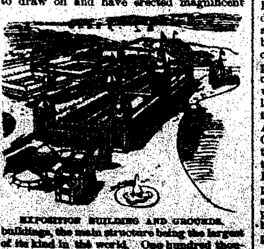
THE EADS STATUE.

The model represents the captain as at work, arrayed in his dressing gown, standing with a plan in one hand and a compass in the other. The expression of his features is that of a man in a thoughtful mood, imbibed with a bright idea which has just occurred to him. Lost in thought, he is unmindful of all around him, even of the eagle by his side, a symbol of the boldness of his intellect. The boat prows, the dolphins and scientific instruments suggest his calling. A bas relief of the bridge pier, the river and jetties recall to the spectator the grand engineering feats of this great genius. The fields of Capt. Eads' work—the ocean and the Mississippi—are symbolized by the boat prows, while the dolphins bear out the suggestion and will serve as fountains.

The proposed statue will be ten feet high and on a pedestal measuring twelve feet. The whole monument, with the foundation steps, will be twenty-five feet high.

The Detroit Exposition.

And now the city of Detroit will hold a grand international fair and exposition, the dates set therefor being Sept. 17 to 27 inclusive. The enterprise has had the benefit of the money and influence of many of Detroit's foremost citizens, and a site covering seventy acres has been secured at an expense of $150,000. The association had a fund of $500,000 to draw on and have erected magnificent buildings, the main structure being the largest of its kind in the world. One hundred thousand dollars has been set aside for prizes. The exhibition of live stock will be a magnificent one, occupying four buildings, each 300 feet square. Machinery, fancy breeds of fowls, dogs, etc., art, horse racing, baseball, [illegible] will be made special features. Canada is especially interested in this exhibition and her products will make a fine showing.



EXPOSITION BUILDING AND GROUNDS.

Professor Baldwin, the parachutist, will bring [illegible] from across the sea.

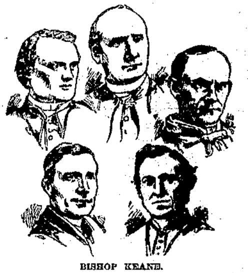
GREAT CATHOLIC EVENT.

THE FIRST AMERICAN CATHOLIC CONGRESS MEETS NOV. 10.

Pope Leo XIII Deeply Interested—No Such Complications Here as in Europe. Centennial of Bishop John Carroll, of Baltimore Diocese.

The arrangements for the most interesting as well as most important meeting of Catholic priests and laymen ever held in America, namely, the first American Catholic congress, which is to be opened in Baltimore, Nov. 10, have been about completed. A few insignificant details remain to be attended to, but practically all is ready for the great convention, the first of its kind ever held in this country. The full programme has been drawn up. All the invitations to attend the congress are out, and most of them have been replied to. The orator for the occasion of the grand recess in the old Baltimore cathedral has been selected. The papers that are to be read are for the most part prepared and are in the hands of the committee that is to have charge of them. So practically the committee in charge of the congress has nothing now to do except to attend to the applications for seats in the congress that are coming in and will continue to come in from all parts of the country until the time of its meeting.

This congress will be a new and an interesting event to Americans of all creeds, being the first of its kind, and it is perhaps for that reason that interest is growing in it as it is. Such meetings of laymen are, of course, common in Europe. Congresses have been already held this year in Austria, France, Belgium, Italy, Spain and Portugal with much success, and across the Atlantic, where the relations between church and state seem always so delicate, these meetings have been the subject of much discussion. Here in the United States, where there is no quarrel between church and state, and, in fact, but little friction between the various denominations, the meeting of a Catholic congress will not have the same sort of significance as in Europe. For many reasons, however, the gathering is certain to be both important and interesting.



BISHOP KEANE.
BISHOP FITZGERALD. BISHOP SPALDING.
CARDINAL GIBBONS. ARCHBISHOP IRELAND.

Despite his advanced years and fast increasing weakness Pope Leo XIII is said to take a lively interest in the coming conference. He has always favored the holding of similar congresses in Europe, and has never failed to give each meeting some direct assurance of his favor. In this respect he takes the same ground as Cardinal Manning, of England, who advocates the holding of a congress of all English speaking Catholics at some early day. It is the opinion of these dignitaries that new zeal and interest is aroused by these meetings, as it gives to the layman the feeling that he is a factor in the government of the church. It is going somewhat in the direction of Protestant bodies that give laymen a direct voice in the management of church affairs by allowing them to sit as delegates, with a vote in church conferences. Of course it is not going so far. Catholic laymen can have nothing to do with matters of church doctrine or discipline. Still, these congresses are a notable step toward a church democracy.

As the programme stands the celebration proper of the centennial of the establishment of the Catholic church in the United States will begin on Sunday, Nov. 10, and the business sessions of the congress will be held on the two following days.

Nov. 10 was fixed as the opening day of the big celebration for the reason that on Nov. 10, 1789, a few months after the inauguration of George Washington as first president of the United States, his friend and copatriot, John Carroll of Carrollton, was named as first bishop of Baltimore, the first episcopal diocese created in the United States by the Catholic church. The propriety of opening the celebration as arranged is, therefore, manifest. Nov. 10 being Sunday, there will be none but religious exercises.

The high mass that will be celebrated in the Baltimore cathedral on that day, with Cardinal Gibbons as the celebrant, will furnish an imposing pageant. Pope Leo XIII will be represented by a papal delegate, who is to come from Rome for that purpose in company with Mgr. O'Connell, who is now rector of the American chapel at Rome, a position which he won by his work as secretary of the last plenary council at Rome. Then besides the host of priests who will be present sixty American bishops will assist in the mass, and Cardinal Taschereau, of Quebec, is coming to take part in the ceremonies. The sermon on this occasion will be by Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia, considered the first Catholic pulpit orator in the United States. There is no possibility that the cathedral can hold the people who will throng to it on this day. The big New York cathedral itself would be hard put, too, to do it.

On Monday, Nov. 11, the business of the congress will begin. William J. Onahan, of Chicago, who is chairman of the committee on organization of the congress, will call the meeting to order at 10 o'clock, and, after prayer, ex-Governor John Lee Carroll, of Maryland, who comes of the Carrolls of Carrollton, of whom Bishop John Carroll was one, will be named temporary president. After his address the other temporary officers will be named. Committees on credentials, rules, resolutions, permanent organization and future congresses will be appointed. Two special committees will be named. One will wait on Cardinal Gibbons. The other will wait on President Harrison, the desire being to carry the respects to the chief executive as well as the head of the Catholic church in the United States. At the afternoon session the reports of the committees on rules, credentials and permanent organization will be heard. The selection and installment of permanent officers will come next, and the rest of the session will be given up to the reading of papers and to discussion of them.

Cardinal Gibbons will open the second day's session with an address, and then the reading of papers, discussion, and the reports of minor committees will follow. In the afternoon the committee on resolutions and the committee appointed to wait upon President Harrison will make their reports. Then there will be further discussion of matters general, when the congress will adjourn to go over to Washington to assist in the opening of the Catholic National university. The papers that will be read in the congress will be of a varied character, and their authors have been selected from all parts of the country. Here is a list of the papers, with the names of the men who will read them:

"Catholic Congresses,"	John Gilmary Shea, New York
"Lay Action in the Church,"	Maj. Henry F. Brownson, Detroit
"The Papacy,"	Charles J. Bonaparte, Baltimore
"The Catholic Press,"	George De Wolfe, Philadelphia
"Catholic Societies,"	Henry F. Spaunhorst, St. Louis
"Charities,"	Peter F. Foy, St. Louis
"The Catholic Editor,"	Maurice F. Egan, Notre Dame, Ind.
"The Work of Women and Children in the Industrial World,"	J. W. Cummings, Boston
"Catholic Education,"	Ex-Judge Edmund F. Dunne, Florida
"Church Music,"	Professor Heman Allen, Chicago

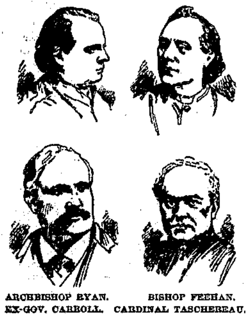
There will also be a historical article read by Richard Clark, of New York.

It will be seen that this will have a wide scope for discussion, but in addition to these subjects those appertaining to our social conditions, to immigration, and the matter of forming colonies in proper localities where the newly landed immigrant can assimilate and prosper without being subjected to the temptations attendant upon tenement house life in the large cities, and to the temperance problem, will also engage the attention of the delegates.

But there will be men in the congress well fitted to discuss any of these questions fully and well. As laymen and clergymen will meet on an equal footing where they can speak their mind, some interesting talk may be looked for.

The leading figure in the congress will, of course, be Cardinal Gibbons, by reason of his position as the chief dignitary of the Catholic church in the United States, and for other reasons. It is highly probable, too, that the cardinal will have considerable to say upon some of the questions that will come up. He has long been an earnest student of the social problems of the day. On the occasion of his last visit to Europe he gave much time and attention to the social conditions of France, Germany and Italy. Since his return he has traveled through the south, taking observations as he went. It is understood that he has some interesting things to say when this congress shall meet. The cardinal's intense Americanism will render his utterances the more interesting, and what he may say will be sure to receive wide notice.

But there will be other notables, too, in the congress. Archbishop Ryan, the orator of the church, will be present. Bishop Keane, formerly of Richmond, but now at the head of the Washington university, will be present, too, as will Archbishop Ireland, who is the leader of the Catholic temperance movement in this country; Bishops Spalding and Fitzgerald, of Little Rock, who are at the head of the movement to settle Catholic immigrants on the rich farming lands of the west, northwest and southwest, instead of in the overcrowded cities; Archbishop Feehan, of Chicago; Bishop McQuaid, of Rochester; John Gilmary Shea, the venerable Catholic historian; Bishop Loughlin, of Brooklyn, the senior American bishop; Maj. John D. Kieley, commendator of the order of St. Gregory; Bishop Ryan, of Buffalo, and other bishops and priests and laymen without number. That Cardinal Taschereau, of Quebec, a papal delegate, and Mgr. O'Connell will be present has already been stated.



ARCHBISHOP RYAN. BISHOP FEEHAN.
EX-GOV. CARROLL. CARDINAL TASCHEREAU.

The attendance at the congress will be very large. Any Catholic organization that can gain the approbation of the bishop of the diocese in which it exists can send delegates, and most of them are taking advantage of it. In the making up of the permanent officers of the congress the archbishop and the bishop are each allowed to name a vice president. It is now very certain that the congress will become a permanent body, with the control of its offices largely in the hands of laymen, as in Europe, and it is the hope of those who are starting it that it may eventually be able to cover a wide and useful field. Marking as it does practically the centennial of Catholicity in America, or at least in the United States, this particular meeting has an historical interest for us just now when we are scarcely through with thinking over past incidents of history as drawn out by the centennial of Washington's inauguration.

One hundred years ago, when Bishop Carroll was raised to the purple, there were but a handful of Catholics in the United States. There are about twice as many Catholic negroes alone—some 150,000—in the United States now as there were Catholics of all nationalities and races in this country in 1789. The Catholic population of the United States is generally rated at 10,000,000. Besides there are 1 cardinal, 13 archbishops, 71 bishops and 8,000 priests. So it will be noted that the congress that will represent this great organization will be a no small affair. Its proceedings will undoubtedly attract wide interest.

IT is probable that William B. Howard will be nominated for Member of Assembly by the Democrats in this district as he will doubtless make a better run than anyone else that the party can place in the field. At their convention in Oswego Wednesday last they adjourned to make a nomination for that office on October 12. Fred Summerville of Granby, Michael Taylor of Oswego and Lewis B. Taylor of Oswego Town were selected as State delegates.

THE Republican convention held in Saratoga last week is reported as a harmonious gathering. Hon. George B. Sloan of Oswego had the honor of being permanent chairman of the convention. The following was the state ticket nominated:

Secretary of State, John J. Gilbert, of Franklin.

State Treasurer, Ira M. Hedges of Rockland.

Comptroller, Martin W. Cook of Monroe.

Attorney General, James M. Varnum of New York.

State Engineer and Surveyor, William P. Van Rensselaer of Seneca.

Judge of the Court of Appeals, Judge Albert Haight of Erie.

HAYES DEAD.

Capt. Boyd of Mexico in Jail on the Charge of Murder.

As will be remembered Lorenzo S. Hayes on the night of Sept. 14 received many stabs at the hands of Landlord David Boyd of Mexico. The wounds were not thought to be dangerous and Hayes was taken to his home in Little Falls. Much surprise was manifested therefore when on Thursday last the police authorities were notified of his death, District Attorney Stowell at once swore out a warrant charging Boyd with murder in the first degree and the latter was soon after taken into custody and brought to Oswego. He is now locked up to await the action of the Grand Jury. Hayes made an ante mortem statement which conflicts materially with the affidavit made immediately after the affray: The substance of the statement is as follows: Hayes and Boyd were engaged playing a game of billiards at the latter's hotel in Mexico on the evening of Sept. 14, Hayes, being a good player, got the best of the game, which angered Boyd. The latter suggested a game of poker, but Hayes replied that they were to full to play cards and thought they had better go to bed, Boyd without any further talk, struck Hayes, knocking him down, and then commenced stabbing him with a knife. Hayes finally got away from him and went to his room, fastening the door. He remembered no more until aroused by physicians from an insensible condition. Hayes also swears he did not assault Boyd until after Boyd struck him. During the taking of the statement Hayes would have sinking spells, and gave it in parts until completed.

The injuries received by Hayes were principally on the head. The most serious of the cuts was one at the angle of the jaw on the left side of the head which had served the maxillary artery.

On Sunday, after the cutting, the compress which had been placed on the cut came off and Hayes came near bleeding to death. The physicians were with him constantly until his removel, and was considered out of danger.

Before leaving Mexico with his wife, Hayes made an affidavit entirely exonerating Boyd as follows:

STATE OF NEW YORK } ss
County of Oswego }

I, Lorenzo Hayes, being duly sworn, say my age is 53 years. I reside at Little Falls, N. Y. On the night of the 14th day of September, 1889 in company with Thomas Lirkins and David Boyd, I drank wine and played billiards until about eleven and a-half P. M. While on my way to retire and while part way up the stairs I had an altercation with David Boyd, who was at the foot of the stairs, about some matches. Boyd made an insulting remark to me, and I went down the stairs and clinched Boyd and threw him down upon the floor. While I had Boyd down upon the floor, some person cut me upon different parts of the body with a sharp instrument, but I am unable to say who it was. I further say that I was equally at fault in this matter with Mr. Boyd.

LORENZO S. HAYES.

Sworn before me, this }
17th day of September, 1889. }
C. C. BROWN, Notary Public.

The inquest was commenced at Utica Saturday and the following verdict rendered by the jury Monday:

"That said Lorenzo S. Hayes died on Sept. 26th from injuries which he received on the night of Sept, 14th from some sharp instrument in the hands of one David Boyd; that said Hayes was stopping at the Boyd house in Mexico, Oswego Co. N. Y."

The grand jury meets on Monday next and the case will be brought up for consideration. Boyd is reported as taking the matter coolly although he cannot but realize the desperate position in which the death of Hayes has placed him.

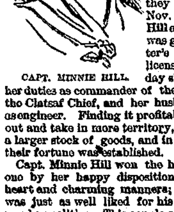
CAPT. MINNIE HILL.

She Is an Enterprising Commander of a Pacific Coast Steamer.

One of the Pacific coast steamers is commanded by a handsome young woman, who was born in Albany, Ore., in 1865, where she lived until a short time before her marriage with Charles Hill, in 1883. Mrs. Minnie Hill is a handsome brunette, about 5½ feet in height and weighs about 140 pounds.

At the time of their marriage Mr. Hill was purser of the steamer Joseph Kellogg. He remained in this position for three years, his wife helping him in his work. They lived economically and succeeded in saving $1,000, with which they purchased an old schooner and converted her into a trading boat, putting a small engine into her.

Mrs. Hill had studied navigation, and while helping her husband had gained a thorough knowledge of the Columbia and Willametti rivers. She next took out a second class master's license and easily passed her examination. In December, 1886, Mr. Hill obtained an engineer's license for the steamer Minnie Hill to run from Portland to Astoria, a distance of 110 miles. A stock of goods was then bought on credit and they started a trading business at the various points on the Columbia river.



CAPT. MINNIE HILL.

Mr. and Mrs. Hill were very successful in their venture. In the first year they paid off all their debts, and in the second year their carrying trade had assumed such proportions that they were obliged to purchase a larger steamer, for which they paid $3,000. Nov. 20, 1887, Mrs. Hill applied for and was granted a master's and pilot's license. That same day she entered on her duties as commander of their new vessel, the Clatsaf Chief, and her husband went on as engineer. Finding it profitable to branch out and take in more territory, they shipped a larger stock of goods, and in another year their fortune was established.

Capt. Minnie Hill won the heart of every one by her happy disposition, her kindly heart and charming manners; her husband was just as well liked for his upright and manly qualities. This couple and their trading were known all over the Columbia and Willametti rivers. In another year they bought the steamer Gen. Newde for $7,500. She is 111.5 feet in length, 20.5 feet beam and has a depth of hold of 5 feet. Their business is succeeding better than ever, and they now nearly carry every article that can be found in a general merchandise store. Mr. Hill runs the lower deck, where he attends to the men's wants and the captain takes care of the women on the upper deck, and is said to be an excellent hand at making a shrewd bargain. Mrs. Hill steers and her husband gallantly responds to the bells, and "goes ahead" or "slows down" as she orders, and there is no happier couple. Their home is in Portland, where it is said they have accumulated property to the amount of about $25,000.

Composite Portrait.

Composite photography has yielded some very interesting results, but it may be doubted if any such picture has been more curious than the portrait of the sultan of Zanzibar. The manner of its production, as described by Mr. Johnston, is very simple. It is a full length oil painting of his majesty, and is done in duplicate.

These two paintings are identical in every detail. They were manufactured in Paris. The sayyid had a photograph taken of himself during his visit to London. It was in a sitting posture. He sent it to Paris with the order that it was to be enlarged standing, and then converted into two oil paintings.

The Parisian artist, in no way at a loss, cut off the head of the sitting sultan and stuck it on to the decapitated portrait of some Algerian Arab photographed erect. The combination was enlarged, and in due time gave rise to the two oil paintings in the palace at Zanzibar.—Youth's Companion.

THAT HACKING COUGH [illegible]

(From our [illegible] Correspondent.)

Washington, Oct. 2, 1889.

Corporal Tanner's [illegible] published letter to "Private" Dalzell, of Ohio, reflecting upon his removal from the Commissionership of Pensions kills what little chance he had of retaining even the pretended friendship of the administration. The letter is marked "confidential", and there is a postscript asking the Private not to say anything about it, but that will hardly save Mr. Tanner, who ought to know Dalzell thoroughly. It was while Mr. Tanner was in office that Dalzell published his letter informing all old soldiers that they were entitled to certain additional bounty, to which the law gives no title whatever. That letter created an enormous amount of trouble to the Treasury department and the Pension office alike, and was deemed at the time to be little less than a deliberate sensational lie, or else Dalzell must have been crazy when he wrote it. Dalzell is a blatherskite and Mr. Tanner should have know it. Yet he wrote a confidential letter to him, reflecting upon the administration.

If the letter, as published, is correct, it show how little Mr. Tanner understands the actual workings of the Pension Bureau. He writes to Dalzell this, among other things: "My second order was thereafter in the settlement of a pension claim the word of a private, if he was a man of good character and standing, should amount to as much in the settlement of a claim as the word of a man who has worn shoulder straps." Though the testimony of a commissioned officer was for years demanded, where it could be supplied, the testimony of a reputable private has not for the past ten years, been regarded as of less weight than that of a reputable commissioned officer and there never was a time when the uncorroborated testimony of one commissioned officer would establish the origin of a disability in service. Owing to the defective and bungling English in one of the Pension Bureau's official circulars it would seem as if the testimony of an officer was of more value than that of a private, but Corporal Tanner should know better.

In fact Mr. Tanner misunderstands the nature of his order. His order was to the effect that the evidence of one comrade, "taken in connection with the testimony of the claimant himself, if reputable," should be sufficient in any case, thus throwing the granting of a pension practically upon the unsupported testimony of one man, for it would be bad law as well as bad equity to hold that the claimant's statement could be regarded as evidence. The rule that two disinterested witnesses are required to establish a fact as to any claim against the government permeates the departmental practice and Mr. Tanner's childish effort to make the claimant himself such as a "witness" was well met by Secretary Noble's reversal. In supposing that the uncorroborated testimony of one commissioned officer was enough to establish origin in pension claims, Mr. Tanner betrays only a small portion of his delightful and extensive ignorance.

The official announcement from Deer Park of Ex-Congressman Warner's unqualified refusal of the Commissionership of Pensions leaves that vexed question as far from settlement as ever and there is no prospect that the President will settle the matter until his return to Washington, which he does well, by the way, to make as early as possible. If he is not callous to the criticism of his unreasonably long absence from the seat of government. In the mean time the Commissionership is an unsolved problem.

The Republican Congressmen who happened to be in the city are regaining hope with the President's announcement that he will return to Washington to-morrow, probably. For several weeks there has been bitter complaint on the part of the visiting Congressmen at the alleged unnecessary delay of departmental officials in the settlement of local officers. At the Post-office department everyone seems afraid to move in the absence of Assistant Postmaster General Clarkson, and in other departments the officials will not put forward hand or foot save at the order of the President. The Republican politicians of all classes are clamorous for the immediate turning over of all offices held by Democrats, and in states like Ohio the danger threatens in no uncertain tones, for the people will hold their representatives in Congress personally responsible. These representatives, in their turn, rush on to Washington and do their best and meet defeat.

The improvements in the magnificent residence purchased by Vice-President Morton are approaching completion, and it is said that the Mortons will make Washington their permanent winter home, abandoning their city house in New York.

[illegible] Here is home testimony; investigate it; you will find it worth while to do so. There is nothing like Brown's Sarsaparilla for all forms of kidney disease. Mrs. W. W. Rider, Orono, Conn., Feb 26 1889: "I have taken your medicine and know it to be good." If you have a dull, bearing down pain, extending down the inside of thighs to the knees, having a feeling as though you were broken in two, backache, or a tired all gone feeling, you may be assured you have kidney disease and unless help is obtained you will grow worse until you are beyond relief. Cheese Market Report.

(From the Utica Herald.)

AT UTICA.

UTICA, Sept. 30.

The market to-day was the most active and satisfactory of the season to dairymen. Prices started at 10c. and gradually worked upwards to 10⅛ to 10⅝c. for fancy stock, with rumors of a rifle more paid for small cheese. Salesmen evidently considered it a good day to sell, as a number of them put in several days' more cheese than their regular shipment would have been. On the other hand, a few have not yet closed out their August stock, and seem to be in no hurry to do so. But they all understand that the present market depends almost entirely upon the home trade, and that if this should slacken up there would very likely be a set-back in prices. It can hardly be said that exporters are doing much to help the market, and it is a fact that they took some of the most expensive cheese sold here to-day. White stock was in rather more favor than colored, and small sized cheese, both full cream and partly skimmed, was actively bargained for.

Following is our usual table:

Lots	Boxes	Price.
4	400	9¾
3	210	9⅞
60	6,186	10c
1	50	10⅛
21	1,697	10¼
6	1,435	10⅜
32	3,268	10½
9	465	10⅝
6	825	p.t
152	14,736
Farm dairy	1,235
Total	15,971

Transactions one year ago 14,315 boxes, ruling price 6¾c. Two years ago 13,528 boxes, ruling price, 11¼c.

There were sales of 70 packages creamery butter at 23 @ 27c. Bulk went at 23c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Sept. 30.

Cheese—When the market opened to-day, it was at once apparent that prices had materially strengthened, and it was soon reported that the advance would be fully one cent per pound. But buyers did not concede this when it came to actual business, and it will be seen from the list of sales that the advance was fairly ⅝c. This is the usual rise that comes with the first offerings of September cheese, and it has probably come to stay. Some even predict a further advance because of the desire of many buyers to lay in a stock of the fine September cheese. The yield of milk in this section is about an average one.

Following is the list of Sales:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price,
1	54	9¾
48	3,555	10c
22	1,741	10¼
55	4,566	10½
13	860	Com.
138	10,805
Farm dairies	1,275
Total.	12,080

Farm Dairies—The sales of farm dairy cheese were at 10 to 10½c., the bulk sold at 10½c. There were 1,275 boxes.

Butter—Sixty-one packages of farm dairy sold at 19c., to 21c. The bulk at 20c. Creamery butter went at 23c., and on commission, 25 packages changing hands.

HISTORY OF UTAH.

From the earliest period to the present time.

BY HUBERT HOWE BANCROFT.

One of the most remarkable volumes of History ever written. Of thrilling interest and replete with startling episodes. The true inwardness of Mormonism now for the first time presented.

It is safe to say that now for the first time, by the graphic pen of Mr. Bancroft, the story of Mormonism is fully told. It is every word true, and it is a story beside which the tales of romance become tame. Hither to the one-half has not been told. Many have asked, but never before has the question been answered. What is Mormonism? Not since the days of Christ or Mahomet have there been such strange developments.

Agents Wanted Everywhere. There is no question so absorbing in the minds of all classes, high and low, as the evolution of the hierarchy, with its cities of saints, its natural wealth, and its strange social phenomena. Any good, active, earnest worker can make

No one doubts that the Kabo corset lasts a year without breaking or kinking or shifting a "bone," because we refund the money in case of a single item of failure in these respects.

And no one doubts that the Kabo answers its purpose and suits the wearer, because, if it don't, we refund the money on call within a week or two or three.

It is the unbreakable corset, the Kabo. It is the un-wear-out-able corset, the Kabo. It is the corset that suits, the Kabo.

The only question is: Do you want the Kabo kind of a corset?

We have a primer on Corsets for you at the store.

Masonic [illegible]

Annual Convention of the 19th Masonic District—Reception to the Grand Master.

The annual convention of the 19th Masonic District was held in Fulton last week. The event was one of much interest to Masons generally and especially to those within the 19th district which embraces the counties of Oswego, Onondaga, Cayuga and Cortland comprising 42 lodges and a membership of 4,200.

On Thursday evening and Friday forenoon and afternoon the exemplification of the work was carried on by R. W., George H. Raymond, Grand Lecturer of the State of New York and a large number of delegates from different lodges in the district witnessed the work. R. W., James K. Stockwell of Oswego Deputy Grand Master was present.

On Friday evening a reception was given to M. W. John W. Vrooman of Herkimer, Grand Master of Masons of the State of New York. On this occasion two car loads of masons from Oswego were present coming by special train and returning at midnight.

Among those in attendance representing different lodges were:

J. K. Stockwell, district deputy, Pastmaster William Hancock, Oswego; K. H. Freeman, W. M. Beard, C. E. Hale, J. M. Ransier, A. F. Wilcox jr., from Military lodge No. 93, Manlius; George H. Russel, Liverpool, L. D. Scicsco, Baldwinsville; Wallace D. Rhines, Constantia; George S. Sands, Cortland; Samuel Andrews, West Troy; William Howard, Turners Falls; E. J. Lewis, Cleveland; Fred S. Beebe, Constantia; S. Soule, Fort Brewerton; G. E. Fisher, Phœnix; John Lucas, Central Sqare; E. D. Burton, Williamstown; W. H. Cornwell, Skaneateles; E. V. Emens, Hannibal and many others.

Electric Lights.

Oswego Falls is in darkness because tne fund for lights been used up, and the price for electric lights has been raised to $47 per light. A special meeting has been called of the taxable inhabitants for Oct. 9th to vote upon raising $564. for the purpose of maintaining the electric lights for a term of six months. The rise in price from $24.49 to $47 seems large to a majority of the taxpayers across the river and drawing our inference from what we hear the resolution will be voted down. We think Oswego Falls should keep up the street lighting and if possible to secure lights at a figure less than the company which now does the lighting furnishes it, to secure it.

The Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg railroad took excursionists yesterday to New York from all points north of Utica. The patronage was enormous and seven trains were chartered. Young Men's Christian Association.

We wish to present some figures concerning the work of the Association during September. The rooms have been open from 8:45 a. m. to 5:30 p. m., each day except Sunday when they have been open from 3:30 to 10 p. m. because of our meeting for men which is held from 4 to 5 o'clock. The average daily attendance was 32 9-13, making a total of 800 for the month. Young men's meetings, average 37 3-5, total 188; calls, business and otherwise 199; committee meetings 7; subscriptions received 12; renewals membership 6; new members 5; No. letters and cards written 44.

It is with much pleasure that we present the above facts and figures and it is with renewed energy that we begin this month because of the encouragement received as we added up the figures in the different columns, our statistical record. Many of the columns in this book have no figures in them, because of our liimited means and rooms. No better or more attractive rooms could be desired than those we are in at present, but we need more of them, in which to develope our work in its four-fold nature. We expect ere another year has passed, to be able to secure such, with a thoroughly fitted art gymnasium attached and rooms in which to conduct Bible and educational classes, etc.

We neglected mentioning last week, that Rev. Geo. A. Hall General Secretary of this state, paid us a visit on Friday the 20th inst. His words of counsel and commendation were gratefully received. On Friday evening of this week the Woman's auxilary of the association will hold a reception. The rooms will be open from 7 to 10 to the general public, during part of which time entertainment of a literary and musical character will be furnished by local talent. The object of the reception is to aid the general Secretary in getting acquainted with the people of Fulton and Oswego Falls, and vice versa. A cordial invitation is extended to one and all to come that we may spend a social evening together, and get better acquainted with each other. As usual the meeting for men only will be held on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Let every man obey the command "Come" which has been chosen as topic, as found in Matt. XI: 28. All are welcome. ⁂

A TERRIBLE accident occurred on the Central road near Palatine Bridge last Saturday morning in which four persons were killed and seven injured. The cause came from one train following too close to another on the same track and going in the same direction. The four tracks of the Central make accidents few and far between on that road but the block system should now be put in force so that trains could not follow so closely to each other.

WORTH KNOWING.

Several weeks should elapse between the sowing of grain and of the grass seeds.

Oats and hay have been more or less damaged by rain, although large crops have been secured.

[illegible] sowing of grain has never been settled, though the majority of farmers sow early.

Save plenty of dry leaves. They make good bedding for stock and will be found covenient for various purposes.

Do not let the frosts catch the green tomatoes if they are to be used for pickles.

Keep your checkens tame. They do better in every way; besides it is a great deal of satisfaction.

"Grapes, picked and wilted, then buried in stone jars three or four feet below the surface, will come out with stems green and fruit plump and bright," affirms the Agriculturist.

Don't put off too long the day for beginning to feed stock. Cattle are too often left to shift for themselves, and to pick around and take food they would not touch when pasturage was good.

A judicial allowance of bran or oats at this season of the year will increase the milk supply and fortify the cow's system for larger production during the fall and winter.

Cotton seed, when fed alone to milch cows sometimes imparts an unpleasant taste to the milk. Dick Taylor, Texas, tells in American Agriculturist that if the ration is changed occasionally to turnips or carrots or sweet potatoes twice a week—or, better still, a few cut up turnips or sweet potatoes mixed with every feed of seed—no such trouble will occur.

Some of us, says an exchange, are trying to make money out of sheep with poor care, poor breeding and poor feeding and trusting to luck. The time has been when this might be done, but we cannot risk it now. Luck has gone back on us, and we too shall be worse than we are now.

It costs less to raise a colt than may be supposed. The colt requires attention, however, as it must be curried and properly stabled, but with plenty of pasture but little other food is required, except an allowance of grain daily. If well bred the colt should bring a good price when three years old.

A Challenge.—The proprietors of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup hereby challenge the Faculty to prescribe a remedy more effective than theirs.

I cordially recommend Savation Oil to all suffering with rheumatism.

THE PROPER THING.

Light otter fur promises to be a fashionable trimming.

Full sleeves of velvet and loose lapped fronts are on very handsome cloth jackets.

Very dressy long cloaks of cloth are fitted to the figure like a costume and have full sleeves.

In the new faced cloths imported for tailor gowns several shades of purple are shown as novelties.

Very dressy cloth coats of single-breasted cuirass shape are made of fancy colored cloth trimmed with fur of contrasting color.

New muffs of fur of long fleece have this deep fleece arranged to fall in a point in front below the muff, giving a very pretty effect.

Sailor jackets for autumn and winter are much longer than they have been for several years, fitting smoothly over the hips and even length all around.

Short mantles are made with high-shouldered side pieces that are turned under square below, to form sling sleeves over a long mantilla front of a different fabric.

Tulle and Brussels net for evening dresses have large gauze-like dots all over them, and one edge for the foot of the skirt is pointed in deep vandykes, with rows of dots close together following along the points.

The new purples, plum and prune shades, are made into very elegant tea gowns of repped silk, with a vest and pannels of rich lampas, the ground purple strewn with orchids, asters, or other large flowers. The back has princesse breadths, while the front princesse breadths, has a pointed jacket waist, with velvet revers, and the sleeves are very full and long.

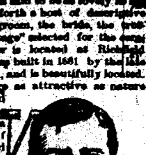
EMMONS BLAINE MARRIED.

McCormick Cottage at Richfield Springs.
The Trousseau.

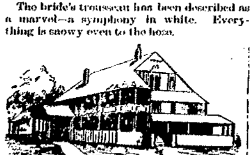
The marriage of Emmons Blaine to Anita McCormick, who is said to be as lovely as she is rich, has called forth a host of descriptive articles upon the groom, the bride, the trousseau and the "cottage" selected for the ceremony. The latter is located at Richfield Springs, N. Y., was built in 1881 by the late Cyrus McCormick, and is beautifully located. The grounds are as attractive as nature and well directed [illegible] can make them, with a large number of evergreen and other beautiful foliage trees about the lawn, and the whole is bordered with a carefully tended hedge. The drives are smooth and artistically laid out. The mansion is not of the fancy pattern, but rather of substantial and enduring beauty. It is a three story building and finished on the exterior in a manner which presents the appearance of natural wood.



EMMONS BLAINE.

On the east, south and west sides is a broad veranda, which is double on the southwest. From this a good view of the town and surroundings is obtained. The first floor of the house contains a magnificent parlor, finished in natural wood and furnished with the richest drapings; a reception room, a dining room and an elaborately finished hall. Nothing that wealth can furnish is lacking to make these rooms beautiful and attractive.

The bride's trousseau has been described as a marvel—a symphony in white. Everything is snowy even to the hose.



THE M'CORMICK COTTAGE.

Emmons Blaine himself, who is described as a "good fellow," said thereof: "It's something white. It is glossy, and I guess it is satin; but, mind you, I don't say that I know. It was merely by chance that I had a glimpse of a sample of the fabric, anyhow, and I won't warrant you that there hasn't been an entire change of plan."

After much persuasion he plaintively said of his own clothing for the momentous occasion: "Well, the trousers are middling drab, the vest is the same cloth as the coat and the necktie is a shade or two lighter than the trousers—and there you really are, aren't you?"

DR. FERNANDO CRUZ.

The New Guatemalan Envoy and Minister to the United States.

Great preparations have been made by the state department at Washington for the congress of nations, which convenes there on the 2d of October. The conference was first suggested by Mr. Blaine when secretary of state under Gen. Garfield's brief presidency. It will be one for conference and debate only, and the deliberations will be published in three languages—English, Spanish and Portuguese. Seventeen republics and one empire will be represented in the congress—the United States, Mexico, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Salvador, United States of Colombia, Bolivia, Ecuador, Venezuela, Peru, Chili, Argentine Republic, Uruguay, Paraguay and the empire of Brazil, a very democratic one. It will be composed of sixty-five to seventy delegates, the United States appointing ten, the largest number.

One of the first delegates appointed to the congress was Dr. Fernando Cruz, the recently accredited envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary from Guatemala to Washington. Dr. Cruz is a progressive diplomat, equally so as his popular predecessor, Senor Sanjianesta. Senor Cruz is on the shady side of 40, and first saw the light of day in Guatemala city, the capital of the republic, in 1845. He was educated at the University, where he graduated in law with the degree L. D., and was afterwards a professor in the law department. Dr. Cruz has filled important positions in his own country, having been secretary of the interior several times, and more recently secretary for foreign affairs. As might be expected, he is a diplomat of varied accomplishments and linguistic attainments, speaking, besides his own native tongue, Italian, Latin, French and English, so that he will be enabled to read nearly all of Mr. Blaine's authorized state department reports without the aid of copies of "Ollendorf's Without a Master" and "Lempriere's Classical Dictionary," for he excels all the other republican envoys in this particular at Washington.

Here is a map of the site that has been chosen by the New York World's fair site committee. It will be seen to include Morningside park, a part of Riverside park and a part of Central park, beside some other property. There is a chance that it may be modified somewhat by the general committee, for there is some dissatisfaction with it.

Bright's Disease.
A Ten-Year-Old Child Saved After the Failure of Four Physicians.

My little girl, ten years of age, was taken sick in March, 1886, with scarlet fever. When recovering she took a severe cold, which developed Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. Her ankles, feet and eyes were terribly swollen; she had a burning fever, and all the symptoms of an aggravated case of Bright's Disease. Four of our best physicians attended her, but without success, and

Her Life was Despaired of.

But a mother's love and prayers surmount all difficulties, and I determined to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y. This was a last resort, and I hoped, although my little daughter's case was a very severe one, that the Favorite Remedy would do for her what it had done for others [illegible]

HISTORY OF UTAH.

From the earliest period to the present time.

BY HUBERT HOWE BANCROFT.

One of the most remarkable volumes of History ever written. Of thrilling interest and replete with startling episodes. The true inwardness of Mormonism now for the first time presented.

It is safe to say that now for the first time, by the graphic pen of Mr. Bancroft, the story of Mormonism is fully told. It is every word true, and it is a story beside which the tales of romance become tame. Hitherto the one-half has not been told. Many have asked, but never before has the the question been answered. What is Mormonism? Not since the days of Christ or Mahomet have there been such strange developments.

The TORTURES OF DESPAIR

Can be no worse than the agony of a man or woman troubled with Sick Headache. The terrible pain; the nausea; the lack of all interest in life; the disgust with everything and everybody; the world can afford no pleasure to any one when suffering from Sick Headache.

Why have Doctors never been able to cure this fearful trouble?

Because they have never discovered the right thing!

Have they tried?

Yes, for hundreds of years.

But a Chemist of Troy, N. Y., discovered the remedy, and the remedy that will cure in EVERY CASE arising from a deranged stomach.

Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders

Go right to the Seat of the trouble—the Stomach. They are purely vegetable, and contain NO narcotics. They act with wonderful promptness and never leave any bad after-effect.

Phillip Phillips, the "Singing Pilgrim," says of them:—"I cannot tell you how glad I am to get something that relieves my wife of her headaches."

Rev. George F. Pentecost, D. D., says:—"I have received many benedictions from those to whom I have given these powders."

The late Rev. C. P. Sheldon, says:—"They are a wonderful remedy, and all they claim to be."

A SAMPLE

of these wonderful Powders will be sent FREE to any sufferer from this terrible affliction, or they can be procured of all reputable druggists at 25 cents a box.

Will deliver free of charge, show cards and samples to any druggist who will keep the card in his window and give the samples to the most desperate cases.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., Feb. 18, 1888.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.
Gentlemen:—I have used your Kendall's Spavin Cure for Corns and Scratches and I can say I never saw its equal. I have cured some of the worst cases of Corns that a horse could be subject to. I have been having such good success with your liniment that I would almost as soon a horse would have Corns as not. I have recommended it to several with like success. I had a large Pacer with a white hoof forward and had Corns in both quarters as large as fifty-cent pieces. I cured him in three weeks, so when I sold him to an expert horseman he never knew the horse ever had a Corn. I will give $100.00 for the worst case of Corns that I can't cure with your Kendall's Spavin Cure.
Respectfully yours, PETER MALONEY.

BULL'S HEAD, N. Y., June 3, 1889.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.
Gents:—I think it my duty to say to you that I have thoroughly tried your Kendall's Spavin Cure and have done wonders for myself in removing hard Callouses from horses' limbs. I think it one of the best liniments I ever used.
Very respectfully yours,
JOHN F. SHULTS, V. S.

MUNNSVILLE, PA., May 13, 1889.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.
Gents:—I have been using Kendall's Spavin Cure for some time and have cured three or four Spavins. I think it is the best medicine for horse flesh that I have ever used and also for Corns on human flesh. It will remove Corns entirely without pain. Very respectfully yours, L. A. McWILLIAMS.

The Old Man Dreams.

Oh, for an hour of youthful joy!
Give back my twentieth spring
I'd rather laugh a bright-haired boy,
Than reign a gray-haired king!

Off with the spoils of wrinkled age!
Away with learning's crown!
Tear out life's wisdom-written page
And dash its trophies down!

One moment let my life blood stream
From boyhood's foot of flame!
Give me one giddy, reeling dream
Of life, love and fame.

My listning angel heard the prayer,
And calmly smiling, said:
"If I but touch thy silvered hair.
Thy hasty wish hath sped.

"But is there nothing in thy track
To bid thee fondly stay,
While the swift seasons hurry back
To find the wished for day?"

Ah! truest soul of womankind!
Without thee what were life?
One bliss I cannot leave behind;
I'll take—my—precious wife!

The angel took a sapphire pen
And wrote in rainbow dew;
The man would be a boy again
And be a husband, too!

"And is there nothing yet unsaid
Before the change appears?
Remember, all their gifts have fled
With those dessolving years.

"Why, yes; for memory would recall
My fond paternal joys;
I could not bear to leave them all:
I'll take my—girls—and boys!"

The smiling angel dropped his pen
"Why, this will never do;
The man would be a boy again,
And be a father, too!"

And so I laughed—my laughter woke
The household with the noise—
And wrote my dream when morning broke
To please the gray-haired boys.

—Oliver Wendell Holmes

Marjorie.

"Oh, dear!" said Farmer Brown one day,
"I never saw such weather!
The rain will spoil my meadow hay
And all my crops together."
His little daughter climbed his knee;
"I guess the sun will shine," said she.

"But if the sun" said Farmer Brown,
"Should bring a dry Speptember,
With vines and stalks all wilted down,
And fields scorched to an ember"
"Why, then, 'twill rain," said Marjorie,
The little girl upon his knee.

"Ah, me!" said Farmer Brown, that Fall,
"Now, what's the use of living?
No plan of mine succeeds at all—
Why, next month comes Thanksgiving!"
"And then, of course," said Marjorie,
"We're all as happy as can be."

"Well, what should I be thankful for?"
Asked Farmer Brown. "My trouble
This Summer has grown more and more,
My losses have been double.
I have nothing left"—Why, you've got me!"
Said Majorie, upon his knee.

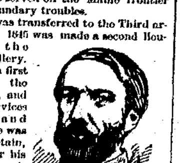
GEN. DANIEL H. HILL.

Decease of a Well Known Southern Writer and Soldier.

Gen. Daniel H. Hill, who recently died at Charlotte, N. C., was born at Hill's iron works, York district, S. C., July 12, 1821. His ancestors came from Ireland and settled in York, Pa., and William Hill, his grandfather, established the Hills iron works.

Developing a love for military science early in life, Daniel H. entered the United States Military academy in 1838, and graduating four years later, was assigned to the First artillery, ranking as a second lieutenant, with which he served on the Maine frontier during the boundary troubles.

In 1843 he was transferred to the Third artillery, and in 1845 was made a second lieutenant in the Fourth artillery. He served as a first lieutenant in the Mexican war, and for gallant services at Conturas and Churubusco he was brevetted captain, and major for his services at Chapultepec. He was a member of the storming party at Chapultepec, where he and Lieut. James Stewart had a foot race for the honor of being the first to enter a strongly occupied Mexican fort. Just after the Mexican war he resigned his commission, and in 1849 was elected professor of mathematics in Washington college, Lexington, Va.



DANIEL H. HILL.

For six years Gen. Hill remained at Washington college, and then for five years he held a similar chair in Davidson college, N. C., and thence he left to take charge as superintendent of the North Carolina Military institute at Charlotte. At the beginning of the civil war he was made colonel of the First North Carolina regiment, C. S. V., in command of which he won the battle of Big Bethel on June 10, 1861. He was made brigadier general soon after, and was made major general in March, 1862. He distinguished himself in the seven days' battles on the peninsula. During the Gettysburg campaign he commanded the defenses of Richmond and Petersburg.

On July 11, 1863, Gen. Hill was commissioned lieutenant general and placed at the head of a corps in Bragg's army. He shared the fortunes of the Army of the Tennessee at Chickamauga, until he surrendered with Gen. J. E. Johnston in April, 1865.

For some years after the war he edited at Charlotte a monthly magazine, The Land We Love, and afterward a newspaper, The Southern Home. He was appointed president of the Arkansas Industrial university at Fayetteville, Ark. Gen. Hill contributed to current literature and was the author of a work on algebra.

Many cases of rheumatism, which have resisted the skill of the profession, have promply yielded to that wonderful remedy, Salvation Oil. 25 cents.

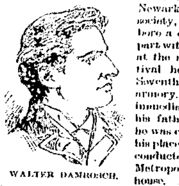
WALTER DAMROSCH.

The Talented Musician Who Is to Wed Margaret Blaine.

Secretary James G. Blaine has six children, and it appears that they were nearly all seized at the same time with the desire to marry. Emmons has married Miss McCormick, the Chicago heiress; James G., Jr., did marry the actress, Miss Marie Nevins, and is as a single man once more, and Miss Margaret Blaine is soon to marry the musician, Walter J. Damrosch. Of the others, Miss Hattie remains fancy free, as far as reported; another is the wife of Maj. Coppinger, U. S. A., and Walker is assistant secretary of state. Miss Harriet is the second daughter, has traveled abroad extensively, and made the acquaintance of Mr. Damrosch during the noted Carnegie coaching tour, in which both participated.

The Damrosch family is as noted in music as the Blaines are in politics. The father, Dr. Leopold Damrosch, attained a high reputation in Europe and endeared himself to many in New York by his refinement and genius. His family consisted of Frank, director of the chorus of the Metropolitan opera house and president of the New York Teachers' Musical association, Walter and three daughters. One of these is already noted as a pianist. Walter Damrosch was born Jan. 30, 1862, and showed the family talent at a very early age. At the age of 15 he went on a concert tour with Wilhelmj, furnishing the piano accompaniment.

In 1881 he was elected conductor of the Newark Harmonic society, and in 1881 bore a conspicuous part with his father at the musical festival held in the Seventh regiment armory. In 1884, immediately after his father's death, he was called to fill his place as musical conductor at the Metropolitan opera house. As a musician he is a devoted "Wagnerian," and has given much time to lecturing on and teaching the symbolism and musical significance of Wagner's "Ring of the Niebelung." It is said that his profits on these lectures amounted to $17,000.



WALTER DAMROSCH.

In 1888 Mr. Carnegie invited him to join the coaching party, which consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Blaine and the Misses Blaine, Miss Dodge ("Gail Hamilton") and Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie. There could not have been a more favorable field for a young lover who had any "go" in him. It is said that the preliminaries were settled while the young couple wandered alone over the grounds of Cluny castle, Mr. Carnegie's place, and that the final arrangements were made at Bar Harbor the past season. Mr. Blaine was favorably impressed at the start with the young musician.

The sudden death of Dr. Damrosch at the comparatively early age of 52 saddened all lovers of music in the country, as he was looked upon as a sort of martyr to his art. He died of overwork. It had been his ambition to see German opera thoroughly naturalized and presented in a fitting manner to the American people, and but a few days before his death, while leading a chorus of 300 singers, he was so exhausted that he had to cling to his music stand for support. He was a native of Posen, and studied medicine at Berlin, but meeting by accident the great Abbe Liszt, he at once changed his plan of life and became a musician. It was he who brought Mme. Materna to New York, for twenty nights, at $1,000 a night and expenses to and from the country. His wonderful success at the Metropolitan is still fresh in the public memory, and his son appears to have inherited all his talent and energy.

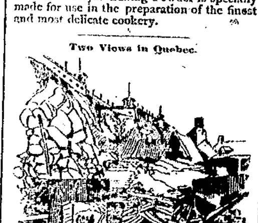
Dumplings with Royal Baking Powder

No dessert is more delicious, wholesome and appetizing than a well-made dumpling, filled with the fruit of the season. By the use of the Royal Baking Powder the crust is always rendered light, flaky, tender and digestible. Dumplings made with it, baked or boiled, will be dainty and wholesome, and may be eaten steaming hot with perfect impunity.

RECEIPT.—One quart of flour; thoroughly mix with it three teaspoons of Royal Baking Powder and a small teaspoon of salt; rub in a piece of butter or lard the size of an egg, and then add one large potato, grated in the flour; after the butter is well mixed, stir in milk and knead to the consistency of soft biscuit dough; break off pieces of dough large enough to close over four quarters of an apple (or other fruit as desired) without rolling, and lay in an earthen dish (or steamer) and steam until the fruit is tender. Bake if preferred.

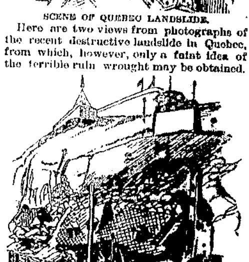
In all receipts calling for cream of tartar and soda, substitute Royal Baking Powder. Less trouble, never fails, makes more appetizing and wholesome food and is more economical. Royal Baking Powder is specially made for use in the preparation of the finest and most delicate cookery.

Two Views in Quebec.



SCENE OF QUEBEC LANDSLIDE.

Here are two views from photographs of the recent destructive landslide in Quebec, from which, however, only a faint idea of the terrible ruin wrought may be obtained.



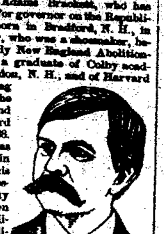
VIEW FROM THE NORTH.

The work of clearing away and repairing is going ahead very rapidly.

The average white man who lives to be 70 years old has spent over a year of his life in shaving and two more on top of that in getting his hair cut. This is where the Indian is a long way ahead. He hasn't any whiskers, and lets the coyotes chaw his hair off when it gets down to his tomahawk handle.—Detroit Free Press

Named by Massachusetts Republicans.

John Quincy Adams Brackett, who has been nominated for governor on the Republican ticket, was born in Bradford, N. H., in 1842. His father, who was a shoemaker, belonged to the early New England Abolitionists. The son is a graduate of Colby academy in New London, N. H., and of Harvard university, being graduated with the class of 1865, and of the Harvard Law school in 1868. Since then he has been engaged in the practice of his profession in Boston. For twenty years he has been prominent in politics as a Republican. From 1873 to 1876 he was a member of the city government and he then went to the state legislature, where he served as member of the house four terms, and in 1885 was elected its speaker. The next year he was elected lieutenant governor of the state and reelected in 1887 and 1888.



J. Q. A. BRACKETT.

Mr. Brackett is of medium height and muscular. His head is very large and covered with iron gray hair. He has a deep bass voice and is a fluent speaker.

Height of Sea Waves.

Carefully repeated experiments made by an experienced English navigator at Santander, on the north coast of Spain, showed the crest of the sea waves in a prolonged and heavy gale of wind to be 42 feet high, and allowing the same for the depth between the waves would make a height of 84 feet from crest to base. The length from crest to crest was found to be 380 feet. Other estimates of the waves in the South Atlantic during great storms give a height of 50 feet from the crests and 400 feet for length. In the North sea the height of crest seldom exceeds 10 feet and the length 150 feet.—New York Star.

That's Correct.

A justice of the peace in North Carolina lately fined a British captain $25 for striking one of his sailors while voyaging in the Indian ocean. The captain kicked for awhile, but had to pay or go to jail. That's correct. The American eagle should hover o'er all the earth and the waters thereof, and an American J. P. should make his fees whenever occasion offers.—Detroit Free Press.

A WONDERFUL RELIC.

ANCIENT, MYSTERIOUS, PROFOUND.

WHAT
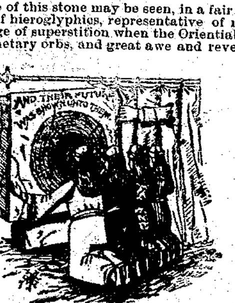
MUST BE BELEIVED.

Those Americans who have crossed the Atlantic to England, and visited that great national institution, the British Museum at London, will no doubt remember having seen in the Corridor of Antiquities an Old Stone showing the traces of centuries—time worn—cracked—supported by iron rods and having a label attached bearing the following legend:

"FOUND
during Excavations among the ruins of
THE ANCIENT TEMPLE OF ISIS,
at Athens, Greece, in 1623."

On the front surface of this stone may be seen, in a fair state of preservation, some hundreds of hieroglyphics, representative of many nations and dating back to that age of superstition when the Oriental nations worshipped the stars and planetary orbs, and great awe and reverence was shown this Wonderful Relic.



AND THEIR FUTURE WAS SHOWN UNTO THEM

A Photograph of this stone called the "Great Maggi," was brought over to this country, when as a hobby, one of our leading scientists undertook to translate these hieroglyphics into the English language, resulting in the production of a conglomeration of 690 letters (by actual count) of no apparent meaning or significance. Not content with this, further investigations were made, by one well learned in the languages and mystic arts of the ancients, discovering a Key to this truly great and marvelous Maggi. Thus by perseverence and enterprise, so characteristic of our great race, the useless relic is transformed into one of absorbing and vital interest to the community at large, and will hold up the mirror of your future to your gaze.

By the aid of the Key the Maggi will tell you your space in the Ziodiac, your ruling planet, the one of the twelve tribes of Israel you descended from direct, and your leading characteristics.

The Freat Maggi will also answer all questions relative to your future Luck, Business, Wealth, Marriage and Love, and will tell you your lucky dates of the month, on which any speculation or investment will give fortunate results. At a large expense, the ten firms represented in this space have contracted for and secured fac simile plates of and the sole right to use, the Great Margi, from which they have made a limited number of impressions, and to all purchasers of goods at any of these stores, will be given, free of cost, a handsome Chart containing this Marvelous Fortune Teller and the Key how to read the same, so that anyone can tell their own fortunes and that of their friends with a phenomenal readiness far exceeding any Clairvoyant, Mind Reader or Magician.

☞A fac-simile of the Great Maggi plate will be produced in this space next week and the Key to the same, together with a handsome Chart of the Maggi, will be supplied only by the firms represented in this space.

☞The Charts will not be sold at any price, but will be given to purchasers of goods [illegible] any of the dealers. [illegible]

☞The Ancient Worshippers and Believers in the Great Maggi, while kneeling in the Temple at Isis to learn their Fate, little thought that in the year of our Lord one-thousand-eight-hundred-and-eighty-nine this same Chart (translated into English) would be given free to every one purchasing 25 cents worth from

The Cosmopolitan.

The high standard of this magazine can not fail to interest thoroughly all that look over its pages. Its illustrations are superior to any magazine that comes to our table. We recommend all that are not familiar with it to secure a copy and look it over. The leading feature of the October number is a story by Capt. Charles A. King, U. S. A. "From the Point to the Plains." It is a West-Point Story, winding up in an Indian war in the west. It is a capital story. "The reconstruction of the French Army" is an admirable sketch by count Paul Vasile and is profusely illustrated. "A Great Iowa Farming Region," "Ritual Music of the Greek church," "An Original Social Experiment—Tuxedo," "Volapuk," "Egypt under the Khedive," "Wealthy Women of America" and "Base Ball" are all illustrated articles of merit. "Local Problems" by Edward Everett Hale and "In the Library" are pleasant features. The poems are "The Two Roads," a negro dialect poem and "In New Mexico." The Cosmopolitan deserves the excellent place which it has obtained among the leading periodicals.

Excursion to Niagara Falls.

The Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg Railroad has arranged a cheap, popular excursion to Niagara Falls. Excursion tickets are good for the going trip only on Wednesday, October 16th, 1889, and are good for return passage until Saturday, October 19th, inclusive.

The special train, with first-class coaches heated by steam from the locomotive, will arrive at Niagara Falls at 6:45 p. m. Wednesday, October 16th.

Reduced rates have been arranged at Niagara Falls hotels; prices, $1.50 per day and upwards, according to the hotel and location. Passengers can select their hotel and secure rooms on the train from D. C. Starks, Excursion Agent, who will accompany the excursion and remain at Niagara Falls until Saturday, October 19th. Mr. Starks will also sell on the train, at the very low rate of $1.65, a coupon ticket which will comprise a tour of Niagara, including the principal points of interest.

Very low rates have been made for the round trip to Niagara Falls and return. Illustrated programs of the excursion, containing time-table of the trains Wednesday, October 16th, and rates of fare from all stations, can be obtained of all ticket agents of the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg Railroad. The beauty of Niagara Falls is especially attractive at this time of the year; the increased volume of water and the georgeous setting of the richly tinted autumnal foliage render the scene at this time more impressive than at any other season of the year.

Mrs. Adella Enos of Holmesville, with a class of nine from that place, had, last Friday evening, an elocutionary entertainment at our town hall. She and her class did credit to themselves. Their renderings were fine and the illustrations in gymnastics portraying the gestures and positions of good oratory were instructing. Mrs. Enos is an excellent teacher in elocution and has classes in different localities. Her little daughter Nettie renders her pieces superbly. The company were frequently encored.

To Locate in New York.

The following extracts from the Albany papers will be read with interest;

"We are sorry to learn of the contemplated removal of the Cleveland baking powder business from this city. We understand that its rapidly increasing business will shortly render enlarged facilities desirable, so that the proprietors have determined to remove to New York, where their export trade can be more conveniently handled.

"Albanians, who have watched the growth of this business from small beginnings to its present mammoth proportions, will regret to see it go, but will rejoice with its owners in its new prosperity. It is but just to say that Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder as a food product has the enviable reputation of being a thoroughly wholesome, effective, and honestly made article. The people of Albany and vicinity have known this fact for about a score of years and have shown their appreciation by their steadily increasing consumption of this excellent baking powder. This, and the fact that all recent investigations, including those made by the Food Commissioners of the States of Ohio and New Jersey and of the Canadian Government, show that Cleveland's is superior to any baking powder on the market, have so increased the business that more extensive accommodations are necessary.

"A new label is being prepared, but the old name "Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder" and the heretofore high quality of goods will be maintained.

"Dr. Hoagland, the first, and for many years, President, and Wm. Zeigler, former Treasurer, of the Royal Company, two of its main props, have now left it. The former will be President of the new Company, and his known integrity, liberality, and experience promise great success for the new organization, and lively times for all competitors."

Who lives in [illegible], R. I., [illegible] have taken Brown's Sarsaparilla and know it is just as good as it is claimed to be." Mrs. E. [illegible], West Thompson, Conn., writes: "We use Brown's Sarsaparilla in our family. An old lady over 80 years is taking it and it has worked charms on her." Here is home testimony; investigate it; you will find it worth while to do so. There is nothing like Brown's Sarsaparilla for all forms of kidney disease. Mrs. W. W. Rider, Oneco, Conn., Feb. 21, 1889: "I have taken your medicine and know it to be good." If you have a dull, bearing down pain, extending down the inside of the leg to the knees, having a feeling as though you were broken in two, backache, or a tired all gone feeling, you may be assured you have kidney disease and unless help is obtained you will grow worse until you are beyond relief. When you have the first symptoms of kidney disease obtain and take Brown's Sarsaparilla. It will do you good and will cure when every other remedy fails.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4, 1889.

The election of Mr. Blaine to the Presidency of the Three America's Congress is warmly endorsed by President Harrison and the selection appears to please the foreign visitors, for if there is one man in the United States with whose career they are familiar that man is James G. Blaine. There was a carefully laid plan to secure the position for William Henry Trescott, of South Carolina, though why any clique should ask the selection of a man of whose existence the great majority of his fellow countrymen are blissfully ignorant, is beyond conception. And yet this is always so. No sooner is man named for an honor than all his enemies in his own party combine on some new Moses. The new Moses may have peacefully slept out a particularly long life keeping the flies off of himself in county courts but still his selection is insisted upon and his astonishing ability sworn to by a thousand good liars. Thus Mr. Trescott, of Bald Knob, S. C., was insisted upon as a candidate against James G. Blaine.

Hon. Henry G. Davis, who is one of the United States Representatives in the Congress, says that he believes some valuable work will be accomplished. The majority of the visitors express an earnest disposition to promote better commercial relations with the United States. Many say that a large proportion of their trade that now goes to Europe should go to the United States. A few of the delegates on the other hand, while cordial and friendly, are reticent as to the commercial opportunities. Mr. Davis adds that he is confident that United States interests will be substantially benefitted. All of the United States delegates will not make the excursion to the various industrial centres but it is proposed to have at least four or five of our representatives always with the party.

An awkard thing happened on the first day the headquarters of the Three America's Congress was opened this week in the pleasant, roomy old mansion that has been turned over for that purpose. Mr. Estee of California, and a number of others of our delegates were on hand to receive the guests, when it was discovered that not one in the party could speak Spanish and only one or two could speak French. The colored messenger was called into the conference and it was ascertained that he could speak a little deviled Spanish, so for a long hour before Mr. Romero, the Mexican Minister arrived, the colored messenger was the sole means of communication between the delegates.

Handsome, courtly Judge Estee is one of the leading spirits of the Congress, and despite his amazing faculty for saying the wrong thing at the wrong time, he is well liked by the visitors. The day of the reception, he made one of his customary mistakes. He alluded several times to a resemblance he thought was most striking, between Mr. Romero, the Mexican Minister, and Mr. Pachero, who used to be in Congress from California. The resemblance he confidently assured the party was both phyisical and mental and extended to the tricks of manner. Now, Mr. Romero has spent nearly as much time in the United States as in Mexico, and he used to know Mr. Pachero; toward whom he bears personal ill feeling. Mr. Pachero was notorious as one of the most incompetent and unimportant men who ever sat in Congress and his election was a disgrace to the election system in California. Mr. Romero knew all this a deal better than forgetful Judge Estee, but if he had limited himself to the commonplace and indefinite compliments of the day he would have better retained Mr. Romero's regard.

The train which to-day left the Sixth Street Station in this city is unique in the history of railroading. The excursion is one of the most important that has ever been made. It will last forty-two days, and every provision for the amusement and comfort of the guests has been provided. The menu, the service and the baths are of a first-class character and this hotel on wheels will rival the finest caravansary in the land. The impression on the visitors can't be over estimated. They see fertile fields, wide stretches of the finest grazing lands in the world, smiling villages and the most tremendous manufacturing centres that the world has ever known. They will see wealth and prosperity under a form of government that many of them have been taught to distrust. They will learn the paramount commercial importance of this country. Such a party, met together for mutual benefit in peaceful Congress, is a triumph in modern civilization.

While in Fulton do not fail to call on M. M. Williams and get his prices in Drugs, Toilet Articles, &c. Rock-bottom prices in everything.

Cheese Market Report.

(From the Utica Herald.)

AT UTICA.

UTICA, Oct. 7.

There was a lively hum of conversation on the Board to-day, but it chiefly concerned politics and not cheese. One cheese buyer is a candidate for assembly for third term, and another is in the race for a first nomination, and they are making things lively among their friends. Apparently nobody wanted cheese to-day, but in the last half hour the buyers consented to name some prices which salesmen could decline or accept as they pleased. Some cheese was sold in this way, but nearly all the factorymen held back a day or two of their offerings, in hope of a better market next week. On an average, the September make is now sold down to the middle of the month, altho' some salesmen have only sold about a week of that month's cheese. The market was one of the dullest of the season.

Following is our usual table:

8	680	9¼
4	400	9⅜
65	5,334	9⅝
2	265	9¾
15	1,541	10c
10	1,000	10¼
36	2,200	10¼
4	404	p.t
144	11,824
Farm dairy...	1,234
Total.......	13,058

Ruling price 9¾c. Transactions one year ago 13,612 boxes, ruling 10c. Two years ago 14,965 boxes, ruling 11¼c.

Sales of butter amounted to 24 packages creamery at 25@27c. There were also 45 packages do. consigned.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Oct. 7.

Cheese—The market did not start off quite so brisk as last week, buyers claiming that prices were ¼c lower. In view of the good weather and the good keeping quality of the cheese, salesmen thought they could hold back stocks to some extent; accordingly some refused to sell, and others sold less than their usual quantities. The [illegible] took the most cheese to-day, and pretty nearly last week's prices were paid. No difference in price was shown between white and colored goods. We estimate that to-day's sales will take cheese off in this section, upon the average, to about Sept. 10.

Following is the list of Sales:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
10	761	10c
48	3,138	10¼
14	967	10⅜
3	259	p. t.
10	750	Com.
85	5,880
Farm dairies	813
Total.	6,692

Farm Dairies—There were 813 boxes farm dairy cheese sold at 1c to 10¼c., the bulk at 10¼c.

Butter—The butter shows a little improvement, 66 packages farm dairy butter selling at 20 to 22c., the ruling price being 21c. There were 22 packages of creamery sold at 25c.

AT FULTON.

Nineteen factories were represented at this market last Monday evening and 1,720 boxes of cheese were offered, most of which sold at 9¾ to 10 cents. Market slow.

Fulton's Business Enterprise.

Fulton's enterprising business men
Are at the front, as they long have been,
And the latest in their enterprise
Is the Maggi Fortune Teller Prize.

Bennett & Stewart are all alive
And well represent the great Bee Hive;
In line of dry goods they lead the trade
And leave competitors in the shade;

Barker keeps the renowned Vienna Bread
And in baker's goods is away ahead;

Geisler, too, in all druggist's sundries
Has good daily trade—except on Sundays;

While Amdursky leads in clothing line
With prices low and qualities fine;

And next we greet the Boston Bazaar,
With prices low for its guiding star;

Again, the rush of a busy score,
Reminds us of Johnston's Hardware Store.

In time we long for spicy dinner—
Robinson's Grocery is the winner;

Now, a drive we take to rest from work
And order a rig of Edward Quirk;

Artistic Photos—order of Beals—
Not a single patron ever "squeals;"

Watches and jewels of Nichols buy—
They'll stand you well till the day you die;

And never forget that Fortune's start
Is rightly sought by the Maggi Chart.

A "Corn Supper" will be held at the M. E. church on Friday evening by the Girls' Mission Band. Supper will be served from 5:30 P. M. till 7:30 P. M., on the Europeon plan. All are cordially invited.

The Maggi.

THE TIMES, on its first page of its issue of to-day, presents to its many readers a brief description of the Great Maggi. Next week we shall give space to the marvelous Maggi Chart which contains 680 characters of no apparent meaning or significance, but by the aid of the key to which, any person can tell their own fortune or that of their friends with a phenominal readiness and accracy far excelling any magician, mind-reader or clairyovant. The Charts can be had only of the ten merchants whose cards surround the description of the monderful relic on the first page of this paper, as follows: Bennett & Stewart, dry goods, H. C. Giesler, druggist, H. Amdursky, Clothier; A. R. Noy, novelties; John Barker, bakery; Geo. Johnston hardware; E. J. Robinson groceries; H. C. Beals, photographer; Edwin Quirk liveryman and C. R. Nichols, jeweler. In purchasing goods of the above be sure and call for a Maggi Chart which is given free to all patrons of the above firms.

The taxpayers of Oswego Falls are to vote to day as to whether or not they shall have electric lights in their streets for the next six months. A more friendly feeling toward the proposition made by the company seems to exist, and the citizens of our sister village across the stream may decide in favor of light.

Peck's Bad Boy.

"Peck's Bad Boy" is a mischievous "cuss" and is a person who illustrates the fact that a boy can be mighty mischievous and have a good time generally, without being vicious. The hero is "bad" clear through, in a certain way, but he is good humored and kind hearted, and his badness is simply the result of high spirit, which means reallp that he is not bad at all, simply playful. Atkinson's company comes greatly improved this year with brass band and orchestra. It will be at the opera house Wednesday evening, Oct. 16.

A good crop of tobacco has been secured. Grapes are not ripening well. Fall plowing is about completed. Pastures are in good condition.

The Children's temperance meeting at Grace Mission Chapel last Sunday evening was an interesting event. The children and ladies connected with the Sunday School took part in the exercises. Mr. E. R. Redhead and Mr. Carson, Sec'y. of the Y. M. C. A. made interesting remarks and there was good singing under the leadership of Will Buck.

The fact that many members of the Y. M. C. A. have not paid their annual dues for this year has retarded the organization of gymnasium classes. The secretary is anxious that the work should be kept up at every point and earnestly requests that those in arrears call at the rooms and pay him the dues. If possible the secretary will form classes and begin work next week.

The Y. M. C. A. of this village have about completed arrangements for a course of lectures which will extend over a space of about six weeks. The first lecture will be by Prof. J. S. A Minneapolis Letter.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 5th, '89.

Editor FULTON TIMES—

The condition of the grain crop in Dakota, this year, was very bad. In fact, grain did not grow in Dakota, except as it grew worse from day to day. Continued drouth very nearly burned the country up, and in many counties the seed will not be returned except by special dispensation.

These facts have lately got into print and stirred up a deal of comment throughout the country.

The newspapers that first published the stories were accused of slandering the country, and all manner of vengeance was threatened, but these newspapers apparently suffer for their enterprise in publishing the truth, when the truth was unpleasant to hear.

Last year much of the same territory suffered the same experience. The year before was equally bad, and the year before that was a corker of the same nature. While here in Minnesota, during these same years, the wheat crop has not always been what it should be, yet the farmer has always produced something. His seed has at least been returned to him, and usually enough to live on for the ensuing year.

He has always been able to harvest something either of the roots or cerials, that would keep the wolf from the door, while in Dakota even the prairie grass has been consumed and cattle driven out of the country for want of food and water. In the face of all these well known conditions, the railroad companies, the immigration bureaus and the newspapers have continued to boom Dakota. Reduced rates and land excursions have been inaugurated for points in Dakota and Montana. Excursions of eastern capitalists, home seekers and even editorial excursions from other states have been whirled through Minnesota during the hours of night, and given a first glimpse of the Northwest on Dakota soil. The immigration agents ply their avocation among new comers in behalf of Dakota, and the very newspapers of Minnesota, overlooking the fair domain of their own State have persistently vied with each other in booming the great territory.

Minnesota news and Minnesota people have been dwarfed and overlooked that the numerous Dakota "editions" and "departments" might be made more full and complete. In fact the daily newspapers of St. Paul and Minneapolis have been engaged in a mad scramble for several years past to see which could sling the most taffy to Dakota. In the meantime Minnesota, though steadily and systematically ignored by all the great upbuilding powers, has continued to produce a plenty for her people and to grow strong and rich. Had the same efforts been made in behalf of our own states, by our own citizens, corporations and business institutions that have been made in behalf Dakota, every village and city in the state, and every citizen, whether farmer, mechanic business or professessional man, would find a matierial difference in their condition to-day.

It is with a good deal of satisfaction that the writer notes a decided change in the tone of the Metropolitan press when referring to the Northwest, not only in their news dispatches, but in their editorial pages. Where for years past, the readers read nothing but Dakota, Montana and Washington, he now sees and hears considerable about Minnesota. The great dailies seem to have all at once discovered that their own state is a pretty good place after all, and that possibly their vision has been taking too long a range.

The change of front is so decided in one or two of these papers as to lead to the suspicion that the mailing clerks and advertising solicitors have been heard in the editorial and news rooms. Fair treatment is all Minnesota asks, and this she is certainly entitled to at the hands of her newspapers, and a big boom in the next few years is assured.

Even now, says the "Northwestern Agriculturist," railroad lands have advanced in price from one to two dollars per acre, in anticipation of a sharp demand, growing out of the heavy crop this season.

The demand is already quite brisk, especially in Chippewa, Swift, Grant, Big Stone and other correspondingly located, which were only partially settled when the railroads opened up Dakota, and the tide of emigration went west past the new portion of Minnesota. There are many fine lands yet unoccupied and uncultivated in those counties, which are as fertile, less subject to drouth and other drawbacks, and much nearer to market than lands more talked about and advertised in Montana and the coast states. Real estate men who have farms in Minnesota to sell, report that they have sold more during three months past than for the previous three years, and still the call, for fairly improved farms, is increasing. This is a healthy indication and means that the process of filling in the counties has begun.

Some women are "bothered to death" with corsets breaking. There is a "bone" that never breaks; it can't be broken—by wear. WORTH KNOWING.

A Connecticut pear tree, over a century old, contains ripe fruit and quite a number of blossoms.

Intelligent feeding is as necessary for the hog as for any other animal; it will not thrive on anything and everything.

Celery is not only very healthful to man, but for beast also. So don't waste the leaves and root trimmings.

Now is a good time to kill off (and eat) the mongrel fowls that have accumulated, and start anew with pure stock of which ever variety may be preferred.

It costs no more to raise and feed the best than it does the poorest, while the difference in the quality will make a considerable difference in the profit.

In growing vegetables of any sort for shipping to market, it is always a good rule to plant largely of those with which the market was overstocked the last season and less largely of those which then ruled highest in price.

A writer on equine subjects gives what he says is an Arab test: "Observe your horse when he is drinking out of a brook; if in bringing down his head he remains square, without bending his limbs, he possesses sterling qualities and all parts of his body are built symmetrically."

C. F. Jones, of Newark, is famous for his fine quinces, which sometimes sell for $6 a hundred. He prunes carefully and applies manure two inches deep in the Fall. This he spades into the ground the next Spring.

The peculiar value of oats for horses is explained as consisting in their facilitating digestion and developing energy in a very marked degree. While they are strengthening and nutritious, they do not fatten unduly, but give firm tissues, spirit and fire, and endurance for prolonged work.

Although poultry breeding is ranked among the small beginnings in commercial circles, still, like other pursuits, it requires common sense and good management, and to be kept within the limits of the ability and facilities of him who embarks in it.

A correspondent of the Live Stock Indicator says: "I can invest $1,000 in sheep and burn every pound of wool produced for five years, and make more clear money than can be made on cattle, horses or hogs, in the same length of time.

Rural New Yorker has never seen any chickens grow faster than the grade Dorkings. It also pronounces sheep handy animals for the market gardener to have. They eat the vines of Lima beans and peas, and substances other stock will refuse.

A calf born in fall or winter is worth two born in the spring for profit. A spring calf is so young that it gets little good from pasture the first season, for by the time it can fight flies successfully and crop grass enough to really aid in nourishing it winter is at hand and it is placed on dry food.

Filling Silos.

Farmers who have silos will be interested in thir item: A Vermont farmer—Mr. John Wheaton, of Berne—airs the somewhat singular idea that more pounds of silage can be got into a silo 14x15 feet and 22 feet deep if put in whole than if cut. He says this was contrary to his education and belief, but that latterly he has proven it to be true; says he can get in one third more weight—and if he does it must contain less air. He accounts for this to his satisfaction by saying that the pressure on stalks laid horizontally will flatten them and make the mass fit closer than the cut silage will, because so many of the short cut pieces will stand on end and thus defeat the closer pressure they would get if all of them lay horizontally. Mr. Wheaton covered first with cut straw, and building paper above; then with plank, on which he put six inches of muck. He keeps the cover air tight by frequently stamping the muck into any air-hole that may be formed on the sides. He favors the deep silo because when uncovered there is less silage exposed to the air in proportion to what is in the silo.

Experiments in Feeding Pigs.

The object of some experiments made at the Kentucky station was to determine the relative values of shelled corn, cornmeal and corncob meal for fattening purposes and the length of time these feeds would produce pork at a paying figure. In this trial it was found that cornmeal does not fatten so well as shelled corn. Nitrogenous food produced less flesh but a more hardy developement than did non-nitrogenous foods. The following is a brief summary of the results:

1. Shelled corn produces fat more rapidly than other feeds tested.
2. Corn produces fat at a cheaper rate than other feeds tested.
3. Shelled corn produced pork at a profit for sixty-three days. Cornmeal produced pork at a profit for sixty-three days. Corncob meal produced pork at a profit for fifty-four days.
4. The Chester Whites fattened more readily than the Thin Rinds on the same quality of food.
5. The nitrogenous foods produced so little gain in live weight that it may be attributed to growth and not to fattening.
6. Cotton-seed meal could not be fed profitably.
7. Much corncob meal was wasted in feeding, being picked over and refused.
8. The pigs fed on nitrogenous foods were so much stronger than the others that they caused them serious injury when turned out to run together.
9. Of the nitrogenous foods tested, that of corncob meal and shipstuff in equal parts was the cheapest.

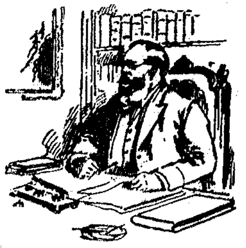
A very enjoyable evening is reported to have been spent at the Post Schenck G. A. R. campfire last Wednesday evening. Rev. W. Dempster Chase and other members of the Post made speeches. George Saunders, and Miss Rozie Snow, Sec'y of the Woman's Relief Corps, gave interesting recitations.

THE WAY OF DEEP PLOTS.

ANALYSIS OF THE WORKS OF THE LATE WILKIE COLLINS.

The Style of Novels Changes About Once in Forty Years—The Extravagant, the Wildly Heroic, the Superlatively Sentimental and the Elaborately Domestic.

Wilkie Collins was the last of his school—to borrow a word from another art. It was a school in which the plot was the all in all; it was preceded by a school in which high wrought portrayal of the feelings was the all in all, and has been followed without an interval of gradual change by a school of peculiar realism. Plot, which was everything in the '50s, is nothing now; the evolution of a character may, perhaps, be called the leading idea now, but for the most part a novel of today is in the nature of a condensed history. All this must be taken with the reserve that Stevenson and the erratic feminine writers may indicate the beginning of a school in which gorgeous intensity is the all in all.



WILKIE COLLINS AT HIS DESK.

By a view of the life and writings of Wilkie Collins one can easily see that his method and that of his school was a natural evolution from that of those immediately preceding them. Beginning with the accession of Charles II we have the wildly extravagant and licentious school in which Claude Duval was a popular hero and all the fine gentlemen were libertines. After this came that era of intense sentimentality, of ardent "gush," "swearing eternal friendship" and all that sort of thing, which lasted three-quarters of a century, and was satirized nearly as much longer. In the early days of John Wesley all the reading young people were saturated with this sort of thing, and corresponded with each other under the names of "Sylvander" and "Parmelia," "Clovis," "Clarissa" and "Alonzo."

Every person of sentiment had an extra name, and of course many without sentiment adopted the fashion. Queen Anne was "Mrs. Freeman" to her correspondent, and her intimate friends were "Mrs. Morley" and "Mrs. Masham." John Wesley was a "Cleander," and wrote gushing letters to a "Melissa." About the time of the American Revolution this style of novel had reached the last phase of floridness and corruption, and was satirized on the stage and in the "comics" till even kitchen girls were ashamed of it. Then sentiment ran to the exaltation of the domestic affections for a long period—the period of "Children of the Abbey," etc. The fathers were fonder than all fathers before them, the daughters "called heaven to witness" on the slightest provocation, husbands sank insensible on the graves of their wives and wives fell and expired on the coffins of their husbands. And this style still ruled when Wilkie Collins made his advent in literature.

He was the son of the eminent rustic painter, William Collins, and, another painter's name being added, his full name was William Wilkie Collins. Born in London in January, 1824, and taken from school at an early age to be put in the tea trade, he changed his whole plan of life on coming of age and began to study law. In 1848 he wrote an affectionate biography of his father, which was so well received that he changed his plan again, and thenceforth was devoted entirely to literature. The lawyer reading some of his productions can easily perceive the effect of law studies on the writer's mind and perceive at the same time that the study was not thorough enough to save him from some serious blunders. In "Man and Wife," for instance, the plot is most ingeniously built up on legal technicalities, yet the points he makes are certainly "bad law." England and Scotland were at that time pretty hard on wives, it must be confessed, but nothing like so hard as the novelist makes out.

That school of fiction in which plot outranks all else in importance was already developing rapidly when Wilkie Collins began to write; he soon brought it to something near perfection. "The Dead Secret" was in the highest style of the new school, and the publication in 1860 of "The Woman in White" actually seemed to mark a new era in fiction. As it came out serially the successive numbers were eagerly looked for by all reading England, and in America a million young hearts were as profoundly moved as most people were the previous year by the successive dispatches of the Franco-Austrian war. Thereafter there appeared to be no improvement in construction of plot, though, as a matter of course, there will long be a question as to the comparative merits of his early and later novels, as it is a matter of taste. It is interesting therefore to discover how he built up such a complicated scheme, and he once explained it fully in a letter to an American lady.

His general plan was to get the central idea first. In "The Woman in White" this plan was a criminal conspiracy by people in good society, and not otherwise criminal, and the keynote was the robbing of a woman of her right to a name and title. This done, he wrote the climax first. Similarly Mrs. Stowe wrote the dying scene of Uncle Tom first, and then built the story to it. Mr. Collins got most of his characters in mind, thought long and hard to find the "other woman," then gave it up and was contemplating another plan when, as he says, "Anne Catherick comes in and says, 'Try me.'"

This illustrates a trick of the mind with which all writers and machinists, indeed all men who think hard, are familiar. The thinker strives long and earnestly to formulate an idea, fails and abandons the quest, then suddenly from an unexpected source a totally different and unsought idea comes rushing into the mind, and very often it proves far more suitable than the one first dimly conceived. The mental exertion brings, not what it was trying to bring, but something different and far better. "The Woman in White" is his most popular novel, and, as usual in such cases, quite an army of critics have scored the public for its taste, but the author himself and Charles Dickens thought the public perfectly right. It is now of interest to find that the novelist, like other men, often failed on his first plan and had to try again. Thus, in this case he began with a striking incident and let the characters themselves state the facts which led up to it, found this to be a mistake, threw all that was done away and made a new framework. Then for the development:

"The scene of my opening chapters is in Cumberland. Miss Fairlie (afterwards Lady Glyde); Mr. Fairlie, with his irritable nerves and his art treasures; Miss Halcombe (discovered suddenly, like Anne Catherick), are all waiting the arrival of the young drawing master, Walter Hartright. No; this won't do. The person to be first introduced is Anne Catherick. She must be already a familiar figure to the reader, when the reader accompanies me to Cumberland. This is what must be done, but I don't see how to do it; no new idea comes to me; I and my manuscript have quarreled and don't speak to each other. One evening I happen to read of a lunatic who has escaped from an asylum—a paragraph of a few lines only in a newspaper. Instantly the idea comes to me of Walter Hartright's midnight meeting with Anne Catherick, escaped from the asylum. 'The Woman in White' begins again; and nobody will ever be half as much interested in it now as I am. From that moment I have done with my miseries. For the next six months the pen goes on; it is work, hard work; but the harder the better, for this excellent reason: the work is its own exceeding great reward.

"As an example of the gradual manner in which I reach the development of character I may return for a moment to Fosco. The making him fat was an afterthought; his canaries and his white mice were found next, and the most valuable discovery of all, his admiration of Miss Halcombe, took its rise in a conviction that he would not be true to nature unless there was some weak point somewhere in his character."

The proof that Wilkie Collins got very near to the reader's heart is in the fact that his [illegible] the scene of [illegible] "The Frozen Deep" [illegible] in America. They [illegible] to have been written for [illegible] Charles Dickens acted a part in one of them, both in a private performance before the queen and in a public performance for charity. Mr. Collins has also done some lecturing, and made the tour of the United States in that line.

He was a tireless worker when he had once got his plot arranged, and no doubt aggravated his physical troubles in that way, for he was at times cruelly tortured by gout and rheumatism. To alleviate the pain he began to take opium many years before his death, and soon the habit became firmly fixed.

A Valuable Box.

Mr. Thomas Goodall, of Sanford, Me., has an ingenious invention made by a native of Geneva, Switzerland. It is a box about three inches long, two inches wide and three-fourths of an inch deep. This box is full of machinery, and when a key is applied a portion of the top will open and a small bird come forth and sing, chipper, flutter its wings, turn about and retreat out of sight. The work beneath is of solid gold, and very finely wrought. This box cost $500, and Mr. Goodall values it at much more, for it has been impossible to duplicate it. The inventor died after making this one, and, although he had the machinery of several others made, no one as yet has been able to put it together and make it work. Once Mr. Goodall had occasion to have it repaired, and he was obliged to send it to Switzerland for that purpose.—Boston Herald.

Malaria

Literally means bad air. Poisonous germs arising from low, marshy land, or from decaying vegetable matter, are breathed into the lungs, taken up by the blood, and unless the vital fluid is purified by the use of a good medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, the unfortunate victim is soon overpowered. Even in the more advanced cases, where the terrible fever prevails, this successful medicine has effected remarkable cures. Those who are exposed to malarial or other poisons should keep the blood pure by using Hood's Sarsaparilla.

In Autumn Days.

[illegible] you sink—oh, blissful rest,
[illegible] earthly pleasures best!
When Earth, with sable curtains drawn,

And stand and shiver in surprise
To find that by some means unknown
The atmosphere has colder grown.
You strike a flickering, blinding light,
Then seek the closet—useless quite;
The mattress then you raise on high
And drop again, with weary sigh.
You hurry through the house, but come
Back to your chamber, cold and glum.
You don your clothes against your will,
Compelled by the increasing chill.
The question still returns, unbid,
Where are those extra covers hid?

The Grammar of a Kiss.

"Now a kiss, dear," quoth he,
"Is a noun, we'll admit;
But common or proper,
Canst thou tell that of it?"
"Well I think," replied she,
"To speak nothing loath;"
While she smiled and grew red,
"Well, I think it is both."
—New York Truth.

A Paraphrase.

"I've got a bright idea,"
Said a maiden young and fair
To her lover who was helping her
To rock a rocking chair.
Then smilingly he answered,
"I'm very sure if you
Would be my little wife I'd have
A bright-eyed dear, too."

[illegible] admissions on the ground that day, and probably not less than [illegible] present at one time. There was crowding in the aisles of the buildings and on some of the walks where special attractions were offered, as there would have been if the grounds had embraced a thousand acres, but there was room in the 236 acres of the Centennial grounds for millions more. This is not a figure of speech. Four square feet is a liberal estimate for an individual to occupy. The people in a crowd allowed that much space to each would scarcely touch elbows. The main building alone, at the Centennial, if cleared of exhibits, would have held 200,000 people without crowding. It is true that crowding takes place at places of special interest in the aisles of a building or on favorite walks. This is inevitable, no matter how large the grounds may be, but a space of 236 acres (the size of the Centennial grounds) allows over fifty square feet to the individual in a crowd of 200,000. There is no danger of the New Yorkers "boiling over the fences," if they should have a plot of 275 acres.—Philadelphia Ledger.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11, 1889.

Harmony and goodfellowship—if these words be not too weak to describe the conduct of these Royal gentlemen—has prevaded every hour of the triennial conclave of the Knights Templar. The city had long looked to their coming, and co-operating with the local committees of Knights, were ready to give a royal welcome. The ornate emblem of "the order have been everywhere in the decorations of exteriors and interiors, mingling with the national colors and a hundred queer conceits in bunting.

The grand parade had the advantage of good weather and a cool, but not too cool, a day. No hitch occurred in the proceedings. The Avenue from the Capitol to the White House, was lined with people. The thousands of men in line presented an imposing picture and the spectators, especially the ladies, never tired during the four hours it took to pass a given point.

Washington may never see such a crowd again. The inauguration of last March brought a much larger crowd but it was to a considerable extent, made up of the riffraff of society and drunkenness was rampart. With the Templars, pride in the order was paramount and every man was on his mettle. The city appreciated this and nobly did its part, of course there was the occasional "kicker," but he was not prominent.

There is always the important gentleman from the remote districts who has looked forward to his outing for months, who brings his wife and daughter with him and who expects to be met at the railway station by the band. When he finds that his particular train can not get into the station and he has to walk five blocks to get a conveyance to his lodging, he is boiling. When he finds that the rooms are small and overlook a blind alley his wrath is very great. He forgets that thousands of less lucky visitors are sleeping on cots and commences to make a show of himself. After he has left his baggage and patient family in the hall for an hour or two while he applies to all the leading hotels, where he is met with the smiling information that all the rooms were engaged months ago, he goes back to the boarding house cured.

Between the bonifaces, great and small, of Washington and the inauguration visitors there has always been a sworn, deadly enmity. The landlord's prices have been regulated by the amount of money possessed by the visitors, and fixing the tax has been a matter of expert guessing. This custom had its origin in the attempt of visitors to procure the earth for ten cents. The landlords had to protect themselves. The Knights have come with open hands and their generosity has been appreciated. Only a few instances of overcharging for lodgings have been noticed and these were in small excess of the usual prices, while food everywhere has remained at the usual prices. In so far as this harmony between the people and their visitors will improve the chances of Washington for obtaining the World's Fair remains to be seen.

It is perhaps in the renewal of old friendships that the conclave has been productive of the most good. The general exchange of badges and cards and emblems look pleasantly undignified in grizzled men. The emblem of the eastern states has been most sought for by western men who were born East. I saw a gray giant of sixty, wearing a dazzling mass of rubies, sapphires and diamonds, pendant from a Masonic design. I know that he is one of the wealthiest men California and yet he looked fondly and proudly down on the homely wooden nutmeg that a Sir Knight from Connecticut had just pinned upon his breast and thanked him in a voice that was a bit husky with the flooding recollections of a New England home last seen many, many years ago, recollections that came back "as the Sabbath sounds of doves in quiet neighborhoods."

There never was so long a procession about the White House as that surrounding it on Wednesday night, when the President received the Knights. The lines extended up and down the avenue and the visitors were a solid mass from the Executive Mansion to away, no one knows where, beyond the State, War and Navy building. White plumes, decorations and sword hilts were everywhere mingled with the flashing gems of beautiful women—for the ladies who accompanied the Knights fully deserve that much-abused designation.

[illegible] which was officiated up by the Right Rev. Patrick Ludden, Bishop of Syracuse. At first mass Father Kearney exhorted his people to be present at the laying of the corner stone in large numbers, to bring their friends and children and to manifest their good will and interest in the building of a new church by their progress and generous contributions. "The church" he said, "will be erected to the glory of God, and will be a home for you and your children, and when you have departed this life your names as benefactors and contributors will be preserved in sweet and grateful remembrance, and God's best blessing will accompany you and remain with your families." The collection was taken up by the pastor and amounted to about $500.

At ten o'clock the little church was again crowded and the solemn high mass was celebrated by Father Earley. The choir chanted a new mass under the direction of Prof. Fred Kenyon, and Miss Maggie Darby sang in her sweetest tones a beautiful "Ave Maria." The instruction given by Father Earley bore chiefly on the significance of the ceremonies to be performed in the afternoon and the symbolism of the corner stone.

During the course of his remarks the Reverend gentleman said: "Our divine master Jesus Christ is the corner stone of Christianity. God the Father intended erecting an edifice to his honor and glory, he sent the Jewish people to build a foundation of that edifice, and when the hour had come as appointed by the Almighty, the Son of God was sent from heaven to become the corner stone of the edifice, to correct the defects of the foundation or the old law, and to beautify the temple of his father. From that moment Christ became: 1st, The corner stone of Catholicity. 2d, The corner stone of civil society. 3d, The corner stone of domestic society. The society which is not erected on Christ is the house built upon the sand which the winds and storms destroy. Governments have failed and nations have vanished from earth because they had forgotten Christ, the Master. Our families can have no real happiness, no true peace unless Christ be the master and fathers and mothers are obliged to copy the features of the Divine Master, walk in his footsteps and teach their children to love and serve Him.

God is Master of the elements, the winds and seas obey his voice, thunder and lightning are his messengers, he is the Master of all created beings, absolute Master of all things but one and that is the heart of man. Man can close the portals of his heart by sin and refuse an entrance to the grace of God, man has liberty to refuse the visit of his Master, and the world with its vanities and pleasures taking possession of man's heart leave no room for the friendship and love of the Master. Let us say to Christ to-day: "Be the corner stone of our virtue, of our happiness, of our life, be the Master of our mind and heart, be ours in life, in death, in eternity." Father Earley exhorted the people to pray for the church and the conversion of sinners for the greater glory of God. The foundation of the spiritual edifice is the grace of God, the material, brick and stone, etc., are the souls of men, the cement is divine charity, and the crowning of the building is the glory of God and his elect in heaven.

At 2 o'clock about 2,000 persons had congregated on the grounds awaiting the arrival of the Bishop and clergymen. At 3 o'clock solemn vespers were celebrated by Rev. P. McEvvey, Chancellor of the diocese. Bishop Ludden presided at his throne, assisted by Rev. Fathers Beecham, McGuiness, Kearney and Earley.

After the benediction of the blessed sacrament, the people, acolytes, clergymen, and bishop in pontificial robes wended their way in solemn procession to the new church. The psalms and litianies were chanted by the priests, appropriate prayers were recited by the officiating prelate, the sanctuary cross was blessed, the corner stone laid, the foundations of the church sprinkled with holy water and the multitude then took possession of the nave of the new church to hear the sermon preached by the Rev. Father McGuiness of Oswego. The announcement that the eloquent and scholarly young priest was selected to deliver the instruction brought together the largest multitude of people of every denomination ever before assembled in Fulton, and the Rev. Father Barry's talented and valuable assistant did justice to the occasion and elicited words of praise sincere and merited which add to his already well establish reputation as a cultured gentleman, refined scholar and distinguished orator. His splendid physique, expressive features, graceful gesture, sonorous voice and pure, polished diction charm his audience and make a lasting impression. [illegible]

[illegible] Almighty God, [illegible] is to be the [illegible] sacred deposit of faith and [illegible] known the marvelous [illegible] of eternal power and goodness, but especially because it is destined to be the temple of the Holy Ghost and the home and abiding place of the eternal Son of God himself.

The Catholic church is rich in the wondrous institutions of eternal power and goodness. There Infinite Love exhausts Divine Omnipotence itself; for God, all powerful as He is could give no higher, grander evidence of His love and goodness than He has given in offering His only begotten Son, a sacrafice in the adorable sacrament of the altar. The institution of the holy sacrifice of the mass stands pre-eminent among the great miracles of Almighty God and is the crowning glory of the church of Christ. For the mass is the great expiation offered by the Eternal Son to the offended majesty of the Eternal Father, the sinful world's atonement to the world's outraged Creator, the oblation of the sinless Christ, the Son to God, the Father, it is the priceless penalty of man's sin offered through the goodness of eternal love and mercy to appease the infinite justice of the most High God. And coupled with that cherished invention of Divine Love, the holy mass, we see in this church the seven-fold sources of grace—the seven sacraments—those wondrous channels of divine compassion through which heaven's love and mercy flow out upon the sin-cursed world, purifying and cleansing it, rendering it once more fair and faultless in the vision of the eternal Father. The royal psalmist, contemplating the beauty of the temple of the old law, breaks forth in rapturous words of admiration, exclaiming, "How lovely are thy tabernacles O Lord of hosts;" and yet we to-day may with greater reason rejoice for the temple of the old law with all its grandeur and magnificence, with all its wealth of ceremonial splendor, pales and grows dim before the dazzling grandeur and the glory of this temple; for the temple of the new law, the Catholic church, contains not the ark of the covenant, but the tabernacle, the home of the eternal son of the living God, not the tablets of the law but the giver of the law himself, not the manna that fell around the tents of the Israelites of old but the bread of Angels, the living bread that came down from heaven, giving life to the world, the body and blood, soul and divinity of our divine saviour Jesus Christ hinself.

Oh! Can there be a grander work for man or one more acceptable to God than that of erecting a temple, the home of such stupendous mysteries and wherein Christ himself, under the sacramental species, really, truly and substantially abides for man's santification, especially when that sanctification itself is a glorification of God and an acknowledgement of the infinite power and goodness that established it?

Not only is the building of a Catholic church a most glorious work for the honor of God; but it is also a work most beneficial and useful for man himself: Because the church civilizes, sanctifies and opens for man the portals of the eternal temple of God. The Catholic church has been the great civilizing power from the beginning. The darkness of Paganism hung like a pall above the birth of Christianity. The world, which was God's temple, had become the temple of idols and everything was acknowledged as God except God himself. Oh! What a pitiable scene of sin and godlessness did not the world at that time present! Heathen Rome was at the very zenith of her power and glory. The mighty empires of the old Pagan world were strong in the unhallowed spoils of forty centuries, while material prosperity scattered its golden benedictions upon every side and seemed to thrive and flourish amid all this moral ruin and decay.

Luxury and vice sat enthroned, while crime opened the avenues to power and unblushing sin, showed the ways that led to greatness. Society had been robbed of its great essential element—sound morality—and the laws of God and the rights of the family were no longer recognized. And against all this array of wealth and power and profligacy went forth the humble twelve—the nascent church, to spread the faith and to battle in the cause of Christ. And soon the Kingdom of Christ was established. The fires of pagan sacrafice died away before its grandeur, and the voice of the godless gladiator and the inhuman cries of the pantheon were succeeded by the prayerful anthems of Christianity and the Catholic church became the great second ark that saved the human race from the terrors of this new deluge.

The false lights of paganism grew dim and feeble in the brilliant firmament which Christianity had opened up and the [illegible] world bowed to Christ and gave the glory of [illegible] the universe to Him by whom it was created. [illegible]

[illegible] the world. [illegible] blindness until she sees him pass safely through the dark portals of the tomb into the beauty and the brightness of the eternal life beyond. She it is who stands beside the cradle of his infancy and by the sacrament of of baptism gives back to Him his lost inheritance to the eternal city of God. By confirmation she makes him a soldier of the cross and enrolls him among the number of her saints. In the adorable sacrament of the altar she gives him Christ himself, to comfort, to console and to strengthen him; and when he wanders far from the fold of Christ, she is the good shepherd who is ever searching amid the mountain fastnesses of sin to bring back by the sacrament of penance the one lost one to the ninety and the nine, who beneath the eternal shepherd's eye rest securely in the grace-lit vales of God.

Oh! wondrous church! how worthy of our love!

For the Catholic church is the grandest institution that ever blessed the world. She is not the creature of a day nor the outgrowth of an age. She has lived in the past, she lives in the present and based upon the rock of Peter she will continue to the end of time. Earthly power will not endure, human grandeur will pass away but the church of Christ will live forever. To understand the truth of this let us glance back across the centuries to the time of ancient Greece and Rome. Rome was the mistress of the world, her standards were victorious upon every field, her prowess the theme of poet and of statesman. Greece was the preceptress of the nations, the home of science and the nurse of all that was great and grand in art and in literature; but their power is long since broken and they have passed away; while the church of Christ presided over at that time by the humble fisherman of Galilee still lives on and to-day after having braved the storms of more than eighteen centuries, with the sunlight of heaven falling fair upon her, she stands as immovable and as unchangeable as she was in the beginning, as grand and as entire under Leo as she was more than 1,800 years ago when Peter first sat upon her throne in the old Grecian city of Antioch. Other Romes have risen, have had their day and paid the debt of all things human and have passed away; but not so with the church of Christ, for she is destined to remain and to live on, surviving the wreck of matter and when time itself totters to its close over the graves of empires and through the dust of the dead centuries the church alone in all her undiminished power and grandeur will look down, with pity and commisseration upon the scattered fragments of all that the world esteemed as great and grand and enduring. Nor is this the language of exaggeration; for Christ himself has told his church that He would remain with her all days even to the consummation of the world and that neither the powers of earth nor hell should ever prevail against her. Christ himself has told her this and Christ is God and God is the Eternal Truth.

Oh! my dear brethren, you are to be congratulated on the grand work in which you are now engaged and the signal way in which Almighty God has blessed your undertaking and the labors of your good pastor, Father Kearney. He, I know, feels grateful for your efforts in the past and is hopeful for the future. Continue to co-operate with him in this noble work so auspiciously begun, for nothing can be more to the glory and the credit of a congregation than the erection of a beautiful Temple to God as it is the most productive of God's glory the most useful for man himself and pre-eminently a work of civilization, of sanctification and glorification.

May you live to see this beautiful temple reach its completion and may it be a source of untold blessings to you and your children and your children's children for many generations, so that when your life-work is done and the high purpose of your existence accomplished you may be worthy to enter into the eternal Temple of God to participate in the endless joys and glory which there abide forever in the everlasting home of the Eternal Father.

NOTES.

The following clergymen were present on Sunday: Right Rev. Bishop Ludden, Rev. P. McEvvey of Syracuse; Rev. P. Beecham of Baldwinsville; Revs. Hughes, [illegible], [illegible], McGuiness, [illegible], Doody, of Oswego; Rev. Father Kearney and Earley of Fulton.

The box placed in the corner stone contained a copy of local papers. [illegible]

[illegible] Providence [illegible] considered in doubtful, $63,767.69; total, $[illegible]. Plants, including all machinery and furniture, real estate, easements, water-power, etc., at Oswego Falls at assessors' valuation, $[illegible], at Providence, at assessors' valuation, $[illegible]. Plants at Oswego Falls are insured for $[illegible], plants at Providence are insured for $[illegible], all in mutual companies except [illegible] in Oswego Falls. Cost of both plants as appears by the books, $1,842,[illegible].17.

Liabilities, bills and drafts payable, $3,401,979.50; open accounts payable, absolute, $973,495.49; open accounts payable, contingent estimate, $25,[illegible]; total $[illegible]. The above statement does not include about 400,000 pounds of wool at Providence unpaid for, worth, say, $120,000, which is under attachment, and the title to which is in dispute, nor any liability for the cost of the same, nor any claim for freight paid thereon, nor a large lot of wool in London and Boston claimed to have been bought for the mills and pledged for the purchase money, nor any liability for the same.

The property at Oswego Falls, up to the date of assignment, was in the custody of the sheriff, under the attachments aggregating $500,000 (and probably exceeding the entire available value of the property, if sold under the hammer as a whole real and personal) in favor of Messrs. A. D. Juilliard & Company and divers other creditors, and operations in the mills there had been stopped. The two plants, at Oswego Falls and Providence, are so arranged as to be dependent upon each other for material, and the stoppage of one necessarily stops the operation of the other. Great shrinkage in the value of the personal property on hand would have resulted from stopping the mills. Orders for their entire production up to about January 1st, 1890, had been taken before the failure at prices which the assignees believe will show no loss in manufacturing. Furthermore, the plants must be sold at a great sacrifice if the mills are stopped, and the help allowed to scatter.

The assignees are enabled to perfect arrangments with the attaching creditors whereby one of the assignees, Mr. Braman, has been appointed receiver of the property at Oswego Falls by the Supreme court of New York. The mills are now running under arrangement between the assignees and the receiver, whereby the assignees agree to account to the receiver at the end of operations for a sum of money equal to the net difference between the appraised value of the stock at Oswego Falls at the time the reciever took possession and what remains in the mills there at the time of the settlement of the accounts. Such sum to be held by the receiver to await the result of the attachment suits in New York. The assignees were of opinion that it will be exceedingly difficult to advantageously sell the two plants together in their present condition, as independent parts of one concern, both on account of the magnitude of the plant and the disadvantages of manufacturing under the present organization.

They are further of opinion, in case it shall be found necessary in order to effect a sale, to move some parts of the machinery from one mill to the other; that this can be done so as to make one mill independent of the other; and that the change can be made gradually, without stopping the mills, and at an expense far less than the benefit to be derived from the change.

In order to give time to all parties interested to clear up the various complications attending the settlement of the assigned estate, to separate the two plants and to arrange for a sale or other reorganization of the mills as a plant in operation, the assignees believe that it would be for the interest of the creditors concerned, if they could be authorized to run the mills for the account and risk of the assigned estate at their discretion for a period not later than April 1st, 1890. The assignees will not run them further than to work up the stock on hand, nor undertake any steps about changing the machinery in the mills, unless authorized and requested so to do by the great body of the creditors. They enclose herewith a form of such request, which, if you please, you may sign and return to C. D. Owen and others, assignees, care Riverside and Oswego Falls mills, Providence, R. I.

Very Respectfully,
CHARLES D. OWEN,
JAMES R. CASE,
CHESTER A. BRAMAN,
Assignees.

Cheese Market Report.

(From the Utica Herald.)

AT UTICA.

UTICA, Oct. 14.

There was no market to-day until about 5:30 p. m., as buyers did nothing previous to that, except to declare that the market was "off" and prices would have to decline. However, when they began to offer prices, it was found that cheese would sell about the same as last week, and those who had been thinking of holding back a part of their offering generally concluded to let it all go forward. Fully one-half of the September make is now marketed, taking into consideration those factorymen who have only just begun to dispose of that month's make. For there are a few who have still nearly all their September on hand. A few good factories have gone into the skim cheese business, and are skimming at the factory—not allowing the patrons to skim from 1 to 1½ pounds of butter to the hundred of milk. At least one factory has put in a separator for this purpose.

Following is our usual table:

Lots	Boxes	Price.
4	400	[illegible]
55	5,100	[illegible]
4	314	[illegible]
25	2,000	10c
16	1,580	10¼
27	2,581	10¼
5	300	[illegible]
136	12,262
Farm dairy	1,062
Total	13,324

Ruling price 9¾c. Transactions one year ago 14,280 boxes, ruling 10c. Two years ago 13,759 boxes, ruling 10¾c.

Sales of butter amounted to 55 packages creamery at [illegible]. Bulk at former price.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Oct. 14.

Cheese—The market was a little disappointing to day all around. It was thought early in the day that a decline of one-half cent would be realized, but the market closed about one-quarter cent under last week's figures, the ruling price showing just this difference. The home trade is quite active. There was no disposition to hold back stocks to-day, and factories on the average sold fully one week's production. Two weeks more will take substantially all of the September cheese in this section. Cows are still doing quite well for the time of year, feed being quite good, as there has not been frost enough to materially injure grass, though of course, its nourishing qualities are much poorer.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11, 1889.

Harmony and goodfellowship—if these words be not too weak to describe the conduct of these Royal gentlemen—has prevaded every hour of the triennial conclave of the Knights Templar. The city had long looked to their coming, and co-operating with the local committees of Knights, were ready to give a royal welcome. The ornate emblem of the order have been everywhere in the decorations of exteriors and interiors, mingling with the national colors and a hundred queer conceits in bunting.

The grand parade had the advantage of good weather and a cool, but not too cool, a day. No hitch occurred in the proceedings. The Avenue from the Capitol to the White House, was lined with people. The thousands of men in line presented an imposing picture and the spectators, especially the ladies, never tired during the four hours it took to pass a given point.

Washington may never see such a crowd again. The inauguration of last March brought a much larger crowd but it was to a considerable extent, made up of the riffraff of society and drunkenness was rampart. With the Templars, pride in the order was paramount and every man was on his mettle. The city appreciated this and nobly did its part, of course there was the occasional "kicker," but he was not prominent.

There is always the important gentleman from the remote districts who has looked forward to his outing for months, who brings his wife and daughter with him and who expects to be met at the railway station by the band. When he finds that his particular train can not get into the station and he has to walk five blocks to get a conveyance to his lodging, he is boiling. When he finds that the rooms are small and overlook a blind alley his wrath is very great. He forgets that thousands of less lucky visitors are sleeping on cots and commences to make a show of himself. After he has left his baggage and patient family in the hall for an hour or two while he applies to all the leading hotels, where he is met with the smiling information that all the rooms were engaged months ago, he goes back to the boarding house cured.

Between the bonifaces, great and small, of Washington and the inauguration visitors there has always been a sworn, deadly enmity. The landlord's prices have been regulated by the amount of money possessed by the visitors, and fixing the tax has been a matter of expert guessing. This custom had its origin in the attempt of visitors to procure the earth for ten cents. The landlords had to protect themselves. The Knights have come with open hands and their generosity has been appreciated. Only a few instances of overcharging for lodgings have been noticed and these were in small excess of the usual prices, while food everywhere has remained at the usual prices. In so far as this harmony between the people and their visitors will improve the chances of Washington for obtaining the World's Fair remains to be seen.

It is perhaps in the renewal of old friendships that the conclave has been productive of the most good. The general exchange of badges and cards and emblems look pleasantly undignified in grizzled men. The emblem of the eastern states has been most sought for by western men who were born East. I saw a gray giant of sixty, wearing a dazzling mass of rubies, sapphires and diamonds, pendant from a Masonic design. I know that he is one of the wealthiest men California and yet he looked fondly and proudly down on the homely wooden nutmeg that a Sir Knight from Connecticut had just pinned upon his breast and thanked him in a voice that was a bit husky with the flooding recollections of a New England home last seen many, many years ago, recollections that came back "as the Sabbath sounds of doves in quiet neighborhoods."

There never was so long a procession about the White House as that surrounding it on Wednesday night, when the President received the Knights. The lines extended up and down the avenue and the visitors were a solid mass from the Executive Mansion to away, no one knows where, beyond the State, War and Navy building. White plumes, decorations and sword hilts were everywhere mingled with the flashing gems of beautiful women—for the ladies who accompanied the Knights fully deserve that much-abused designation.

LAYING A CORNER STONE.

Catholics of Fulton and Oswego Falls Celebrate.—Impressive Ceremonies.—Eloquent Sermon by the Rev. Father McGuiness of Oswego

On Sunday, October 13th, the citizens of our villages witnessed the most interesting and probably the most impressive ceremonies ever seen in Fulton. Early in the morning a large gathering of Catholics faithful assembled in the old church on Rochester street to attend divine services and the sacrifice of the mass which was offered up by the Right Rev. Patrick Ludden, Bishop of Syracuse. At first mass Father Kearney exhorted his people to be present at the laying of the corner stone in large numbers, to bring their friends and children and to manifest their good will and interest in the building of a new church by their progress and generous contributions. "The church" he said, "will be erected to the glory of God, and will be a home for you and your children, and when you have departed this life your names as benefactors and contributors will be preserved in sweet and grateful remembrance, and God's best blessing will accompany you and remain with your families." The collection was taken up by the pastor and amounted to about $500.

At ten o'clock the little church was again crowded and the solemn high mass was celebrated by Father Earley. The choir chanted a new mass under the direction of Prof. Fred Kenyon, and Miss Maggie Darby sang in her sweetest tones a beautiful "Ave Maria." The instruction given by Father Earley bore chiefly on the significance of the ceremonies to be performed in the afternoon and the symbolism of the corner stone.

During the course of his remarks the Reverend gentleman said: "Our divine master Jesus Christ is the corner stone of Christianity. God the Father intended erecting an edifice to his honor and glory, he sent the Jewish people to build a foundation of that edifice, and when the hour had come as appointed by the Almighty, the Son of God was sent from heaven to become the corner stone of the edifice, to correct the defects of the foundation or the old law, and to beautify the temple of his father. From that moment Christ became: 1st, The corner stone of Catholicity. 2d, The corner stone of civil society. 3d, The corner stone of domestic society. The society which is not erected on Christ is the house built upon the sand which the winds and storms destroy. Governments have failed and nations have vanished from earth because they had forgotten Christ, the Master. Our families can have no real happiness, no true peace unless Christ be the master and fathers and mothers are obliged to copy the features of the Divine Master, walk in his footsteps and teach their children to love and serve Him.

God is Master of the elements, the winds and seas obey his voice, thunder and lightning are his messengers, he is the Master of all created beings, absolute Master of all things but one and that is the heart of man. Man can close the portals of his heart by sin and refuse an entrance to the grace of God, man has liberty to refuse the visit of his Master, and the world with its vanities and pleasures taking possession of man's heart leave no room for the friendship and love of the Master. Let us say to Christ to-day: "Be the corner stone of our virtue, of our happiness, of our life, be the Master of our mind and heart, be ours in life, in death, in eternity." Father Earley exhorted the people to pray for the church and the conversion of sinners for the greater glory of God. The foundation of the spiritual edifice is the grace of God, the material, brick and stone, etc., are the souls of men, the cement is divine charity, and the crowning of the building is the glory of God and his elect in heaven.

At 2 o'clock about 2,000 persons had congregated on the grounds awaiting the arrival of the Bishop and clergymen. At 3 o'clock solemn vespers were celebrated by Rev. P. McEvvoy, Chancellor of the diocese. Bishop Ludden presided at his throne, assisted by Rev. Fathers Beecham, McGuiness, Kearney and Earley.

After the benediction of the blessed sacrament, the people, acolytes, clergymen, and bishop in pontificial robes wended their way in solemn procession to the new church. The psalms and litianies were chanted by the priests, appropriate prayers were recited by the officiating prelate, the sanctuary cross was blessed, the corner stone laid, the foundations of the church sprinkled with holy water and the multitude then took possession of the nave of the new church to hear the sermon preached by the Rev. Father McGuiness of Oswego. The announcement that the eloquent and scholarly young priest was selected to deliver the instruction brought together the largest multitude of people of every denomination ever before assembled in Fulton, and the Rev. Father Barry's talented and valuable assistant did justice to the occasion and elicited words of praise sincere and merited which add to his already well establish reputation as a cultured gentleman, refined scholar and distinguished orator. His splendid physique, expressive features, graceful gesture, sonorous voice and pure, polished diction charm his audience and make a lasting impression. Never was an audience more attentive or better pleased and all were grieved when the last word fell from the orator's lips. They would have willingly remained standing another half hour listening to the beautiful words and the musical sounds of a mellow voice which made their hearts thrill with delight.

In compliance with the request of the people the editor of THE TIMES kindly consented to publish in full the grand sermon which all will read with benefit and pleasure. Father McGuiness spoke as follows:

[illegible] wondrous conquests of [illegible] without this supernatural element, are robbed of their chiefest glory and contain within themselves the germs of dissolution and decay. But the work that has as its ultimate end God's greater honor and glory has in it an abiding greatness and a lasting grandeur which neither time can destroy nor the endless cycles of eternity ever age or diminish. Such a work is the one in which you are now engaged. The erection of a Catholic church is a most glorious work in the sight of Almighty God; not alone because it is to be the faithful custodian of the sacred deposit of faith and to make known the marvellous manifestations of eternal power and goodness; but especially because it is destined to be the temple of the Holy Ghost and the home and abiding place of the eternal Son of God himself.

The Catholic church is rich in the wondrous institutions of eternal power and goodness. There Infinite Love exhausts Divine Omnipotence itself; for God, all-powerful as He is, could give no higher, grander evidence of His love and goodness than He has given in offering His only begotten Son, a sacrafice in the adorable sacrament of the altar. The institution of the holy sacrifice of the mass stands pre-eminent among the great miracles of Almighty God and is the crowning glory of the church of Christ. For the mass is the great expiation offered by the Eternal Son to the offended majesty of the Eternal Father, the sinful world's atonement to the world's outraged Creator, the oblation of the sinless Christ, the Son to God, the Father, it is the priceless penalty of man's sin offered through the goodness of eternal love and mercy to appease the infinite justice of the most High God. And coupled with that cherished invention of Divine Love, the holy mass, we see in this church the seven-fold sources of grace—the seven sacraments—those wondrous channels of divine compassion through which heaven's love and mercy flow out upon the sin-cursed world, purifying and cleansing it, rendering it once more fair and faultless in the vision of the eternal Father. The royal psalmist, contemplating the beauty of the temple of the old law, breaks forth in rapturous words of admiration, exclaiming, "How lovely are thy tabernacles O Lord of hosts;" and yet we to-day may with greater reason rejoice for the temple of the old law with all its grandeur and magnificence, with all its wealth of ceremonial splendor, pales and grows dim before the dazzling grandeur and the glory of this temple; for the temple of the new law, the Catholic church, contains not the ark of the covenant, but the tabernacle, the home of the eternal son of the living God, not the tablets of the law but the giver of the law himself, not the manna that fell around the tents of the Israelites of old but the bread of Angels, the living bread that came down from heaven, giving life to the world, the body and blood, soul and divinity of our divine saviour Jesus Christ himself.

Oh! Can there be a grander work for man or one more acceptable to God than that of erecting a temple, the home of such stupendous mysteries and wherein Christ himself, under the sacramental species, really, truly and substantially abides for man's sanctification, especially when that sanctification itself is a glorification of God and an acknowledgement of the infinite power and goodness that established it?

Not only is the building of a Catholic church a most glorious work for the honor of God; but it is also a work most beneficial and useful for man himself: Because the church civilizes, sanctifies and opens for man the portals of the eternal temple of God. The Catholic church has been the great civilizing power from the beginning. The darkness of Paganism hung like a pall above the birth of Christianity. The world, which was God's temple, had become the temple of idols and everything was acknowledged as God except God himself. Oh! What a pitiable scene of sin and godlessness did not the world at that time present! Heathen Rome was at the very zenith of her power and glory. The mighty empires of the old Pagan world were strong in the unhallowed spoils of forty centuries, while material prosperity scattered its golden benedictions upon every side and seemed to thrive and flourish amid all this moral ruin and decay.

Luxury and vice sat enthroned, while crime opened the avenues to power and unblushing sin, showed the ways that led to greatness. Society had been robbed of its great essential element—sound morality—and the laws of God and the rights of the family were no longer recognized. And against all this array of wealth and power and profligacy went forth the humble twelve—the nascent church, to spread the faith and to battle in the cause of Christ. And soon the Kingdom of Christ was established. The fires of pagan sacrafice died away before its grandeur, and the voice of the godless gladiator and the inhuman cries of the pautheon were succeeded by the prayerful anthems of Christianity and the Catholic church became the great second ark that saved the human race from the terrors of this new deluge.

The false lights of paganism grew dim and feeble in the boundless firmament which Christianity had opened up and the converted world turned to Christ and gave the office of enlightening the universe to Him by whom it was created.

"Oh! what a change! stupendous change! that almost in a day the cross should take the place of the Eagle—that Jupiter should descend from his niche in the capitol—that the city of Nero should become the city of Peter—that the humble tentmaker of Tarsus should give a faith to the greatest city of the earth and to the proudest people of the world and that a [illegible]

[illegible] above the ruins of [illegible] we can discern the [illegible] painting upon every century as she keeps pace with ageing world. We see her holy hermits buried in the monasteries of the middle ages, preserving the wrecks of civilization and the arts. Keeping alive those sparks which have rekindled the torches of modern science and research.

We hear her potent tones in all the past sounding out the truths of God in triumph and to day she leads the march of progress and civilization along the lengthening highways of the world.

Not only does the Catholic church civilize man but she sanctifies him as well. She meets him at the very threshold of life and never ceases her care and ministrations of love and kindness until she sees him pass safely through the dark portals of the tomb into the beauty and the brightness of the eternal life beyond. She it is who stands beside the cradle of his infancy and by the sacrement of of baptism gives back to His his lost inheritance to the eternal city of God. By confirmation she makes him a soldier of the cross and enrolls him among the number of her saints. In the adorable sacrament of the altar she gives him Christ himself, to comfort, to console and to strengthen him; and when he wanders far from the fold of Christ, she is the good shepherd who is ever searching amid the mountain fastnesses of sin to bring back by the sacrament of penance the one lost one to the ninety and the nine, who beneath the eternal shepherd's eye rest securely in the gracelit vales of God.

Oh! wondrous church! how worthy of our love!

For the Catholic church is the grandest institution that ever blessed the world. She is not the creature of a day nor the outgrowth of an age. She has lived in the past, she lives in the present and based upon the rock of Peter she will continue to the end of time. Earthly power will not endure, human grandeur will pass away but the church of Christ will live forever. To understand the truth of this let us glance back across the centuries to the time of ancient Greece and Rome. Rome was the mistress of the world, her standards were victorious upon every field, her prowess the theme of poet and of statesman. Greece was the preceptress of the nations, the home of science and the nurse of all that was great and grand in art and in literature; but their power is long since broken and they have passed away; while the church of Christ presided over at that time by the humble fisherman of Galilee still lives on and to-day after having braved the storms of more than eighteen centuries, with the sunlight of heaven falling fair upon her, she stands as immovable and as unchangeable as she was in the beginning, as grand and as entire under Leo as she was more than 1,800 years ago when Peter first sat upon her throne in the old Grecian city of Antioch. Other Romes have risen, have had their day and paid the debt of all things human and have passed away; but not so with the church of Christ, for she is destined to remain and to live on, surviving the wreck of matter and when time itself totters to its close over the graves of empires and through the dust of the dead centuries the church alone in all her undiminished power and grandeur will look down, with pity and commisseration upon the scattered fragments of all that the world esteemed as great and grand and enduring. Nor is this the language of exaggeration; for Christ himself has told his church that He would remain with her all days even to the consummation of the world and that neither the powers of earth nor hell should ever prevail against her. Christ himself has told her this and Christ is God and God is the Eternal Truth.

Oh! my dear brethren, you are to be congratulated on the grand work in which you are now engaged and the signal way in which Almighty God has blessed your undertaking and the labors of your good pastor, Father Kearney. He, I know, feels grateful for your efforts in the past and is hopeful for the future. Continue to co-operate with him in this noble work so auspiciously begun; for nothing can be more to the glory and the credit of a congregation than the erection of a beautiful Temple to God as it is the most productive of God's glory the most useful for man himself and pre-eminently a work of civilization, of sanctification and glorification.

May you live to see this beautiful temple reach its completion and may it be a source of untold blessings to you and your children and your children's children for many generations, so that when your life-work is done and the high purpose of your existence accomplished you may be worthy to enter into the eternal Temple of God to participate in the endless joys and glory which there abide forever in the everlasting home of the Eternal Father.

THE R. & O. MILLS.

The Assignees Make Their Report to the Creditors.

The following report or statement of accounts has been sent to all creditors of the R. & O. mills by the assignees:

To the Creditors of the Riverside and Oswego Falls Mills Company:

GENTLEMEN:—The following is a statement of the assets and liabilities of the company as of August 12th, 1889, which is believed to be substantially correct:

Assets, personal property, including stock, raw, in process and manufactured, product and supplies, excluding all machinery at Oswego Falls, as per sworn appraisement returned to court, $550,598 88. At Providence, as per inventory of Assignees, values estimated by them, $1,064,611.46; cash at Oswego Falls and Providence, $13,406.97; accounts considered as good, $10,777.75; accounts receivable considered as doubtful, $31,797.66; total, $1,661,187.72. Plants, including all machinery and furniture, real estate, tenements, water power, etc., at Oswego Falls at assessors' valuation, $246,900; at Providence, at assessors' valuation, $327,160. Plants at Oswego Falls are insured for $544,350; plants at Providence are insured for $660,000, all in mutual companies except tenements in Oswego Falls. Cost of both plants as appears by the books, $1,548,930.17.

Liabilities, bills and drafts payable, $2,401,272.50; open accounts payable, absolute, $573,425.49; open accounts payable, contingent estimate, $25,302.01; total $3,000,000.00. The above statement does not include about 400,000 pounds of wool at Providence unpaid for, worth, say, $130,000, which is under attachment, and the title to which is in dispute, nor any liability for the cost of the same, nor any claim for freight paid thereon, nor a large lot of wool in London and Boston claimed to have been bought for the mills and pledged for the purchase money, nor any liability for the same.

The property at Oswego Falls, up to the date of assignment, was in the custody of the sheriff, under the attachments aggregating $500,000 (and probably exceeding the entire available value of the property, if sold under the hammer as a whole real and personal) in favor of Messrs. A. D. Juillard & Company and divers other creditors, and operations in the mills there had been stopped. The two plants, at Oswego Falls and Providence, are so arranged as to be dependent upon each other for material, and the stoppage of one necessarily stops the operation of the other. Great shrinkage in the value of the personal property on hand would have resulted from stopping the mills. Orders for their entire production up to about January 1st, 1890, had been taken before the failure at prices which the assignees believe will show no loss in manufacturing. Furthermore, the plants must be sold at a great sacrifice if the mills are stopped, and the help allowed to scatter.

The assignees are enabled to perfect arrangements with the attaching creditors whereby one of the assignees, Mr. Braman, has been appointed receiver of the property at Oswego Falls by the Supreme court of New York. The mills are now running under arrangement between the assignees and the receiver, whereby the assignees agree to account to the receiver at the end of operations for a sum of money equal to the net difference between the appraised value of the stock at Oswego Falls at the time the reciever took possession and what remains in the mills there at the time of the settlement of the accounts. Such sum to be held by the receiver to await the result of the attachment suits in New York. The assignees were of opinion that it will be exceedingly difficult to advantageously sell the two plants together in their present condition, as independent parts of one concern, both on account of the magnitude of the plant and the disadvantages of manufacturing under the present organization.

They are further of opinion, in case it shall be found necessary in order to effect a sale, to move some parts of the machinery from one mill to the other; that this can be done so as to make one mill independent of the other; and that the change can be made gradually, without stopping the mills, and at an expense far less than the benefit to be derived from the change.

In order to give time to all parties interested to clear up the various complications attending the settlement of the assigned estate, to separate the two plants and to arrange for a sale or other reorganization of the mills as a plant in operation, the assignees believe that it would be for the interest of the creditors concerned, if they could be authorized to run the mills for the account and risk of the assigned estate at their discretion for a period not later than April 1st, 1890. The assignees will not run them further than to work up the stock on hand, nor undertake any steps about changing the machinery in the mills, unless authorized and requested so to do by the great body of the creditors. They enclose herewith a form of such request, which, if you please, you may sign and return to C. D. Owen and others, assignees, care Riverside and Oswego Falls mills, Providence, R. I.

Very Respectfully,

CHARLES D. OWEN,
JAMES B. CASE,

Cheese Market Report.

(From the Utica Herald.)

AT UTICA.

UTICA, Oct. 14.

There was no market to-day until about 3:30 p. m., as buyers did nothing previous to that, except to declare that the market was "off" and prices would have to decline. However, when they began to offer prices, it was found that cheese would sell about the same as last week, and those who had been thinking of holding back a part of their offering generally concluded to let it all go forward. Fully one-half of the September make is now marketed, taking into consideration those factorymen who have only just begun to dispose of that month's make. For there are a few who have still nearly all their Septembers on hand. A few good factories have gone into the skim cheese business, and are skimming at the factory—not allowing the patrons to skim from 1 to 1½ pounds of butter to the hundred of milk. At least one factory has put in a separator for this purpose.

Following is our usual table:

4	400	9⅝
55	5,109	9¾
4	314	9⅞
25	2,008	10c
16	1,560	10¼
27	2,391	10¼
5	550	9.5
135	12,842
Farm dairy	1,023
Total	13,864

Ruling price 9¾c. Transactions one year ago 14,360 boxes, ruling 10c. Two years ago 13,769 boxes, ruling 10⅝c.

Sales of butter amounted to 56 packages creamery at 23@26c. Bulk at former price.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Oct. 14.

Cheese—The market was a little disappointing to day all around. It was thought early in the day that a decline of one-half cent would be realized, but the market closes about one-quarter cent under last week's figures, the ruling price showing just this difference. The home trade is quite active. There was no disposition to hold back stocks to-day, and factories on the average sold fully one week's production. Two weeks more will take substantially all of the September cheese in this section. Cows are still doing quite well for the time of year, feed being quite good, as there has not been frost enough to materially injure grass, though of course, its nourishing qualities are much poorer.

Following is the list of transactions:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
2	280	9¾
64	4,311	10c
22	2,251	10¼
4	101	10½
12	786	Com.
104	7,729
Farm dairies	767
Total	8,496

Farm Dairies—Sales in the morning amounted to 767 boxes farm cheese. Prices ranged at 10 to 10¼c., the bulk going at 10¼c.

Butter—We find 74 packages farm dairy butter sold at 20 to 24c., most of it selling at 22c. About 20 packages of creamery sold at [illegible].

AT FULTON.

Twenty factories were represented at this market last Monday evening, with 2,200 boxes of cheese. Only about 1,200 boxes were sold at 9¾ to 10¼ cts. The balance was held over.

Why Do They Advertise?

The man who conducts his business on the theory that it doesn't pay, and he can't afford to advertise, sets up his judgment in opposition to that of all the best business men in the world. With a few years' experience in conducting a small business on a few thousand dollars of capital, he assumes to know more than thousands of men whose hourly transactions aggregate more than his do in a year, and who have made their millions by pursuing a course that he says doesn't pay.

If advertising doesn't pay, why is it that the most successful merchants of every town, large and small, are the heaviest advertisers? If advertising doesn't pay, who does the most business? If it doesn't pay to advertise, why do the heaviest business firms in the world spend millions in that way? Is it because they want to donate those millions of dollars to the newspaper and magazine publishers, or because they don't know as much about business as the six-for-a-dollar "storekeepers" in a country town, who, says money spent in advertising is thrown away, or donated to the man to whom it is paid? Such talk is simply ridiculous, and it requires more than the average patience to discuss the proposition of whether advertising pays or not with that kind of a man. His complacent self-conceit in assuming that he knows more than the whole business world is laughable, and reminds us of the man who proved that the world doesn't revolve by placing a pumpkin on a stump and watching it all night.—Princeton Exchange.

William B. Howard, the Democratic Nominee for Assemblyman.

At the Democratic Assembly Convention held in Oswego last week William B. Howard of this town was nominated for Member of Assembly. He is our present member of the Board of Supervisors and is by all odds the strongest man that could have been chosen from the Democratic ranks. On receiving the nomination he made one of his characteristic speeches in which he made it clear to all that while he realized the majority of 1,200 or more that he would have to contend against it was not his intention to allow the grass to grow under his feet. Mr. Howard is a farmer wide and creditably known, and with an excellent record back of him he will make a strong bid for the election.

A visit to the new gun factory building shows one that a very important industry for Fulton is soon to be in operation. The flue race which is to convey water for the power is completed. A building just north west of the main building is in process of construction, to be used as a brass foundry and boiler house. A large amount of fine machinery can now be seen on the lower floor and more is arriving daily. The shafting is now being put up on the three floors. The fourth floor will be used for the present as a store room.

In two weeks or less the machinery of the Tuerk Water Motor Co. for manufacturing water motors, power fans and novelties and the machinery of Acme Burnisher Co. both of which companies the Hunters are the chief persons interested will be moved here from Syracuse where they are now located and occupy the third floor in the building. This will bring a large number of skilled workmen and their families here. The Hunter-Comstock Arms Co. with the companies above mentioned will make a great addition to enterprising Fulton.

What Mr Stranahan Says About Taxes.

The question of the Equalization of taxes is one of the vital questions before the people of this State. In view of this fact I desire to say that in case I am elected to the Legislature I will support any and every measure that will reduce the burden of taxes upon real estate, and compel personal property to pay its just proportion of the taxes.

N. N. STRANAHAN.
Dated, Oct. 16th, 1889.

"Our German Ward."

This play will be at the opera house next Saturday evening. Being personally acquainted with the leading actor whose nom de plume is Allen Wightman and having his assurance that the play and company are first class in every particular we predict an excellent entertainment. The following is from the Portland, Oregon, Journal of a recent date.

The Academy was packed last night to see "Our German Ward". Fritz, Karl, and Casper, the Kedler, are nothing in comparison to this beautiful play, and Allen Wightman may be justly termed he King of German comedians; as a singer and dancer he has no superiors on the stage. The company carries the finest band and orchestra ever heard in this city.

With pleasure we call attention to the earnest appeal of the pastor of the Universalist church, in this issue. There seems to be a touching earnestness in behalf of religion, in his words. Let the people go and hear, and judge for themselves.

Two classes in gymnasium work were organized at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last evening. One for Friday afternoons, at 3:30 for scholars in the schools and the other one for Tuesday evenings at 8:30.

The revival meetings in the Universalist church in Oswego, seems to be phenomenal. From the Oswego papers we judge that, thus far, the interest centers largely upon Sanford Mitchell, the wonderful singer and Rev. B. Brunning of Fulton.

Capt. Boyd of Mexico was arraigned on the charge of manslaughter in the first degree at Oswego last week He pleaded not guilty. His bail was fixed at $6,000. T. E. O'Keefe and Thomas Kehoe of Oswego qualified in that sum and Boyd is now at his hotel in Mexico.

There appears to be an abundance of work at the R. & O. mills. Supt. Ballou announces that it would take three months if both the Providence and Oswego Falls factories were run to their full capacity to fill the orders now on hand. In some of the departments overwork is now being done. An encouraging outlook for this winter anyway.

All lovers of music will find it to their interest to attend the opening concert of Musical Convention to be held at the Baptist church Monday evening, Oct. 21, under the management of C. S. Robertson, supported by a quartet of capable singers who come here for the week commencing on that date to give a series of instructions on the rudiments of music, closing Friday evening with a concert free, to which all are invited. For further particulars note hangers in store windows.

An exciting runaway occurred Monday, forenoon. A team of horses attached to a large box wagon, belonging to George Ward who lives down the river, became frightened near Gage's mills and started on the run up crowded First street. In front of the Lewis House they ran into an old buggy belonging to a man from Hannibal and completely demolished it. Here the runaways freed themselves from the box part of the wagon and the balance was left in front of THE TIMES office. The horses then dashed up the street as far as Crahan's paint shop where they turned and again dashed down the crowded thoroughfare to the point about where they started, between True Bros. and Gage's mills. Charles Harris in attempting to stop them was knocked down and narrowly escaped serious injuries. There were some other narrow escapes. No serious injuries resulted to the horses.

Universalist Revival Meeting in Fulton.

There will be commenced next Monday evening, nothing preventing, a series of religious meetings in the Universalist church, for the purpose of presenting to the people the need of salvation from sin and the beauty and joy of righteousness of life. It has been asked, "What does it mean to have a revival of religion in the Universalist church?" I can answer in the words of the Master's invitation, "Come and See."

These meetings will be under the direction of the pastor, assisted by the marvelous religious singer, Stanford Mitchell, of Boston, Mass., the Sankey of the Universalist church. To hear him will be a great treat to Fulton friends, as being a master of art, a school of instruction to lovers of music and an inspiration to worship God from his touching tenderness, pathos and power. Let everybody come every night who can and bring your "Gospel Hymns."

Other ministers will be present to help on the good work, among whom will be that earnest worker Rev. Ure Mitchell of Cortland N. Y. These meetings are not for the benefit of Universalists alone but to inspire all with a higher aim, a more blessedness of life, that Fulton in the aggregate, shall feel more and more the divine influence of the Gospel of Christ. God be merciful unto us and help us as Oswego is being blest, just now.

B. Brunning.

Hon. Newton W. Nutting, representative in Congress in this the twenty-seventh district of this State, died at his home in Oswego at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He had been school commissioner, district attorney and county judge of this county, and was a member of the 48th, 50th and 51st Congress. He resigned his seat on the 10th that the vacancy might be filled at the coming election. Ex-Congressman Sereno E. Paine of Auburn will doubtless be his successor. Why Do They Advertise?

The man who conducts his business on the theory that it doesn't pay, and he can't afford to advertise, sets up his judgment in opposition to that of all the best business men in the world. With a few years' experience in conducting a small business on a few thousand dollars of capital, he assumes to know more than thousands of men whose hourly transactions aggregate more than his do in a year, and who have made their millions by pursuing a course that he says doesn't pay.

If advertising doesn't pay, why is it that the most successful merchants of every town, large and small, are the heaviest advertisers? If advertising doesn't pay, who does the most business? If it doesn't pay to advertise, why do the heaviest business firms in the world spend millions in that way? Is it because they want to donate those millions of dollars to the newspaper and magazine publishers, or because they don't know as much about business as the six-for-a dollar "storekeepers" in a country town, who, says money spent in advertising is thrown away, or donated to the man to whom it is paid? Such talk is simply ridiculous, and it requires more than the average patience to discuss the proposition of whether advertising pays or not with that kind of a man. His complacent self-conceit in assuming that he knows more than the whole business world is laughable, and reminds us of the man who proved that the world doesn't revolve by placing a pumpkin on a stump and watching it all night.—Princeton Exchange.

William B. Howard, the Democratic Nominee for Assemblyman.

At the Democratic Assembly Convention held in Oswego last week William B. Howard of this town was nominated for Member of Assembly. He is our present member of the Board of Supervisors and is by all odds the strongest man that could have been chosen from the Democratic ranks. On receiving the nomination he made one of his characteristic speeches in which he made it clear to all that while he realized the majority of 1,200 or more that he would have to contend against it was not his intention to allow the grass to grow under his feet. Mr. Howard is a farmer wide and creditably known, and with an excellent record back of him he will make a strong bid for the election.

What Mr Stranahan Says About Taxes.

The question of the Equalization of taxes is one of the vital questions before the people of this State. In view of this fact I desire to say that in case I am elected to the Legislature I will support any and every measure that will reduce the burden of taxes upon real estate, and compel personal property to pay its just proportion of the taxes.

N. N. STRANAHAN.

"Our German Ward."

This play will be at the opera house next Saturday evening. Being personally acquainted with the leading actor whose non de plume is Allen Wightman and having his assurance that the play and company are first class in every particular we predict an excellent entertainment. The following is from the Portland, Oregon, Journal of a recent date.

The Academy was packed last night to see "Our German Ward". Fritz, Karl, and Casper, the Kodler, are nothing in comparison to this beautiful play, and Allen Wightman may be justly termed he King of German comedians; as a singer and dancer he has no superiors on the stage. The company carries the finest band and orchestra ever heard in this city.

With pleasure we call attention to the earnest appeal of the pastor of the Universalist church, in this issue. There seems to be a touching earnestness in behalf of religion, in his words. Let the people go and hear, and judge for themselver.

Two classes in gymnasium work were organized at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last evening. One for Friday afternoons, at 3:30 for scholars in the schools and the other one for Tuesday evenings at 8:30.

The revival meetings in the Universalist church in Oswego, seems to be phenomenal. From the Oswego papers we judge that, thus far, the interest centers largely upon Sanford Mitchell, the wonderful singer and Rev. B. Brunning of Fulton.

Capt. Boyd of Mexico was arraigned on the charge of manslaughter in the first degree at Oswego last week He pleaded not guilty. His bail was fixed at $6,000. T. E. O'Keefe and Thomas Kehoe of Oswego qualified in that sum and Boyd is now at his hotel in Mexico.

There appears to be an abundance of work at the R. & O. mills. Supt. Ballou announces that it would take three months if both the Providence and Oswego Falls factories were run to their full capacity to fill the orders now on hand. In some of the departments overwork is now being done. An encouraging outlook for this winter any way.

All lovers of music will find it to their interest to attend the opening concert of Musical Convention to be held at the Baptist church Monday evening, Oct. 21, under the management of C. S. Robertson, supported by a quartet of capable singers who come here for the week commencing on that date to give a series of instructions on the rudiments of music, closing Friday evening with a concert free, to which all are invited. For further particulars note hangers in store windows.

An exciting runaway occurred Monday, forenoon. A team of horses attached to a large box wagon, belonging to George Ward who lives down the river, became frightened near Gage's mills and started on the run up crowded First street. In front of the Lewis House they ran into an old buggy belonging to a man from Hannibal and completely demolished it. Here the runaways freed themselves from the box part of the wagon and the balance was left in front of THE TIMES office. The horses then dashed up the street as far as Crahan's paint shop where they turned and again dashed down the crowded thoroughfare to the point about where they started, between True Bros. and Gage's mills. Charles Harris in attempting to stop them was knocked down and narrowly escaped serious injuries. There were some other narrow escapes. No serious injuries resulted to the horses.

Universalist Revival Meeting in Fulton.

There will be commenced next Monday evening, nothing preventing, a series of religious meetings in the Universalist church, for the purpose of presenting to the people the need of salvation from sin and the beauty and joy of righteousness of life. It has been asked, "What does it mean to have a revival of religion in the Universalist church?" I can answer in the words of the Master's invitation, "Come and See."

These meetings will be under the direction of the pastor, assisted by the marvelous religious singer, Stanford Mitchell, of Boston, Mass., the Sankey of the Universalist church. To hear him will be a great treat to Fulton friends, as being a master of art, a school of instruction to lovers of music and an inspiration to worship God from his touching tenderness, pathos and power. Let everybody come every night who can and being your "Gospel Hymns."

Other ministers will be present to help on the good work, among whom will be that earnest worker Rev. Ure Mitchell of Cortland N. Y. These meetings are not for the benefit of Universalists alone but to inspire all with a higher aim, a more blessedness of life, that Fulton in the aggregate, shall feel more and more the divine influence of the Gospel of Christ. God be merciful unto us and help us as Oswego is being blest, just now.

B. Brunning.

OBITUARY.

On Thursday, Oct. 15th, Mrs. Stanley Wiggins, daughter of Dr. E. H. Boyd of Hannibal, died suddenly of congestion of the lungs. Mrs. Wiggins was only ill for a short time. She was only thirty years of age.

Mrs. Charlotte Wiltse died at her home in Oswego Falls, on Tuesday, Oct. 15th, at the age of 65 years. Funeral services were held at the house this forenoon at 10 o'clock and the remains taken to Hannibal for burial.

Congressman Nutting Dead.

Hon. Newton W. Nutting, representative in Congress in this the twenty-seventh district of this State, died at his home in Oswego at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He had been school commissioner, district attorney and county judge of this county, and was a member of the 48th, 50th and 51st Congress. He resigned his seat on the 10th that the vacancy might be filled at the coming election. Ex-Congressman Sereno E. Paine of Auburn will doubtless be his successor. Mr. Nutting's disease was cancer the symptoms became manifest three years ago, but were not considered of a dangerous character until within the past few months.

The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from his late residence.

The better the care that is given to horses the easier they can be kept in good condition with feeding.

Persons who wonder why boys leave the farm should go into the country now and see them putting in seventeen hours per day.

The yield of crops under the soiling system and preserved by ensilage is sufficient at a moderate estimate to maintain two cows for every acre of ground cultivated.

According to a Massachusetts Exchange the town of Plymouth boasts of the tallest windmill in the world. The windmill stands 119 feet above the ground and has a wheel 18 feet in diameter.

Onions keep best in barn lofts where they freeze, says Green's Fruit Grower. It is not freezing, but alternate freezing, and thawing, that injures them.

Probably a good many farm implements and machines whose period of usefulness is past for the season are lying around in different places or standing out exposed to the sun and rain. It will be an important saving to clean and house them at once.

The potato crop of New England and New York has been seriously damaged by rot and blight. There is a good prospect, however, of an average crop in the country at large, while in Canida and the Provinces a large yield is reported.

One writer on the horse claims that when a hores is brought in from work sweating freely the harness, especially the saddle and collar, should not be removed until it dries off (contrary to the usual practice of taking them off at once,) and that this will prevent harness galls and other sores.

A Centrel New York correspondent writes to the Weekly Tribune: "Potatoes being so cheap last Fall, a farmer in an adjoining county placed a quantity at the the bottom of his silo. They were imbedded in and covered with chaff, and the silo filled with cornfodder as usual. Recently the bottom was reached and the tubers found to be sound and solid as the day they they were put in. This may solve the problem of having plump, crisp old potatoes until new ones are ready for the table."

Potato Plows.

Much has been said in past seasons by the various agricultural writers about the work of potato diggers. Most of what was said referred to the expensive machines that are beyond the reach of the small growers. Rural New Yorker has of late held correspondence with farmers who use potato plows of various designs. These tools are made and sold under different patents, though they all work on essentially the same principle. The potatoes are thrown out of the ground by means of a contrivance like two plows, one right and the other left, placed together so as to throw the earth in both directions. Above these plows are fastened long bars. The earth is to fall through the bars, while the potatoes are supposed to roll off to the ground.

Who "The Duchess" Is.

"Who is 'The Duchess?'" is a question often asked by the thousands who read the novels of this remarkably popular writer. And, perhaps, never has a non de plume more completely screened the identity of its owner. "The Duchess" is really Mrs. Margaret Hungerford, residing in a home of comfort and beauty in Ireland's famous county, Cork. She is an industrious woman, and writes a complete novel with more ease than many of us would exercise in writing a short article. She is domestic in her nature, and dislikes to talk about her work. Her modesty is proverbial among her friends, and many of her neighbors in the little Irish town where she lives are ignorant of the fact that "Madame Hungerford," as they call her, is the author of the novels that lie on their tables. She rarely associates her personal self with her literary non de plume in her correspondence with friends or strangers. The authoress, in years, is past middle age, but retains a youthful appearance. She is fond of children, and their little characteristics are often incorporated in her stories as she sits writing at her window, watching them at their play on the [illegible]

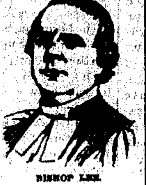
BISHOP SEABURY.

[illegible] some time thereafter in [illegible] the separation from England and reorganizing on an American basis. The first general convention met in Philadelphia in 1785, but delegates were present only from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and Virginia. New England was entirely unrepresented, and the reasons therefor, as set forth in the reports, give us an interesting insight into the condition and ideas of the time. It is noted, for instance, that Bishop Seabury, of Connecticut, had received consecration in 1784 at the hands of a "non-juring bishop" in Scotland, and was therefore of doubtful eligibility.

And what is a "non-juror?" asks the average American of today. Well, when William of Orange was made king, a few bishops and priests of the established church, headed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, William Sancroft, refused to take the oath of allegiance to him on the ground that he was not the legitimate king, and were therefore "deprived;" so they resolved that they were the only true church, and maintained a regular succession for over a century. And this sort of thing was still of consequence after the American Revolution! It is like taking one back to ancient history in a century.

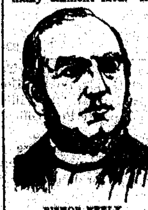


BISHOP LEE.

The convention met again in October, 1786, adopted a constitution and slightly revised the Book of Common Prayer to make it applicable to the United States. They also arranged with the British bishops for a perfectly regular and undisputed succession, and accordingly Bishops William White, for Pennsylvania, and Samuel Provoost, for New York (the same who officiated later at Washington's inauguration), went over and were consecrated Feb. 4, 1787. On their return the entire Episcopal body was consulted, and after thorough discussion the reorganization on an American basis was completed in October, 1789. In that year there were in the United States seven dioceses, 3 bishops, 190 clergymen and about 7,500 communicants.

The present convention represents fifty dioceses, fourteen missionary jurisdictions, seventy bishops, fourteen missionary bishops, and in round numbers 3,500 clergymen and 450,000 communicants. It is the highest body in the church, and is organised like the American congress, in two bodies, each with the power of originating measures and of amending or nullifying those of the other. The house of bishops, like the senate, has secret sessions, but the sessions of the house of clerical and lay delegates are always open to public inspection. The latter house consists of four clergymen and four laymen from each diocese, and therefore contains some 400 members. The delegates from the missionary jurisdictions have seats, but no votes.

Among the members of both houses are many eminent men. In the upper house Bishop Williams, of Connecticut, the venerable presiding bishop of the church, takes high rank as a theologian. Bishops Doane, of Albany, McLaren, of Chicago, Littlejohn, of Brooklyn, and Gallaher, of Louisiana, are men of national note, and Bishop Whipple, of Minnesota, is known throughout the Christian world for his labors in behalf of the Indians. Bishop Grafton, of Fond Du Lac, was once prominent among the "Cowley Fathers;" Bishop Thompson, of Mississippi, was formerly rector of Christ's church, New York city, and Bishop Seymour, of Illinois, was also a former dean of the General Theological seminary, of New York. Noted among the clerical deputies in the lower house are Rev. Dr. Phillips Brooks, of Boston, Dr. Henry A. Coit, of St. Paul's school, Concord, N. H., Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, of New York, and many others.



BISHOP NEELY.

Among the lay delegates are many whose names look a little odd in a religious body, as the public knows them well as politicians or men of scientific or literary fame, such as ex-Mayor Seth Low, of Brooklyn; Erastus Corning, of Albany; Hamilton Fish, Dr. Shattuck and Columbus Delano. The last meeting of the convention was in Chicago in 1886, as it is a triennial body, and there many exciting issues were introduced and postponed to this session to give time for thorough discussion. After the preliminary work is done, therefore, some interesting debates are expected. Most important of these will probably be on the proposition to radically revise the liturgy and prayer book.

The Rev. Dr. W. R. Huntington brought the matter forward several years ago and produced a great impression in Episcopalians generally. Six years ago a committee on revision recommended several changes, some of which became law at Chicago three years ago. The whole matter was then referred to a committee of fifteen to report at this convention. The report is already in print and no doubt has been eagerly read by every earnest churchman. In a general way it may be said that the changes recommended affect no vital doctrine, but tend to popularize the book. The committee has also provided a book of offices for sundry occasions not provided for in the prayer book, and it is expected that the convention will authorize the provisional use of this book.

A hymnal committee was also appointed at the last convention, and has ready for this [illegible] to consider [illegible] compilation of [illegible]

The acreage of rye is steadily on the decline in Europe.

The tobacco tax in this country amounts to over $30,000,000 a year.

Old fat hens are out of business now and will not pay their board if kept over. Let them go to market at once.

The better the care that is given to horses the easier they can be kept in good condition with feeding.

Persons who wonder why boys leave the farm should go into the country now and see them putting in seventeen hours per day.

The yield of crops under the soiling system and preserved by ensilage is sufficient at a moderate estimate to maintain two cows for every acre of ground cultivated.

According to a Massachusetts Exchange the town of Plymouth boasts of the tallest windmill in the world. The windmill stands 119 feet above the ground and has a wheel 18 feet in diameter.

Onions keep best in barn lofts where they freeze, says Green's Fruit Grower. It is not freezing, but alternate freezing, and thawing, that injures them.

Probably a good many farm implements and machines whose period of usefulness is past for the season are lying around in different places or standing out exposed to the sun and rain. It will be an important saving to clean and house them at once.

The potato crop of New England and New York has been seriously damaged by rot and blight. There is a good prospect, however, of an average crop in the country at large, while in Canida and the Provinces a large yield is reported.

One writer on the horse claims that when a horse is brought in from work sweating freely the harness, especially the saddle and collar, should not be removed until it dries off (contrary to the usual practice of taking them off at once,) and that this will prevent harness galls and other sores.

A Central New York correspondent writes to the Weekly Tribune: "Potatoes being so cheap last Fall, a farmer in an adjoining county placed a quantity at the the bottom of his silo. They were imbedded in and covered with chaff, and the silo filled with cornfodder as usual. Recently the bottom was reached and the tubers found to be sound and solid as the day they they were put in. This may solve the problem of having plump, crisp old potatoes until new ones are ready for the table."

Potato Plows.

Much has been said in past seasons by the various agricultural writers about the work of potato diggers. Most of what was said referred to the expensive machines that are beyond the reach of the small growers. Rural New Yorker has of late held correspondence with farmers who use potato plows of various designs. These tools are made and sold under different patents, though they all work on essentially the same principle. The potatoes are thrown out of the ground by means of a contrivance like two plows, one right and the other left, placed together so as to throw the earth in both directions. Above these plows are fastened long bars. The earth is to fall through the bars, while the potatoes are supposed to roll off to the ground.

Who "The Duchess" Is.

"Who is 'The Duchess?'" is a question often asked by the thousands who read the novels of this remarkably popular writer. And, perhaps, never has a nom de plume more completely screened the identity of its owner. "The Duchess" is really Mrs. Margaret Hungerford, residing in a home of comfort and beauty in Ireland's famous county, Cork. She is an industrious woman, and writes a complete novel with more ease than many of us would exercise in writing a short article. She is domestic in her nature, and dislikes to talk about her work. Her modesty is proverbial among her friends, and many of her neighbors in the little Irish town where she lives are ignorant of the fact that "Madame Hungerford," as they call her, is the author of the novels that lie on their tables. She rarely associates her personal self with her literary nom de plume in her correspondence with friends or strangers. The authoress, in years, is past middle age, but retains a youthful appearance. She is fond of children, and their little characteristics are often incorporated in her stories as she sits writing at her window, watching them at their play on the lawn beneath. It is estimated that more copies of her novels have been sold than of those of any living writer. Any new story by her is always sure of a wide reading on both sides of the sea. Of what is generally regarded as her most popular story, "Phyllis," more than a quarter of a million copies have been sold. Her literary work brings her a neat income, enabling her to live in comfort. She has been married twice, her present domestic relations being of the happiest nature.—Edward W. Bok.

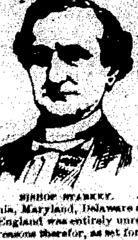
IMPORTANCE OF THIS YEAR'S TRIENNIAL CONVENTION.

It Is Practically Their Centennial Reorganization of [illegible]—Growth of the Church—Important Issues Before the Last Two Conventions to Be Settled Now.

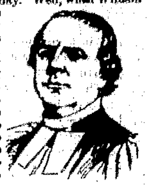
In this age of centennials not the least interesting is the regular triennial convention of the Episcopal church in America, now in session in New York city, as it convened just a hundred years from the time when the church completed its official organization in America. Not only will it be historically interesting, but many questions will be discussed which show the progress of the church government towards a democracy, and their solution may result in still more radical changes.

Like other church bodies then in existence the Episcopalians suffered much disorganization during the American Revolution, and were engaged for some years thereafter in completing the separation from England and reorganizing on an American model. The first general convention met in Philadelphia in 1785, but delegates were present only from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and Virginia. New England was entirely unrepresented, and the reasons therefor, as set forth in the reports, give us an interesting insight into the condition and ideas of the time. It is noted, for instance, that Bishop Seabury, of Connecticut, had received consecration in 1784 at the hands of a "non-juring bishop" in Scotland, and was therefore of doubtful eligibility.



BISHOP SEABURY.

And what is a "non-juror?" asks the average American of today. Well, when William of Orange was made king, a few bishops and priests of the established church, headed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, William Sancroft, refused to take the oath of allegiance to him on the ground that he was not the legitimate king, and were therefore "deprived;" so they resolved that they were the only true church, and maintained a regular succession for over a century. And this sort of thing was still of consequence after the American Revolution! It is like taking one back to ancient history in a century.

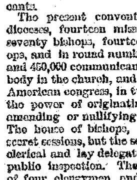


BISHOP LEE.

The convention met again in October, 1786, adopted a constitution and slightly revised the Book of Common Prayer to make it applicable to the United States. They also arranged with the British bishops for a perfectly regular and undisputed succession, and accordingly Bishops William White, for Pennsylvania, and Samuel Provoost, for New York (the same who officiated later at Washington's inauguration), went over and were consecrated Feb. 4, 1787. On their return the entire Episcopal body was consulted, and after thorough discussion the reorganization on an American basis was completed in October, 1789. In that year there were in the United States seven dioceses, 3 bishops, 190 clergymen and about 7,600 communicants.

The present convention represents fifty dioceses, fourteen missionary jurisdictions, seventy bishops, fourteen missionary bishops, and in round numbers 3,600 clergymen and 450,000 communicants. It is the highest body in the church, and is organized like the American congress, in two bodies, each with the power of originating measures and of amending or nullifying those of the other. The house of bishops, like the senate, has secret sessions, but the sessions of the house of clerical and lay delegates are always open to public inspection. The latter house consists of four clergymen and four laymen from each diocese, and therefore contains some 400 members. The delegates from the missionary jurisdictions have seats, but no votes.

Among the members of both houses are many eminent men. In the upper house Bishop Williams, of Connecticut, the venerable presiding bishop of the church, takes high rank as a theologian. Bishops Doane, of Albany, McLaren, of Chicago, Littlejohn, of Brooklyn, and Galleher, of Louisiana, are men of national note, and Bishop Whipple, of Minnesota, is known throughout the Christian world for his labors in behalf of the Indians. Bishop Grafton, of Fond Du Lac, was once prominent among the "Cowley Fathers;" Bishop Thompson, of Mississippi, was formerly rector of Christ's church, New York city, and Bishop Seymour, of Illinois, was also a former dean of the General Theological seminary, of New York. Noted among the clerical deputies in the lower house are Rev. Dr. Phillips Brooks, of Boston, Dr. Henry A. Coit, of St. Paul's school, Concord, N. H., Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, of New York, and many others.

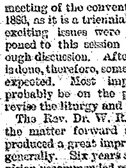


BISHOP NEELY.

Among the lay delegates are many whose names look a little odd in a religious body, as the public knows them well as politicians or men of scientific or literary fame, such as ex-Mayor Seth Low, of Brooklyn; Erastus Corning, of Albany; Hamilton Fish, Dr. Shattuck and Columbus Delano. The last meeting of the convention was in Chicago in 1886, as it is a triennial body, and there many exciting issues were introduced and postponed to this session to give time for thorough discussion. After the preliminary work is done, therefore, some interesting debates are expected. Most important of these will probably be on the proposition to radically revise the liturgy and prayer book.

The Rev. Dr. W. R. Huntington brought the matter forward several years ago and produced a great impression in Episcopalians generally. Six years ago a committee on revision recommended several changes, some of which became law at Chicago three years ago. The whole matter was then referred to a committee of fifteen to report at this convention. The report is already in print and no doubt has been eagerly read by every earnest churchman. In a general way it may be said that the changes recommended effect no vital doctrine, but tend to popularize the book. The committee has also provided a book of offices for sundry occasions not provided for in the prayer book, and it is expected that the convention will authorize the provisional use of this book.

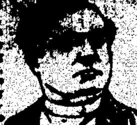
A hymnal committee was also appointed at the last convention, and has ready for this one to consider a compilation of six hundred and fifty hymns. The English language is so flexible and capable of so much ambiguity, and words in theological lines often have meanings so different from those they have in other lines, that it is not surprising that many critics have found many dubious passages in the proposed hymns and a very lively controversy thereon is in progress. But the question of most intense interest is that of changing the name of the church, [illegible]



BISHOP TALBOT.

A small but very energetic section of the [illegible]

[illegible] Carolina, [illegible] which the [illegible] public is familiar, will furnish the occasion for a lively debate on the "colored brother." The proposition for a separate church for the colored people will, of course, excite earnest opposition, and the practice of ignoring all race lines, which practice is Episcopal the world over, has already created a schism in South Carolina. These are, perhaps, the most exciting questions the convention will have before it during the month it will sit.



BISHOP CLARK.

"Look at that beautiful young rosebud with a lot of old bugs swarming around her," remarked Brown, as several old boys were flirting with a young lady at a ball. "Yes, but these are gold bugs, so the rosebud don't mind it," said Jones.—Texas Siftings.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines.

Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's.

Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered."

Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

The Old Stage Door.

The curtain had fallen, the lights were dim,
The rain came down with a steady pour,
A white-haired man with a kindly face
Peered through the panes of the old stage door.
"I'm getting too old to be drenched like that,"
He muttered, and turning, met face to face
The woman whose genius an hour before
Like a mighty power had filled the place.

"Yes, much too old," with a smile she said,
And she laid her hand on his silver hair;
"You shall ride with me to your home to-night,
For that is my carriage standing there."
The old door-tender stood, doffing his hat,
And holding the door, but she would not stir,
Though he said it was not for the "likes of him
To ride in a kerridge with such as her."

"Come, put out your lights," she said to him,
"I've something important I wish to say;
And I can't stand here in the draft, you know,
I can tell you much better while on the way."
So into the carriage the old man crept,
Thanking her gratefully o'er and o'er,
Till she bade him listen while she would tell
A story concerning the old stage door.

"It was raining in torrents, ten years ago
This very night, and a friendless child
Stood shivering there by that old stage door,
Dreading her walk in a night so wild.
She was only one of the 'extra' girls,
But you gave her two-pence to take the car,
And said, "Heaven bless ye, my little one,
Ye can pay me back if ye ever star."

"So you cast your bread on the waters then,
And I pay you back, as my heart demands,
And we're even now—no! not quite," she said,
As she emptied her purse in his trembling hands,
"And if ever you're needy and want a friend,
You know where to come, for your little mite
Put hope in my heart and made me strive
To gain the success you have seen to-night."

Then the carriage stopped at the old man's door,
And the gaslight shone on him standing there,
And he stepped to the curb as she rolled away,
While his thin lips murmured a fervent prayer.
He looked at the silver and notes and gold,
And he said, "She gives all this to me?
My bread has come back a thousand fold,
God bless her! God bless all such as she!"

"A Friend Indeed" is what people who have been tortured by dyspepsia and then been cured by Laxador, insist upon calling this now famous remedy.

The Laugh That Rings.

A young man who is credited by his friends with being a good deal of a philosopher penned me in a corner to-day and harangued me as follows:

"Did you ever study the human laugh as an index to human character? It is an infallible test, me boy. Did you ever know a man who simpered and giggled like a girl who wasn't a sneak in his heart? And, on the contrary, did you ever know a fellow who laughed squarely out with a good honest roar who wasn't the prince of good fellows?

"A shrill voice is indicative of deceit, and a deep chuckle proves sincerity and good measure. By this I dont mean that a man with a tenor voice can't laugh as though he was honest, or one with a bass voice cover his insincerity with a mere bellow. It's the ring that talks. If the laugh has no ring in it you can put the fellow down as a half hearted cuss, no matter if his laugh is loud enough to lift the roof of the Auditorium. Stand twenty men up in a row before me and do something to get them all laughing, and I'll separate the good fellows from the Miss Nancies about as quickly as you could get outside of a beefsteak after a year's famine. See?"

I said I saw, and made a successful dive for liberty.—Chicago Journal.

It is Death by Electricity.

The decision of Judge Day establishing the constitutionality of the law providing for the execution of criminals by electricity was a foregone conclusion. There was really nothing to be said on the other side, and if there had not happened to be an interest involved which could afford to retain fluent lawyers, no attempt would have been made to say anything. It is an outrage that a proceeding ostensibly to obtain a remission of capital punishment should have been really an advertising dodge and that the courts should be compelled to listen to arguments made in the interest of an electrical company, but which professed to be made in the interests of a condemned criminal. There was probably no way of preventing this exhibition, but it was none the less disgraceful to everybody in any degree responsible for it. —N. Y. Times.

SCRIBBLING ON THE EIFFEL TOWER.

Names, Puns, Verses and Sentiments of Many Sorts in Many Languages.

Big as the Eiffel tower is, it is not too circumscribed for people who insist upon writing their names and recording their impressions on its iron framework. They have used up all the available space. All the girders, beams, protection rails and rivet heads within reach bear the literary contributions of many thousand visitors. The tower is a gigantic cosmopolitan registery of names. Between 15,000 and 20,000 people ascend it every day, and most of them consider it their duty to add to the collection. The Figaro newspaper keeps a visitors' book at its printing office on the second floor to accomodate visitors who have not the desire or who cannot find the space to scribble on the iron-work.

The writing left is in as many languages as there are nationalties among the visitors, but the most interesting contributions come from the native French. A Frenchman grows naturally into the opinion that France is the fountain of progress, civilization, and everything else. This opinion remains his principle article of faith through life—especially when his life is confined to France. When he mounts the Eiffel Tower, by means of American elevators, he is more than ever convinced of the universal supremacy of France. He bursts out into uncontrolable fits of patriotism.

"Glory to the noble France," writes one after his name. "Honor to French genius," says another. "Having mounted the Eiffel Tower I am proud of being French," writes M. Masson "I will name my next daughter Eiffeline," says a Bordeaux engineer. One M. Gouloux, apostrophizes thus: "French genius, thou wilt always be the first in the world!" and a patriotic Marseillasis left this record: "Long live la grand France, the birthplace of the civilization of the entire world."

Some of the visitors drop into poetry, and perpetrate bad puns at the expense of the tower. "What height is the tailor who has forgotten his measure and sits down on the third platform of the tower?" is a common calembour which one left. The answer, of course, is that he is sitting sans metre, or at cent. (100) metres. This next, of the same style, was addressed to the silk weavers of Lyons: "The Lyonese may content themselves for as often as they ascend the Eiffel Tower they will see all Paris en bas de soie—in silk stockings, or underneath, as bas de soie usually are. The punsters, as they would say, sometimes rise to the situation, but puns and bad poetry are not improved upon by translation.

M. Sellier, of the grand opera, writes:—"I wish that my voice rose as high as the tower." Isidore Goldschmidt, a prestidigitateur:—"I have found my master pour les tours" (for tricks), and an Italian confesses that "at 1,000 feet I can find nothing to write which would be up to the situation—Aquello empego." A Dutchman leaves this neat compliment behind him:—"The Tower is not so high as our esteem for France," and a Spaniard says:—"The Tower of Babel separated peoples by the confusion of tongues, and the Eiffel Tower reunites them." More than one thinks this very clever: "I never thought I would occupy such a lofty position in life."

The Tower makes a favorable impression on love-sick Orlandos, who scrawl sentimental messages to their Rosalinds whenever they get the chance,

To her who hasn't come.—Paul.

Jeanne ma cherie; from the top of the tower I send thee a kiss.—Alphonse.

I think of thee, Adeo aide.

These are samples of the messages left. They are all written in the second person—the usual French lover's style.

Catholic priests are not above recording their impressions. They write in Latin.

"O, altitudo!" exclaims the cure of Villeparisis, in Seine-et-Marne.

"Magnificat anima mea Dominum," says a priest from the Meuse,

Another excels them all with his "Gloria in excelsis Deo."

Aphorisms.

Of all vanities and fopperies, the vanity of high birth is the greatest. True nobility is derived from virtue, not from birth. Titles, indeed, may be purchased; but virtue is the only coin that makes the bargain valid.—Burton.

Caution in crediting, reserve in speaking, and revealing one's self to very few, are the best securities both of peace and a good understanding with the world and with the inward peace of our own minds.—Thomas a-Kempis.

Censure is the tax a man pays to the public for being eminent.—Swift.

The pleasantest part of a man's life is generally that which passes in courtship, provided his passion be sincere and the party beloved, kind, with discretion. Love, desire, hope, all the pleasing motions of the soul, rise in the pursuit.—Addison.

Despair makes a despicable figure and descends from a mean original. 'Tis the offspring of fear, of laziness and impatience; it argues a defect of spirit and resolution, and oftentimes of honesty too.—Collier.

The Arizona Kicker.

We extract the following from the last issue of the Arizona Kicker:

We are left. For the last four weeks our friends have been eagerly pressing us to take the nomination for mayor on the people's ticket. We do not crave office, and are a very busy man, but the pressure became so great we had to give in.

Last Tuesday evening the city caucus was held and instead of being nominated for mayor we received only three votes out of upwards of sixty cast. Our friends were mistaken when they insisted that we were wanted. Instead of being the unanimous choice of the patriotic people we had the pleasure of seeing Jerry Baxter, the meanest man in town, given the nomination.

Oh, well, that's human nature right through, and an editor fool enough to go into politics deserves to be driven head first into the tan-bark as we were. We have a word to say, however. The Kicker will not only bolt every candidate on the ticket, but we guarantee to have nine-tenths of the nominees in prison before they are a month older. Veni cum granis! which is Latin for saying: Don't monkey with a newspaper man.

HAVE GOT A FEW.—A correspondent inquires if The Kicker has any libel suits on hand, as the result of its independent and outspoken course. Well, yes, it has a few—about four dozen, we believe, but we are not worrying any. They have all been instituted by second class ducks, who haven't any character to be damaged, and the whole batch will probably be thrown out of court in a lump some day. In the beginning of our career a libel suit used to give us the colic for three days and nights, and we'd wake up from a troubled sleep to find our cheeks wet with tears, but we soon got sun-burned. Indeed, we rather prefer to see them come. It looks like business.

A BASE COWARD.—The item in the Chicago Press of recent date that we had been fatally wounded by a judge for publishing a slander, was not exactly correct. In the first place the individual was a cowboy named Rose. In the next place the article was true, and in the third place, after he had fired five shots at us without touching a hair, we knocked him silly with a squash which we picked up in front of Snyder's grocery. Then we stood on him for about half an hour, and when he went out of town our brindled dog was chasing him at a speed of 20 miles an hour.—Detroit Free Press.

Two Heroes.

A.—"You are a base ball umpire, are you not?"

B.—"That's my trade."

"Well, we two take our lives in our hands every day. Shake, old fel, shake."

"Are you, too, an umpire?"

"No, I wish I was, I live in Chicago and am a witness for the prosecution in the Cronin case."

Twelve Helpful Rules.

Here are some that have been tried with noticeably good effect.

1. Do not interrupt others in conversation unnecessarily.
2. Be unselfish.
3. Have courage to speak the truth
4. Do not shirk.
5. If you have been to blame, do not try to throw the blame on some-one else. "If she hadn't done so and so, it wouldn't have happened."
6. When you have used an article put it back in its place; especially if it is one used by the family in common.
7. Remember that by your conduct persons judge of your home training and home influences.
8. Be careful to meet your engagements promptly.
9. Be punctual at meals.
10. Whatever is worth doing at all, is worth doing well.
11. Keep silence.

Dumplings with Royal Baking Powder

No dessert is more delicious, wholesome and appetizing than a well-made dumpling, filled with the fruit of the season. By the use of the Royal Baking Powder the crust is always rendered light, flaky, tender and digestible. Dumplings made with it, baked or boiled, will be dainty and wholesome, and may be eaten steaming hot with perfect impunity.

RECEIPT.—One quart of flour; thoroughly mix with it three teaspoons of Royal Baking Powder and a small teaspoon of salt; rub in a piece of butter or lard the size of an egg, and then add one large potato, grated in the flour; after the butter is well mixed, stir in milk and knead to the consistency of soft biscuit dough; break off pieces of dough large enough to close over four quarters of an apple (or other fruit as desired) without rolling, and lay in an earthen dish (or steamer) and steam until the fruit is tender. Bake if preferred.

In all receipts calling for cream of tartar and soda, substitute Royal Baking Powder. Less trouble, never fails, makes more appetizing and wholesome food and is more economical. Royal Baking Powder is specially made for use in the preparation of the finest and most delicate cookery.

If She Were a Man.

If I were a man.

I should be either a doctor or a soldier. The courage that belongs to them makes these two the grandest professions in the world. True they contradict each other; one kills, and the other cures, yet both are noble.

I should not be in haste to marry. It is the one step in life that makes or mars, and to escape from it but two gates are open: Death and Disgrace.

I should consider 30 a good age for matrimony. Before that a man is a mere boy; after that, for the next 20 years, he is at his best, if there is a best in him. At 50 if unmarried, he must be regarded as a confirmed old batchelor, and had better remain so.

I should cultivate the society of women of the world. Fashionable women, women of good character and form, whatever has been, or may be, said against them have a refining influence. They subdue the moral odor of the stable and help to check the growing inclination to irreverence in ordinary conversation that even decent men are prone to be in this present generation.

I should make it a point not to scold my servants. One should never deprive the woman one has married of the chief joy of her existence!

I should regard courage as the highest gift of God, but I should not consider prowess in mere field sports as constituting that great gift. To conquer and slay the lower animal should not be taken as the end and aim of life. There must be something beyond it. To excel in moral courage, to be able to control one's self, to kill the evil in one's inner nature, to be able to defy society for a principle, is surely a greater triumph than to stand with one's foot upon the body of one's country's foe!

If I were a man I should count myself blessed indeed!

But Providence has ordained it otherwise for I am

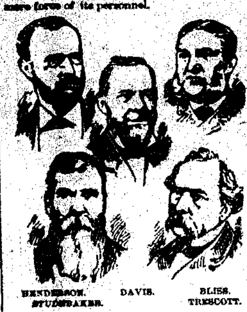
AMERICAN CONFERENCE.

NORTH AND SOUTH AMERICA'S REPRESENTATIVES IN CONVENTION.

Eminent Spanish-Americans, with Senor Romero, Mexican Minister, at Their Head—Eminent Americans Who Will Confer with Them.

Were other noteworthy characteristics wanting, the Pan-American congress at Washington would be a notable body by the mere force of its personnel.



HENDERSON. DAVIS. BLISS.
STUDEBAKER. TRESCOTT.

Most of the South American representatives are either now prominently identified with their respective governments or have occupied high official positions in the past.

Senor Matias Romero, who, with Dr. J. N. Navarro, will represent the Mexican government, is perhaps better known in this country than any of his colleagues. He is at present the Mexican minister at Washington.

Senor Jeronimo Lelaya, representing Honduras, and Felix C. C. Zegarra, representing Peru, are comparatively new men in their relations with the United States.

Senor Alejandro Urbanoja, also named by Venezuela as a delegate, is not over 30 years of age. His profession is the law, and in it he has already made his mark. He resides at Caraccas, and there edits La Union Democratica, the organ of the Young Men's Political society, of which he is president.

Senor Climaco Calderon is the Colombian consul general at New York, and has held that position for five years past. When he was appointed he was 30 years old.

Dr. Juan Francisco Velardo, who will represent Bolivia, is the present envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of his country at Washington.

Councillor Lafayette Rodrigues Pereira, of the Brazilian delegation, is a man of about 60 years of age. He was the prime minister of his government, was a member of the arbitration court which Brazil sent to Chili, and has held various other important positions.

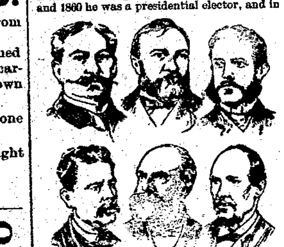
Senor Vincente G. Quesada, who is one of the three delegates from the Argentine Republic, is the minister of that country at Washington. He is about 55 years old, and prior to his appointment as minister, some five years ago, had filled several high positions at home. He has just returned from a visit to Buenos Ayres.

Charles R. Flint, of New York, who is one of the ten delegates on behalf of the United States, is peculiarly qualified for the position. He was born in Thomaston, Me., in 1850, and early in his youth entered the Spanish-American trade, becoming a principal in his father's house on attaining his majority. In 1874 he made a tour of South America, and again in 1876 visited the west coast of that country. In 1884 he made a trip to the east coast of South America. He was appointed Chilian consul at New York in 1877, and during the absence of the Chilian minister, attended to the business of the legation. For several years he was the Nicaraguan consul at New York, and in the absence of the minister negotiated, in behalf of Nicaragua, with the concessionaries of the Nicaragua canal.

Mr. Flint is a member of the firm of Flint & Co., which carries on a general merchandise business and also conducts the extensive ship building business established by his father at Bath, Me., in 1840. He is a director of the National Bank of the Republic, vice president of the United States Electric Light company, a director of the Ohio and Mississippi railroad, and is identified with many other large corporations. To his comprehensive business knowledge and thorough acquaintance with South America and South American trade, Mr. Flint adds the mastery of the Spanish language.

Cornelius N. Bliss, the other New York delegate, is one of the most prominent merchants of the metropolis. He is on the shady side of fifty, has for years been the senior member of Bliss, Fabyan & Co., the wholesale dry goods merchants, and has a thorough acquaintance with that business and its adjuncts. Mr. Bliss is a director and official of dozens of large corporations, and up to a recent date was chairman of the New York state Republican committee.

John B. Henderson, of Missouri, is one of the ablest lawyers in the west, and is particularly qualified to frame resolutions or draft laws for the congress. He was born near Danville, Va., in 1826, but after his admission to the bar removed to Missouri, where he has since lived. At the age of 30 he was sent to the state legislature, and in 1857 framed the Missouri banking and railroad laws. In 1856 and 1860 he was a presidential elector, and in



QUESADA. CARNEGIE. FLINT.
ZEGARRA. ESTEE. LELAYA.

1862 was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of United States Senator Trusten Polk. He was elected for the full term of six years in 1863. In 1867 he was sent as a commissioner to treat with the hostile Indians, and in 1875 was appointed assistant United States district attorney to prosecute internal revenue frauds.

William Henry Trescot, of South Carolina, was born in Charleston in 1822. He graduated at the college of Charleston in 1840, was admitted to the bar in 1843, and in 1852 became secretary of the United States legation at London. In 1860 he was appointed assistant secretary of state, but resigned when his state seceded from the Union. He occupied a seat in his state legislature in 1862, 1864 and 1866. When John L. Petigrew was engaged in preparing the code of laws for South Carolina he retained Mr. Trescot as his assistant, and that gentleman was likewise honored by being chosen to represent his state at Washington when the reconstruction measures were under consideration.

In 1877 he was counsel for the United States before the fishery commission which met at Halifax, and in 1880 he was one of the [illegible] plenipotentiaries who went to China to revise the existing treaties. The following year he was selected by Secretary [illegible] [illegible] ents, and in 1852 he accompanied Gen. Grant to Mexico for the purpose of negotiating a new treaty. Since then he has practiced law in Washington. He is the author of a number of works on diplomacy, and is considered to be better versed in South American diplomacy than any man in this country.

Andrew Carnegie is, as everybody knows, the millionaire manufacturer of Pennsylvania. He controls the largest iron manufacturing plant in the world, is widely known for his liberal benevolence, and has made a study of economics. He was born in Dunfermline, Scotland, in 1835, and was the son of poor parents. In 1848 his family removed to this country, and the son found employment at tending a stationary engine, near Pittsburg, Pa. In turn he became a telegraph operator, manager of the Pittsburg division of the Pennsylvania road, the part owner of a rolling mill, and the owner of the largest iron manufacturing plant in the world operated under single control. He has interested himself in literature, at one time owned eighteen English newspapers, and has published several works on economics and travels. His public benevolences in the last decade amount to over $1,000,000.

Henry G. Davis, of West Virginia, has represented that state in the United States senate, and is widely interested in various business enterprises.

Morris M. Estee, of California, is a prominent lawyer of the Pacific slope, and has been conspicuously identified with the Republican party for many years.

Clement Studebaker, of Indiana, T. Jefferson Coolidge, of Massachusetts, and John F. Hanson, of Georgia, are all prominent manufacturers, and respectively represent the manufacturing industries of the west, east and south.

THE SITE FOR THE FAIR.

Where New York Will Hold Her Big Show If She Has One.

The accompanying views of the site chosen by the New York World's fair site committee are from sketches made especially for this paper, and give a very good idea of the nature of Riverside and Morningside parks respectively. Of course, the effect of the choice has already been to increase the valuation of real estate in near by parts of the big city. Equally, of course, the real value of this "boom" depends upon whether the New Yorkers are going to stop quarreling about the site long enough to raise a few dollars and go ahead and hold a fair at all or not.

RIVERSIDE PARK.

No matter what individual opinions may be held as to which city should have the fair, all will agree that the vilification of rival cities in the fight is extremely foolish, while internal wrangles such as are going on in New York are disgraceful, not only to the metropolis, but to all America.

THACKERAY.

THOMAS HUNTER of Cayuga county was nominated by the Republicans for Senator of the the 26th district at the convention held in Ithaca yesterday. Mr. Hunter is the senior member of the Hunter-Comstock Arms Co.

A DEMOCRATIC editor gives way to a Republican editor as postmaster at Syracuse. Hon. Carroll E. Smith of the Journal succeeding editor Northrup of the Courier. The appointment was made by President Harrison last week.

A BATCH of many thousand religious fanatics known as Millerites have it that the world is coming to an end on Friday next. If they are right Ed. Cole will not be elected coroner That seems to be about the only thing that will prevent it.

GENERAL G. R. Raum of Illinois was on Saturday last appointed by President Harrison as Commissioner of Pensions in the place of Corporal Tanner. G. A. R. men in this section are greatly surprised at the appointment as they expected that Maj. T. L. Poole of Syracuse would be the man chosen.

THE word pan is a Greek word meaning all. Used in connection with the word American it signifies, at this particular time, a scheme, or perhaps better, a desire to unite all the republics of North and South America in a mutually advantageous commercial relationship; a commercial confederacy, as it were. The Pan American Congress is supposed to be all American in its aims and purposes. It is supposed to be inspired by a common purpose.

THE following are the tickets plac- in the field by the Republicans and Democrats and are those on which the citizens of this county will have an opportunity to vote:

A Great Surprise

is in store for all who use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, the great guaranteed remedy. Would you believe that it is sold on its merits [illegible]

[illegible] but simply to substitute for the different taxes now levied, a tax upon land values only. This would exempt the taxpayer from taxes upon everything that his labor had produced. All personal property, factories, shops, stores, houses, barns, fences and other improvements on land would be free from taxation.

This would place the poor on an equality with the rich as far as taxation is concerned. The present system does not do this as it taxes the poor man and the man of moderate means much more in proportion to their ability to pay than it does the rich man. The land value taxation instead of ruining farmers would greatly benefit them by making their taxes less than under the present system, and also encouraging them to make further improvements without being fined for it as at present.

In fact the only people who could complain of the land value tax would be those who were holding unimproved land for a rise in value, and land speculation ought to be discouraged.

That land value is the most appropriate subject for taxation is evident from the fact that land values are not created by the individual land owner but by the people as a whole, and this value should therefore be taken for the expenses of government which is for all, before any one is called upon to contribute from individual earnings.

The single tax idea is not a vagary from the mind of a crank, as many are led to think who gain their only knowledge of it from newspaper articles similar to the one in the Patriot, but is a logical and consistent scheme of taxation, and numbers among its adherents some of the best informed public and business men in Europe and the United States.

Believing it to be the most just and perfect system of taxation, I ask all who may read this to study the works in which this system of taxation is explained, so that they may be able to judge for themselves of its merits.

In The Field.

We publish to-day the first of a series of advertisements of one of the largest advertising houses of the country, under yearly contract and the line of fine work of which this one is the initial display, will wear an old, familiar face to a large majority of our readers. Those not familiar with such kindly announments, may be considered as belonging to the uninitiated, who in due time, for their own future welfare, will become acquainted with the merits of so good a thing, so universally known. Annually, with a system like the rising and setting of the sun, these greetings, which bear health and happiness to the people, make their show. It is a good sign of the standing and influence of a paper—if we may say so—to have its columns graced by the attractions of such reliable matter and to have dealings with a house of such a character. With the newspaper faternity such transactions are known to be always attended by fairness, promptness and unfailing integrity on the part of the proprietors towards the publishers. Nor do the mutual relations between the two end with these considerations. It is a pleasure and satisfaction always to know that what they say as advertisers, is as reliable as their word of honor, which, in turn, is as sound as gold. We give place therefore and make our column-rules a fame to the picture of the good, old monk and to all that may be said in behalf of the remedy of pain St. Jacobs Oil, with a surety of its truth and with a surety of the virtues of the compound. Their advertising this season is beyond their standard, always of the strongest and most effective kind and the testimonials for the year 1889 to the efficacy of this far-famed preparation, are as convincing as ever.

Lazy Business Men.

B. L. Hoard, writing to the National Journalist, says:—"Patrons of every kind of business have a right to demand that business men use means convenient to such patrons to inform them of what is for sale. We have solicited advertisements enough to know that quite often business men would advertise largely if they were not too lazy mentally (and they know it, too,) to work their advertising space and get the legitimate benefits. A $100 advertisement well attended to will make a difference from $1,000 to $2,000 in the gross receipts of a concern doing, say, $10,000 worth of business a year. In many places of 3,000 inhabitants there are merchants doing double this amount of business in that time. But with the average mercantile profit of 25 per cent., a difference of only $400 in the gross receipts would return the $100 to the advertiser's pocket. So that it is clearly not only slightly a matter of dollars and cents paid the newspaper that raises a wall between two that should come together, but rather a mental laziness that beclouds the brain of many otherwise capable business men, and instead of keeping even with the times, or a little ahead, they merely drift along, sometimes pretty close to the rear."

It Pays to Advertise.

Mr. Carson Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. found a purse containing a considerable sum of money yesterday. He called at THE TIMES office and ordered a notice inserted announcing his find. This morning the loser called and ordered a notice inserted of the loss. The lost is found but the loser is lost, as the party failed to leave their name. We still believe, however, that it pays to advertise. [illegible]

[illegible] Brown's Sarsaparilla. Mr. C. S. Cunningham of Lowell, Me., under date of May 10, says: "My wife had a tumor which extended from her left to right side across her breast as large round as my wrist and very painful. General health poor, kidneys troubled. Her doctors advised her to have it cut out, but she concluded to try Brown's Sarsaparilla and to-day is a well woman." Such testimony coming as it does unsolicited speaks volumes for the curative powers of

OBITUARY.

Dr. S. D. Andrews of West Granby, died last evening at 7:30 of malignant erysipelas, after an illness of only five days. The doctor was a very highly respected citizen and widely known in this part of the county. He had been in the active practice of his profession at West Granby for over forty years and had been very successful. He leaves a wife and two sons. In politics he was a Democrat and was once nominated for Supervisor. He never however held public office. Our informant states that he was too honest a man.

Cicero Hancock died at his home on Utica near Fifth street on Tuesday, Oct. 22, 1889, in the 87th year of his age. He was born at Martha's Vineyard, Mass., and came to this county when quite young. He has resided in Oswego county most of his life and has lived in Fulton for the past 12 years. A wife and one brother survive him and five daughters, Mrs. Chas. Rice of Cambridge, N. Y., Mrs. A. Bristol of this village, Mrs. H. H. Merriam, Mrs. James Langdon and Mrs. W. Darling of Oswego Falls. The funeral services will be held at the M. E. church to-morrow at 2 p. m. Interment at Granby Centre.

James M. Hill died at his home corner of Fifth and Ontario streets, on Saturday, Oct. 20, at the age of 70 years. The deceased was well known in Fulton and had lived here for twenty-three years. Funeral services, conducted by the Rev. W. Dempster Chase were held at the M. E. church yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Adella Cook, wife of Henry Cook of Mexico, committed suicide by hanging herself to the bed-post in her room yesterday forenoon. She has been insane for some time and once before attempted suicide by drowning.

Edward French, an employe of the Cortland stove works, died last week of blood poisoning. He was injured at the stove works here about a year ago and his death is the result of the injuries then received, although it was considered that he had fully recovered. The remains were brought to Fulton for burial.

Presenting a Flag.

On Thursday of last week a reunion of prisoners of war occurred at Springfield, Ill., at which an event happened which is of interest to many Fultonians. It was the presentation of a flag by Mr. Geo. A. Sanders. On the platform were Gov. Fifer, Secretary of State Pearson, Gen. Powell and other prominent men. In concluding the presentation speech Mr. Sanders related how he came to purchase the flag and how he came to make the presentation. "My only son," said he, "a little over twenty years old, was drowned in the Sangamon river a year ago last July. Before his death he became interested in the campaign, joined a club and was present when Gov. Fifer opened the campaign in this State. He wanted a flag to put over our home, and I commissioned him to get a flag. He bought it. It was never used but once. When I heard that this flag staff had been put up, I concluded that I could put the flag to no better use than to let it float over the home of the immortal liberator, Abraham Lincoln. (Applause.) I therefore present it to you to be raised on this staff." (Great applause.)

A man who has practiced medicine for 40 years ought to know salt from sugar; read what he says:

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen:—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours Truly,
L. L. GORSUCH, M. D.,
Office, 215 Summit St.

We will give $100 for any case of Catarrh that can not be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally.

Cheese Market Report.

(From the Utica Herald.)

AT UTICA.

UTICA, Oct. 21.

It was a dull and weak market to-day, and salesemen were at first inclinded to go home with out selling. But they finally thought better of it, and some even went so far as to close out all of their Septembers. They came to the conclusion that cheese would be no higher this fall and there was no use in holding any longer. It certainly does look somewhat like a tired market, but we suspect that buyers hope to get at least a commission out of their cheese this week. No prices were offered till late in the day, and nobody seemed anxious to get the stock. Some cheese is understood to have been sold at a little above quotations, including small sizes and white stock.

Following is our usual table:

Lots	Boxes	Price.
7	580	9¾
43	5,006	9⅞
10	640	9⅞
40	2,810	9⅞
30	2,058	9⅞
12	1,039	10c.
4	400	p t.
151	12,590
Farm dairy	1,486
Total	14,076

Ruling price 9⅞c. Transactions one year ago 10,886 boxes, ruling 9¾c. Two years ago 10,986 boxes, ruling 10⅛c.

Sales of butter amounted to 48 packages creamery at 22@25c. Bulk at former price.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Oct. 21.

Cheese—The market here was in sympathy with the market in New York last week, and prices are about one-fourth cent lower than those of last week. A few factorymen who sold off pretty close decided not to sell any to-day, but as a rule salesmen let liberal amounts go forward. They met with little encouragement from buyers as to any improvement in prices in the future. Quality of stock is running very fine, and feed is still quite fair. Factories are now sold off to about September 25 on the average.

Following is the list of transactions:

[illegible]

[illegible] Councillors' Column [illegible] in the Councillors' Column on the Senate and the election of [illegible] Other subjects of like interest will come before this convention and it is hoped that the result of the deliberations will be of universal value to humanity.

The personnel of the conference is far above the average. Every nation has sent men of marked ability. England, which has the largest interest at stake, is represented by a half dozen of her most noted naval experts, together with representatives of her merchant marine. Our share of foreign commerce is so small that we might give to ourselves credit for a magnificent and disinterested regard for the welfare of others.

The handshaking and receiving done by the President during one day is enough to entitle him to his salary without further work of any sort. On yesterday he granted private and special interviews to Senator Quay U. S. Treasurer Huston, Collector Brady, of Va. Gen. Dan Sickles, Justice Miller, of the Supreme Court, Commodore Walker, Rear Admiral Walker and Congressman Kinsey. At noon the Marine Congress was received and at one o'clock there was a public reception, all the members of a big Pennsylvania excursion being in the throng. As he was about to escape from this duty, the President was called out on the portico to review the procession of local colored Odd Fellows, who by zealous management were enabled to prolong the torture to an unendurable length. The President finally escaped to his private apartments to lunch and just as he was vigorously wiping Baby McKee's face with his bib, the committee representing the Newsboy's National Association were announed. The ring leader had an address concealed on his person, which, after reading he carefully handed to Mr. Harrison as being a choice bit of good penmanship and bad English that he might like to place on his private files.

After this amount of receiving the President is supposed to return to his study and there in the silent watches of the night help Lijo Halford write the message to Congress. In the meantime should a committee of Kickapoo Indians or the representatives of the United Female Base ballists drop around after supper he will find pleasure in placing his good right hand on exhibition and allowing people to skake it in a vice or between their teeth or otherwise as may occur to them as desirable.

Senator Quay is not pleased at dropping out of sight in this Administration, and is said to have so told President Harrison in no measured terms. On Wednesday Mr. Quay has other grievances besides the Philadelphia postoffice appointment—in fact he has dozens of them. The latest is the appointment of a revenue inspector at the request of Russell Harrison and in the face of Mr. Quay's earnest opposition. Mr. Quay is said to have told the President that if he persisted in ignoring the friends who had elected him he would go before no convention for a second term. He added that he would withdraw his support in such an event.

The Pan-American visitors, as might have been expected and as is made evident in the report of Mr. Curtis to Secretary Blaine, are already surfeited with banquets and displays. Already they are unanimous in their resolve to see no more factories. The high living, easy going South Americans are easily satisfied, not to say wearied, by the display they saw in New England. Mr. Blaine favors an almost entire withdrawal from banquets for two weeks in order to give the guests a chance to recuperate. He thinks that a sad mistake has been made in supposing that the affair was properly a gigantic wining and dining.

Postmaster General Wanamaker's forthcoming report will make several recommendations of importance. He will ask that the telegraph system of the country be absorbed by the postoffice department and that the free delivery system be extended to all cities doing a business of $8,000 per annum. The construction of government buildings in all cities of the second class as designated in postoffice parlance.

OF TIME to look elsewhere for DRY GOODS OR CLOTHING. Every effort has been made to include in our varied assortment only RELIABLE GOODS, which shall be most valued when they have stood the thorough test of us and the wearer. Our efforts in this direction have been thoroughly successful—no better values being within the purchasing power of money, for we have carried into EVERY DEPARTMENT the same purpose of making it the BEST AND MOST COMPLETE IN ITS LINE. In varity our stock shows an assortment that gives the buyer the widest scope of choice in any and every department, so that no reasonable want can fail of being supplied from our counters. One feature of our store which will commend itself to all classes is the "PRICE FEATURE." Our large stock demands that WE MAKE NO EXTRAVAGANT FIGURES if it is to be sold promptly, but leaving this out of the question we have marked our goods with such LOW PRICES as will commend them at a glance to all BARGAIN LOVERS. BARGAINS will be the watchword of our Stores during the season and we intend to give the word BARGAIN A NEW MEANING FOR BUYERS by giving high values at prices that will be at once acknowledged as the VERY EXTREME OF LOWNESS. We ask such to come and do us the justice to look. If you need anything in the line of Men's, Boys' and Children's Clothing and Custom Tailoring we know we can do better by you than any one else.

The Universalist Revival Meetings.

To the Citizens of Fulton.—I wish to call your attention to the series of Gospel Meetings now being held for two weeks in the Universalist church. They are not held for sectarian purposes but for the salvation of men. With the faith which we hold, of the universal brotherhood of man, it is evident that they are held for you, for everybody, pointing you to higher aims, higher life, higher glory in the name of the christian religion; in the name of Christ Jesus the Lord. Let no difference of mere opinion keep you away. Let no differance of opinion put a stumbling block in the way of their success, "lest" as it was said in the apostolic times, "haply ye be found fighting against God." The marvelous singing, the earnest preaching, exhortations and prayers for the salvation from sin now is a marked feature in the movement. This is the work, the wish, the object; so come in and help us and get helped yourselves. Sing praises all ye people.

B. BRUNNING, Pastor.

It is but one of the many attractive improvements that have recently been made by the firm. Letters of the same design will be placed on the Hunter-Comstock Arms Co's. building.

A paper must receive patronage in order to be first-class, and first-class patronage consists in a man's paying his subscription in advance. In nearly every town there are people who are willing to lend their moral support to a newspaper, but in a final windup moral support doesn't pay for print, paper or ink. There are people who come in and subscribe to help you along, but who fail to think that unless they pay for their paper they are asking you to lend them so much cash.—Exchange.

A personal letter from the editor of the Baldwinsville Gazette to the editor of THE TIMES, received this morning pronounces Prof. Reno's entertainments first class in every particular. He say: "The Professor appeared there Monday evening to a house packed to the doors with our best people. He can and will perform more even than he advertises and deserving all the good things that can be said of him". This is a good recommendation.

Rumors go out concerning the R. & O. mills that have absolutely no foundation, where they originate is always a mystery. Orders on hand are almost a guarantee that the mills will run steadily until April 1, 1890, as suggested by the assignees in their circular to creditors which was printed in full in THE TIMES last week. On that date the mills will probably be sold and Mr. Juilliard will doubtless be the purchaser. It is not looked upon as probable that the mills will close even when the sale takes place.

The leader, Mr. Redfield, made some very helpful and excellent points in his short address, and each one left feeling that a pleasant and profitable hour had been spent. We were much encouraged by the presence of three of the village pastors. Their words of cheer and counsel are always timely. The meeting next Sunday will be led by one of our young men whose heart is also thoroughly engaged in this work for his fellow young men. Brief addresses are expected from three or four others and music and singing will be specially attractive. Many new faces were among us last Sabbath and to these we extend a hearty invitation to come again, as, also, to one and all, strangers and friends—all are welcome. We have had a few young men apply to us for suitable boarding places. Any who have vacancies either for board or rooms, or both, and will call and leave particulars, we will be pleased to put the names upon our list, and you thereby help to increase our usefulness. We would be glad to give any aid possible to young men who may be in search of employment and to employers who may be in need of help. Two or three have been assisted lately, but we wish to extend the usefulness of this department, so all are invited to use our lists.

The sale of tickets for the Y. M. C. A. lecture course which began Monday morning at Watson's drug store indicates popular interest and a purpose on the part of the people to heartily sustain the excellent entertainments offered. On account of the very low price of season tickets there must be a very general response on the part of the residents of Fulton and Oswego Falls to make this course a financial success. The experiment of furnishing first-class entertainments at a very low price is being tried, and if not successful this year will not be undertaken again in a long time. If you have not already purchased tickets and secured reserved seats for Dr. Riggs' lecture Nov. 1st, do not fail to call at once at Watson's or procure them from the committee of ladies who may call upon you.

Honors Easy.

The date was Oct. 16th, the place the fair grounds, the event occurred as the sun was sinking to its rest. The grounds were not crowded with people, in fact no one was there but the participants and one other, who acted as starter, referee, coacher, time keeper and audience.

The occasion was to decide who was the champion heel and toe walker in the Fulton Savings Bank building, possibly in the corporation, maybe in the county and for aught we know in the state. The contestants were W. J. Lovejoy and W. S. Royce and the way they trampled the dust around the race course is reported as being fine—very fine. The distance to be covered was two and one-half miles and it looked to the referee as lap after lap was made that it might result in a dead heat. At the home stretch however the representative of the Citizens' Bank forged ahead and passed under the wire one-half minute ahead of the Insurance Agent having made the 2½ miles in 28½ minutes.

P. S. We hope you will not say anything about this race as it was a private affair and the referee was pledged to secrecy.

C. B. Ryan of Ingersoll, Ont., representing a Canadian cheese syndicate, is in town. He is taking options for cheese factories and claims to be meeting with good success. It is claimed to be the purpose of the syndicate to buy up the factories in Oswego, Jefferson, Lewis, St. Lawrence and Oneida counties, and to manufacture and sell cheese as it is done at present.

The many friends in this vicinity of Miss Alice Youngs of Toronto, Ont., will be pleased to learn that she is in a fair way of recovery from her long illness. Over a year ago she was very sick with typhoid fever. Inflamation of the peritoneum set in and it became chronic. Some ten days ago Dr. C. M. Lee went there and performed a delicate surgical operation with most favorable results.

The meetings at the Universalist church are certainly of great interest to those who go there. Stanford Mitchell the singer charms every one who hears him, by his power and pathos. A profound christian spirit seems to pervade the very atmosphere during the services, and with the pastors earnestness and enthusiasm and the help of Rev. Ure Mitchell of Cortland, and Rev. Towsley of Oswego, the series of meetings must prove a success for good.

A UNFORTUNATE FAMILY.

Michael Brady of Oswego Falls Killed by Falling From a Canal Boat.

About four o'clock Monday afternoon Michael H. Brady of Oswego Falls age 19 years was killed by falling from a canal boat at the box factory dock. The particulars of the sad affair are as follows:

The boat belonging to William Hennessy of Oswego had been unloaded of its timber onto the dock at the box factory and the crew were invited to the Windsor House on Wall street where they were treated to beer. Brady had not assisted in the work on Monday but had on previous occasions, so was invited to join the party. On leaving the hotel the driver asked Brady to go and assist him in getting the boat from the channel out into the canal. This was about four o'clock. The driver took a position on the stern of the boat and Brady went toward the bow. The boat was pushed away from the dock and striking the stone wall which separates the canal from the channel Brady was thrown over backwards striking his head on the stones and then falling into the water. The driver rushed to the place where he had fallen and hooked into his clothing with a pike pole. Assistance was near at hand and Brady was drawn into the boat. Dr. Marsh was the first physician to reach the scene of the accident. At the inquest he stated that on examination he could detect no action of the heart. He discovered a small sized deep cut in the head, and in his opinion the skull was fractured by coming in contact with the stone wall—death resulting from that. Coroner C. J. Vowinkle was telegraphed for and on his arrival a jury consisting of H. C. Gardner, Abram Rosenbloom, Smith Davis, G. H. Salmon, C. S. Murphy and Frank Keenan, was empaneled, and after viewing the remains they adjourned until Tuesday at 9 o'clock. On that morning witnesses testified giving particulars substantially as given above. The jury rendered a verdict of accidental death.

Violent deaths have been numerous in this family, the grandfather of the young man killed Monday, Thomas Dwyer, was killed on the D. L. & W. road some eight years ago near Baldwinsville. An uncle, Daniel Dwyer, was killed by the cars at Cleveland, Ohio, less than a year ago, and a brother was killed in New York last Spring.

The funeral of the unfortunate victim of Monday was held at the Catholic church this forenoon at 10 o'clock.

The trustees elected the following officers: President, George P. Folts of Herkimer; first vice president, George C. Sawyer, Syracuse; second vice-president, A. W. Goodale, Watertown; secretary, W. R. Fitch, Lowville; treasurer, O. P. Hadcock, Watertown.

Reno at the Opera House.

Prof. Reno, the Prestidigitatorial wonder and Ventriloquist, will give two entertainments at the opera house this week on Thursday and Friday evenings. He comes highly recommended. The Springfield, Mass. Daily News says:

"Prof. Reno, the World's Greatest Illusionist, is drawing immense audiences each evening and giving satisfaction to everybody. He surpasses any artist in his line who ever appeared here; many of his experiments seem to border on the supernatural, such as lifting a heavy piano by one finger, and causing tables and chairs to float, without support, through space. He is a marvel."

They say there is no truth in poeso the following from an Exchange is run in prose:

He sat in his door at noonday, lonely and glum and sad; the flies were buzzing about him, led by a blue-winged flad. Not a customer darkened his portal, not a sign of business was there, but the flies kept buzzing about the old man's hair. At last in misery he shouted: "Great Scott!" I'm covered with flies," and the zephyr that toyed with his whiskers said: "Why don't you advertise?"

Rural New Yorker has never seen any chickens grow faster than the grade Dorkings. It also pronounces sheep handy animals for the market gardener to have. They eat the vines of Lima beans and peas, and substances other stock will refuse.

Fall Ploughing.

Except the lightest sandy soils, all level land will be benefited by Fall ploughing. When well ploughed, and to a proper depth, the ploughed ground will not wash even by the heavy Southern Winter rains. That the land will leach and lose its fertility is a mistake. Nothing will be lost in any case except the nitrogen, which exists in the form of nitric acid or the most soluble nitric salts, and, as a rule, there is no danger of this because of the almost entire absence of this form of nitrogen in the land. On the contrary, it is for the purpose of developing this scarce plant-food in the soil that Fall ploughing is desirable. The turning over of the soil aids in the change of the abundant inert nitrogen, which is mostly combined with the carbonaceous organic matter in the soil, into soluble nitrates, and this process goes on slowly during the Fall and early Spring, and where the ground is not frozen even during the Winter. Consequently the land is brought into a more fertile condition by the Fall ploughing, and, besides this gain, there is another of much importance—namely, the Spring work is forwarded so much and the crops may be put in so much earlier.—American Agriculturist.

The Timber Supply of New York State.

A New York statistician is responsible for the following: "The forest area of the State of New York, public and private property, comprises 88,000,000 acres—that is, over 25 per cent. of all lands. The highest annual capacity of the combined sawmills of this State is 2,700,000,000 feet, board measure. Cutting on the average from each acre of woodland one mature tree the annual yield would be 16,000,000 market logs, or 3,200,000,000 feet of lumber, board measure, allowing 200 feet, board measure, per log, which is 500,000,000 more than the capacity of our mills. Some authorities give the average yield of a tree of natural growth 500 feet, board measure, which would leave 5,300,000,000 feet for export or other purposes.

Salt for Dairy Cows.

Dairy cattle ought to have access to salt every day and salt should be added to all their stable feed. A series of experiments has convinced me that when cows are denied salt for a period of even one week, they will yield from 14½ to 17½ per cent. less milk, and that of an inferior quality. Such milk will, on an average, turn sour in twenty-four hours less time than milk drawn from the same or similar cows receiving salt, all other conditions of treatment being equal. —Prof. Robertson.

Did you ever ask a man the time just after he had inspected his watch and put it in his pocket? If so did you ever receive an answer before the man pulled it out and looked again. Just why it is that this is done would be difficult to explain, but if you will ask your friend to tell you the time the next time you observe him scrutinize his watch and snap the lid, you will find that he will take another look at the dial before giving an answer.—Cincinnati Times Star.

A Suitable Epitaph.

It has often been said that the chief characteristic of the epitaph is its lack of veracity, but it is perhaps better that it should err on the side of kindness rather than wound the living by a brutal truthfulness, as in the case of an inscription written for the tombstone of a lazy man by one who knew him well: "Asleep (as usual.)

[illegible] Senor Francisco Exchequren is a Castilian who came to Mazatlan many years ago, engaged in the importing business, gained a large fortune, and is now known as the Vanderbilt of the western coast of Mexico. He owns about half of Mazatlan's iron and cotton mills and millions of acres of good land. His greatest successes, however, have been in mining. He owns the rich Guadaloupe de los Reyes silver ledge near Cosala, 100 miles from the capital at Sinaloa, the Guadaloupan at Rosario, besides large interests in many others. The first-named mine is very old, having been worked for over 100 years. The other is comparatively new. These and others which he owns are producing large fortunes annually, estimated at from $100,000 to $1,000,000 each. The story of Monte Cristo seems to find a verification in the life of Senor Exchequren. The Senorita is a demi-blonde of 17, tall and willowy, with fair complexion and auburn hair. She gets her dresses from Worth, and her diamonds are the envy of the rich girls here. According to the custom of her nation, for her father is a native of old Spain, she is accompanied by a rather austere duenna who is always with her when she goes into the surf and even in her walks. This has caused much anguish among several prominent young men whose hearts the young lady has captured. Every day when she visits the beach there is a strife among her admirers as to who shall pay her the most attention. Senorita Exchequren will inherit one-third of her father's vast wealth, which makes her one of the richest girls on this side of the Atlantic. She expects to leave for the Paris Exposition in a few days.

[illegible] Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." AN ELECTRICAL FIGHT.

NEW YORK CITY THROWN INTO A PANIC BY A LINEMAN'S DEATH.

Past Events Have Shown That There Is Deadly Danger in the Wires, and the Public Demands That It Be Instantly Abated.

IN THE city of New York there is now in progress a grand triangular battle of law, science and popular indignation, which interests every city in the country, for every city has or hopes soon to have electric lights. New York has proved by horrible demonstrations that the system is very dangerous, and all other cities can well afford to wait till she finds the path of safety. She will soon do it, if it can be done, for the popular instinct of self preservation and the popular anger over recent deaths is bringing a pressure to bear which no officials can resist.

At noon one October day, as all the world knows by this time, Joseph Feeks, the lineman, was shocked, paralyzed and roasted to death at the corner of Centre and Chambers street, in the very heart of the business section. Thousands looked on and groaned in sympathy with his sufferings. And the tragedy was enacted in full view of the leading newspaper offices. If black fate had selected the spot for this electrical murder, with a special view to creating the greatest sensation and thus working up the people to fierce resolve, it could not have been better done. To add to the interest, the wife of Lineman Feeks was lying ill, and her child was born a few days later. Public sympathy took the form of a popular subscription. A box was fastened to the pole where he died and thousands of people contributed small sums to it. It was noted as a peculiarly affecting fact that hundreds of the poorest sort of people contributed pennies. Newsboys, bootblacks, street peddlers and mere infants gave their mites till the box was nearly filled with such coins, and the mite donations of the day amounted to $259.25. Other donations in petty sums have brought the popular relief fund above $1,000.

Every kind of organization took some kind of action. The labor orders especially passed indignant resolutions. Mayor Grant peremptorily ordered the electric power shut off until some scheme of safety could be devised, and for a night New York looked unnaturally dull. Then gas began to resume its old place; but the amount was scanty and the order went out that only private lights could blaze. Public places and many streets looked dismal, but soon many were heard to say that "but for the style of the thing we could get along just as well without the electric light if gas were plenty." Meanwhile the legal battle was found to be a very complicated affair.

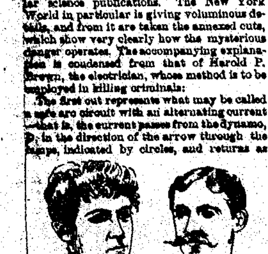
First, the board of electrical control, a new body, of which the mayor is ex-officio a member, decided on the subway question. Some time before the popular uprising a contract had been made with a subway company to prepare the tunnels or subways; the mayor wanted to hasten their completion by contracting with other companies, but the other members objected, and so nothing could be done till the law had decided the rights of persons. At the same time injunctions were issued by the courts, forbidding the mayor and all other persons to interfere with the poles. Some had been cut down. As the government of a rapidly growing city of 1,500,000 people is necessarily very complicated, and that of New York certainly not less so than is necessary, a mere detail of the legal actions and arguments would fill ten such columns as this.

The net result was to leave all poles and wires in position for the time being, but to shut off all currents, and so leave everybody safe and impatient till the courts can straighten out the tangled contracts and decide whether "vested rights" or "public policy" is to rule the issue. Also whether the "vested rights" have not been forfeited by failure to exercise "due diligence."

The scientific battle is scarcely less complicated, but New Yorkers are unanimous and emphatic in demanding that, if it cannot be shown to a certainty that perfect insulation can be secured or a perfectly safe subway system devised, then the companies must adopt the method admitted to be safe by all electricians, namely, low tension, let it cost what it may.

In the meantime the board of health, under its general power of removing whatever is dangerous, has opened a flank movement which is to be pushed, if the mayor is perpetually enjoined. The interval of waiting is filled with all sorts of suggestions and comments from all sorts of cranks and some electrical experts, whose articles make two or three of the New York papers look like popular science publications. The New York World in particular is giving voluminous details, and from it are taken the annexed cuts, which show very clearly how the mysterious danger operates. The accompanying explanation is condensed from that of Harold P. Brown, the electrician, whose method is to be employed in killing criminals:

The first cut represents what may be called a safe arc circuit with an alternating current—that is, the current passes from the dynamo, D, in the direction of the arrow through the lamps, indicated by circles, and returns as shown in the cut. The man standing on the ground cannot of course detach the current.



MR. AND MRS. FEEKS.

But the perfection of the circuit may be broken at any minute and at any point by a wire falling across it as in the second cut.

And here is where the earth as a receiver of electricity aids in the destruction. Electricity flies to the earth as water flows towards the sea. The wire lying across the circuit and absorbing part of the current, to use a popular rather than a scientific term, may run for miles and at some place a man may supply the connection with the ground as in the third cut. The man, of course, would be killed under those circumstances. Mr. Brown maintains that a ground connection at any point on an alternating arc circuit, as at G in the cut, can readily be detected at the dynamo station and located and removed.

Not so, he thinks, with an incandescent current, for the circuit is not complete. A diagram of an incandescent circuit of 1,000 volts is given in the fourth cut. The dynamo is at D, while C C C C designate the converters and L L L L the lamps. The wires start from the dynamo and end in space, while running from each wire are short wires which connect with the converters and these in turn with the lamps. The main wires carry a [illegible] current, but the converters, through [illegible] current is carried into buildings, [illegible] the voltage to a point of safety if [illegible]

[illegible]

Joseph Feeks. There were no telegraph wires crossed with the electric light wires anywhere in that vicinity, and for aught any one knows the contact may have been at the extreme end of the city. Mr. Brown adds: "You will perceive one of the telegraph wires runs to the ground, presumably at the Western Union office; another of the wires is crossed with a broken wire, which also crosses one of the electric light wires, while the second one forming the incandescent circuit is crossed by another wire leading to the earth. When Feeks grasped the wire leading to the ground at the Western Union office and allowed some other portion of his body to come in contact with the wire which was connected with the electric light circuit by the first broken wire, the lineman became a part of the alternating current circuit, and the current flowed through his body as indicated by the arrows."

Within three days after the death of Feeks a small army of men, directed by the board of electrical control, had examined all the main wires in the city, and reported defects of all kinds and in so many places that the citizens who read the report almost wondered that they were still alive. The mayor gave it as his opinion, from a summary of the reports, that there were at least 500 miles of wire which should be cut down at once, and one large section was cut with the consent of the company and assistance from its linemen. The public was also astonished to learn that the electric light companies had some 500 men at work repairing. As they had previously ignored all complaints and acted as if perfectly certain that their lines were thoroughly insulated, this practical confession to the contrary gave the case a bad look. So New York is still in a panic, and does not know whom to believe, and a loose piece of wire on the street is avoided as if it were a gigantic cobra.

Derivation of a Name.

"Gladys" is the Welsh form of Claudia, the feminine of the Latin Claudius. It probably means lame, "claudus," many of the Roman nomina being derived from personal peculiarities, often of a trivial description.

The New Commissioner of Pensions.

Green Berry Raum, who has been appointed United States commissioner of pensions, is a native of Golconda, Ills., and was born Dec. 3, 1829. He received a common school education, then studied law, and was called to the bar in 1853. In 1856 he removed with his family to Kansas, and affiliated with the Free State party. The next year he returned to Illinois, and settled in Harrisburg.

At the opening of the civil war he made his first speech as a war Democrat at Metropolis, Ills. He entered the army as major of the Fifty-sixth Illinois regiment, and was promoted to lieutenant colonel, colonel and brevet brigadier general. He was made brigadier general of volunteers in February, 1865, but resigned the commission in May. He served under Rosecrans in the Mississippi campaign of 1862. At Corinth he led the charge that broke the Confederate left and captured a battery. He was with Grant at Vicksburg, and was wounded at the battle of Missionary Ridge in November, 1863. During the Atlanta campaign he held the line of communication from Dalton to Acworth and from Kingston to Rome, Ga.
